CHICKEN FEED

By Alfred I. Tooke

When the prison gate clanged on him he was no longer a convict. Trusting but Bart Hackett again, one of the worst criminals in the country, according to the judge who had sentenced him. "The judge was right. Bart's next job was already planned.

That afternoon he slipped off the train at Arrowhead and set out on foot with steady strides towards the hills beyond the town. By dusk he reached an isolated shack surrounded by chicken-houses. This place was just as Danny Morton had described it, and Bart's eyes glinted wickedly at the change in the situation here.

Rock in the big house, Danny had showed Bart some of the letters his wife wrote. She was raising chickens while she waited for Danny to finish his time. Then they were going away to start a fresh start on the money she had saved. There were many hundreds and dollars according to the last letter.

"Chicken-feed! Bart muttered. "But it will take me to Chicago for that big car. I'll be riding in it."

A woman came out of the shack as he reached the gate.

"Mrs. Norton?" he asked assuming his best manners.

"Yes."

"Danny sent me."

"Danny? Won't you come in?"

Bart accepted the invitation and took the chair perfumed for him by a lawyer. I've found the witness that was missing when Danny was framed," he said.

"Then Sam has been located, but it will take money to get him here and reopen the case."

The woman quivered with eagerness. "How much?"

"A thousand dollars would start things." He paused as sunshine flashed in the woman's eyes. "Danny told me you had that much."

"But I got a letter from Danny last this morning," she said. "He didn't say anything about this. I'll write and ask him if—"

"No you won't." A vicious glint shone in Bart's eye as he leaped to his feet. So she hadn't going to give it up peaceably. Well, there was no time to waste if he was to catch that train out of Petchvale. In his crushing grip she was helpless. Gripping her apron of tie tied her hands to the back of the chair and her legs to the cross legs with it.

"Scream away!" he growled. "Nobody will hear you in the heart of the woods. Where's that thousand bucks?"

"I have no money."

"Yes you have. I saw these letters you wrote Danny."

"It's in the bank."

"Where's the bank-book, then?"

"I won't tell you."

"Because there isn't one. You told Danny you had it hidden." Bart glanced about him in the slowly thickening darkness. "Ha! Coal oil lamps. Candles! He lit two candles. From a corner he got a stack of old papers and scattered them about the floor. Then he sprinkled the coal oil from the lamps on the them, and on the furniture and the walls. This was one crime that could never be traced to him. Fire was a swell thing for destroying clues—and witnesses.

"Now tell me where that money is," he growled, "or I drop a match on these papers. See?"

The woman eyed him stubbornly. "I won't!" she persisted.

"I'll give you till you do," Bart snarled, and struck one of the candles, held it to her arm.

The woman screamed.

"Tell them!" Bart grunted savagely.

"It's in the big cardboar box under the chicken feed."

"Where's the chicken feed?"

"In that big wooden bin in the corner."

Eagerly Bart dashed to it and scooped up the grain. Finding both hands in the feed he gripped the box between his knees and the box seemed to be upside down, so he crushed his head through the flimsy card. Then a scream of sheer terror burst from him. For his hand had been seized in a fierce, bone-crushing grip from which he struggled in vain to free himself.

The woman laughed. A wrench at the chair-back and it came loose. A leg at the end of the chair and it parted from the legs. She kicked free from the apron strips binding her feet to the wooden chair. In the flame of a candle she held the clock that bound her wrists until it partly burned through. Then, as she pulled against it, it ripped and fell to the floor and she was free.

Triumphantly she eyed the struggling Bart. "Lucky thing I gave you the good chair and took the old one myself," she said. "Now I'll go to the nearest neighbor's and phone for the police. You'll wait here. That's a bear trap you're in. Don't move it. It'll be riveted to the box for just such an emergency.

She paused at the look of terror in Bart's pallid face. "Afraid, eh? Put it out! Quick!"

The woman shrugged, the smoulder in apron had reached the oil-sprinkled papers, and were licking eagerly towards the trapped man.

"Get me loose! Quick!" he screamed.

"I can't! Seizing a rug she beat at the flames frantically.

"You can't put it out!" Bart screamed. "Get me loose. Nobody could stand it. You can get out of the trap."

"It would take too long! Maybe I can put the flames out."

Bart groaned. It was he himself who had scattered that oil around. It was he who was to meet the fate he had intended for another. She could never put those flames out. One more frantic desperate effort he made to get free, wrenching fiercely at his imprisoned wrist; then his body sagged limply over the edge of the bin as he fainted from pain and terror.

When returning consciousness came to Bart, searing pains shot up his arms brought sudden remembrance of his plight. The flames hadn't reached him yet. He didn't hear them, nor feel their heat. He jerked his head around and found there was no flame—only piles of flour with which the woman had smothered them. But there was Bart lighted, he presently heard the roar of an approaching automobile.

"She's bringing the cops", he muttered. "And he trapped like a rat!"

With a screeching of brakes the car stopped outside. Then she door burst open and several men and the woman entered.

"There he is, sheriff!" the woman said. "I told you that bear trap would hold him."

"It's Bart Hackett himself!" the sheriff grunted. "Well, well! He came to get the chicken feed, but the chicken feed got him."

Bart shuddered. "Get me out of this trap, sheriff!" he pleaded. "And go easy. Both my wrists feel like they're broken."

The sheriff snorted. "You got a taste of your own medicine this time, Bart; he said. "Serve you like it!" Taking a scoop he began to shovel the chicken feed from around Bart's arms.

The woman nodded. "Guess I'll keep my money in a safer place after this," she said. "If it had got wet—"

"Bart would have gone with it," the sheriff grunted. "But it wouldn't have been any use to him where he went, and—"

Bart's going to be kept in a safer place, too!" he said.

..WEAK KIDNEYS..

Chatham, Ont. — "My little daughter, Linda, age 4, was troubled with weak kidneys. When she was on her feet much she used to have no control over the kidneys at all. She was restless and did not sleep well. She got little appetite and her appetite was so poor," said Mrs. A. Peterson of 112 Alfred St. "Less than two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets strengthened her kidneys wonderfully so that they now act in a normal way. She is no longer restless or nervous and her appetite is fine."

Faith Re-warded

Of faith I pray you freely give,
For through it only may you live.
—Mrs. Lightfoot.

The more Reddy Fox watched Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer the more certain he became that she had at least one baby hidden near, and probably two. Mrs. Lightfoot gave her precious secret away while at the same time carefully guarding it. That is, her actions told Reddy that there were babies but they didn't tell him where they were.

"If she had no babies she wouldn't be so nervous," thought Reddy. "There is nothing at this time of year for her to be fearful of for herself, so she is not. One need not watch her three minutes to know that. She is nervous because she is anxious, and she is anxious because she has babies and is afraid that something will happen to them. It is queer that I haven't found so much as a whiff of them. She certainly has hidden them well."

All this time Reddy had been clever enough to keep out of Mrs. Lightfoot's sight and also to avoid letting her get his scent. He knew that she didn't know that he was about and he didn't intend that she should know it. He was looking for the babies he at the same time kept watch of Mrs. Lightfoot, so as to always remain down wind from her.

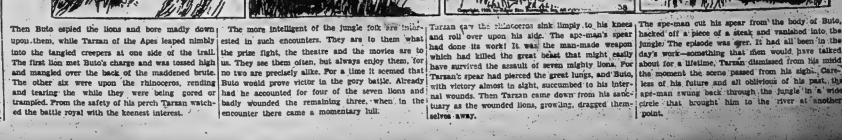
"Patience," said Reddy to himself "Patience is all I need and sooner or later Mrs. Lightfoot will show me where those babies are. All I want now is to find where they are. Then when she is away I can steal in and get one. I shouldn't care to be in her bad books, but I'm obliged to leave her babies for the greater part of the time. She never was far from them, hunting for food, and she seldom was close to them save when she fed them. She knew that she couldn't move about without leaving scent for interested noses to follow. She knew that on the other hand, the newly born fawns had no scent, so that in a way they were safer when she was away from them than when she was close to them. She knew, too, that if she should be discovered while most of her time was in one place suspicions would be aroused, but she had to depend largely on that faith—faith that those precious babies would get so they could run if human noisiness just where she left them. So long as they didn't run they had a fine chance that hungry eyes would discover them, for their little spotted coats were so blended with their surroundings that they appeared okay there and might actually have stepped on one before seeing it.

Mrs. Lightfoot had hidden those fawns cunningly. Yes sir, they were two. And they were not lying side by side. No indeed. They were fairly near together but as far apart as that. You see, Mrs. Lightfoot was smart enough to know that they were safer if separated. Two together would be much more likely to be seen than one baby by itself or herself. Then, too, if one should be found the other might not be.

If Reddy Fox could know how near to one or another of those hidden Deer babies he was more than once that night he would have less faith in that wonderful sense of his which he used and keen ears of his. He smelled nothing, saw nothing and heard nothing, and yet he actually sat down between those little fawns. They saw him and smelled him and were afraid, but they didn't move so much as a hair.



At last Reddy grew careless and left them.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Then Buto espied the lions and bore madly down upon them, while Tarzan of the Apes leaped nimbly into the tangled creepers at one side of the trail. The first lion met Buto's charge and was tossed high and mangled over the back of the maddened brute. The other six were upon the rhinoceros, rending and tearing the while they were being gored to trampled. From the safety of his perch Tarzan watched the battle royal with the keenest interest.

The more intelligent of the jungle folk are interested in such encounters. They are to them what the prize fight, the theatre and the movies are to us. They see them often, but always enjoy them, for no two are precisely alike. For a time it seemed that Buto would prove victor in the grey battle. Already had he accounted for four of the seven lions and badly wounded the remaining three, when in the encounter there came a momentary lull.

Tarzan saw the rhinoceros sink limply to his knees and roll over upon his side. The ape-man's spear had done its work! It was the man-made weapon which had killed the great beast that might easily have survived the assault of seven mighty lions. For Tarzan's spear had pierced the great lungs, and Buto, with victory almost in sight, succumbed to his internal wounds. Then Tarzan came down from his sanctuary as the wounded lions, growling, dragged themselves away.

The ape-man cut his spear from the body of Buto, hacked off a piece of a steak and vanished into the jungle. The episode was over. It had all been in the day's work—something that men would have talked about for a lifetime, Tarzan dismissed from his mind the moment the scene passed from his sight. Carnage of his fellow-man and all oddments of his past, the ape-man swung back through the jungle in a wide circle that brought him to the river at another point.

4 MARX BROTHERS GO TRULY COLLEGIATE IN NEW OFFERING

Plenty of New Laughs to Tickle the Film Fans

Having given the good old general public just about enough time to recover from successive polite bits like the Four Cossacks—pardon, the Four Marx Brothers—have gone to town again, this time in a concoction appropriately enough called "Horse Feathers," which opens at the Bells Saturday, for three days, matinee daily.

Neither in heaven nor on earth on land nor sea, is there anything even remotely resembling "Horse Feathers." It is just about the most insanely delirious howl that has ever hit the screen. It has neither rhyme nor reason to accept to make sublimeness laugh until the tears roll. You can take "Uncle" Wheeler's "Animal Crackers" and "Monkey Business," lay them end to end (if possible) and you still will be a million miles from approximating this mad pandemonium which some inspired soul out Hollywood way has fit to call "Horse Feathers."

This time the Marx-maniacs go collegiate—and with a vengeance. Groucho, B. N. (Doctor of Futurology), is the new president of Huxley College. He has accepted the post in order to get even with his twelfth year as a freshman at Huxley, out of college. Along with his way through college as the town dog-catcher, who every now and then neglected the dogs to pursue a trim ankle. Chico is an eccentric bootlegger (you, of course, know his) who plays college football and runs a speakeasy on the side, between them they make the picture just a long, loud college yell.

Then when Harpo, Zeppo and Chico say with the learned graybeards, they capers all over the campus. The dialogue is altogether insane, and the action keeps it company.

In addition to the Marxians, the cast includes pretty, blonde Thelma Todd as a misogynist-after-"college widow"-Mary Landau, in the role of Groucho's chief rival for Thelma's affections, while Pierce and Nat Pendleton, as two "pro" football "ringers" whom every play for rival Darwin as "smeared" by the Marx-men; Florine McKinney, Robert Greig and Robert Greig as the portly, dignified college president whose flowing beard prompts President Groucho to say, during the latter's "You were crazy to break up a matiness for a thing like that!"

Last Day For Artist

George Arliss carries on the Warner Bros. record of hit after hit with a magnificent portrayal in his latest Warner Bros. picture, "A Successful Calamity." There is no doubt in the mind of any member of the audience which saw the first performance of "A Successful Calamity" as to the picture's hit qualities. Comments overheard after the showing indicate that Arliss has once more captured the fancy of Belle Theatre patrons, where it is being shown tonight for the last time.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a wawk before supper and I found a dime, some chewing gum, pop, will you get me a wad of that and we'll go dime?

The habit of chewing gum is very indignified, besides being unbecoming to the average face, pop said. But it's cood. Pop put the dime his pocket and put one in a slot and pulled out a wad of gum that came out but 7 bonks of chewing gum instead of one. Gosh, pop, Gosh, pop, you got a bargain and saved a cent.

It's the first time in many years that I can remember getting something for nothing, pop said. Boys, it's not an unpleasant sensation, pop said. But not to prolong my robbing the man that runs the little cigar store, pop said, my best duty is to my conscience. I'll put the other cent on his newspaper stand, he said.

Which he did, and we kept on doing chewing gum and wawking for a while I said, Nay pop, the flavor is all gone out of the gum already, here's another slot machine, will you go in for a penny and get a fresh piece of gum?

With pop started to go, the cent going in perfect but no chewing gum romina out, and pop kept on pushing the button and smacking the slot machine on the side without anything happening, and the cigar store man came out to see what the noise was, pop said. This machine of yours seems to be stuck or something, I put a penny in and I can get any kandy bar.

It's not my machine, it belongs to the slot machine company, the man said. And he went back in his store like somebody had stepped on their own bunions, pop saying. Well then I'll get even with the slot machine company we'll got rite back to the first machine and put another cent in the slot that gives out an extra stick. By golikes we'll put about 6 in, he said.

And we went back to the other cigar store and put another penny cent in, and what did that machine do but stop working for, and pop hit it on top with his hand and banged it on the boom with his knee, and the man came out mad and told pop he wasn't any good—ball and we kept on going home, pop saying, The socialists are right, it's the consumer that pays.

More girls took up grouse hunting in Scotland this year than ever before.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN "CITY LIGHTS" A GREAT HIT

The Comedian's Greatest Gift to The Screen

Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights" is undoubtedly the greatest contribution to the screen of the beloved comedian since he became the world's idol. Recalled by public demand, and showing now at the Capitol along with Buck Jones in "Branded," "City Lights" when shown at the Capitol on its first visit last year, was a tremendous success.

For almost three years theatre goers had walled for "City Lights," to its fast-scoring, romantic comedy, with numerous dramatic highlights and touches of pathos none but the genius of Chaplin knows. There is not one word of dialogue used in the production but a delightful variation of music and sound is synchronized to the action throughout.

The story, by Chaplin, is one of life in a large city. It has great human appeal and has been brilliantly directed by the comedian. The characters are all natural and that which transpires rings with realism.

There are but three characters vital to the study. The leading male portrayal falls to the comedian and he presents himself in his familiar tramp, get-up. Of next importance is a flower girl who is blind; the other is an eccentric millionaire. Three other characters that figure prominently are the blind girl's grandmother, played by Florence Lee; the millionaire's butler, portrayed by Allan Garcia, and a prizefighter, enacted by Hank Mann.

A new personality comes to the screen in Virginia Cherrill, the leading woman. She portrays the flower girl. Her performance is excellent and she gave every evidence of a bright future in the films. Miss Cherrill is a young woman of unusual beauty, with much charm. Her work showed much grace and ease and she is certain to win favor immediately.

Harry Myers is delightful as the eccentric millionaire, a fine performance in "City Lights" as Charlie's pathetic pantomime. Hank Mann caught full the funniest of all events ever included in any motion picture.

It is understood that Chaplin worked almost three years making "City Lights" and that the production cost a good $1,500,000 before he finally completed his work. It will be a long time before its spell leaves you.

Performances

Continuous performances today and Saturday at the Capitol commence at 2.45, 7.15 and 9.30. Patrons are advised to be early in the evenings.

PRESIDENT HOOVER WILL NOT ATTEND SERIES

Washington, Sept. 22—(AP)—After attending the last three world series, President Hoover yesterday let it be announced that he would not be present at any of the games between the Chicago Cubs and the New York Yankees.

There had been reports that Mr. Hoover would attend the opening game of the current series at New York on Sept. 28 but Theodore Joslin, one of his secretaries, told newspapermen that he would not.

Mr. Hoover travelled to Philadelphia for at least one game of the 1929, 1930 and 1932 baseball classics.

MAY ARREST W. I. COSGRAVE

Former President Alleged to Have Attacked Valera Gov't.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Sept. 23 (AP).—A possibility that former President William T. Cosgrave of the Irish Free State may be arrested and tried for his platform attacks on the De Valera Government, was suggested today by Cosgrave's supporters.

A speech which he made recently in Galway especially angered the government, these sources said, and ex-President De Valera's newspaper, the Irish Press, to warn the former President if he repeats the charges he may be tried before a military tribunal.

The military tribunal mentioned was set up by Cosgrave himself while he was head of the government, to try cases of sedition under the public safety act.

Cosgrave commenting on the editorial said he would repeat the charges in question in order to give the government an opportunity to carry out its threat to arrest him. He predicted, however, that De Valera would not have the courage to take such a step.

JAFSIE HOPES TO FIND CLUE

New Development May Lead to Trail of Kidnappers

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)— Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of Lindbergh kidnaping case, has not abandoned the hunt for the kidnappers sought for the man who called him late throwing $50,000 over a cemetery wall.

Last week he went to Canada (in the vicinity of Saint John, N.B.) where, according to the "tip turned up" the World Telegram said it had been inspired by a mysterious call to the doctor. "He is sincerely of the belief that he is hot on the trail of the kidnappers and will eventually lead to the arrest of the kidnappers.

CONTENDER FOR TITLE INJURED IN CRASH

New York, Sept. 23—Richard Shikat, Contender for the world's welterweight wrestling championship, suffered a fractured arm and three other persons also were injured in an automobile collision early today.

Shikat was returning from wrestling matches in Yonkers, when the accident occurred at 15th Street and Riverside Drive. In the car with him were Sandor Szabo and Joseph Mondi, also wrestlers, and their manager, John McArthur.

Mondi suffered a broken right wrist. Szabo, McArthur and two others were slightly hurt.

LIBERAL LEADER MAY FIND SEAT IN EAST

Saskatoon, Sept. 23—The Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King will find fresh fields to conquer at the next federal election.

J. D. Diefenbaker, K.C., speaking to the Young Men's Conservative Association here last night said he had been assured by the member of the Prince Albert Liberal executive that the party of the opposition "would shake the dust of Western Canada from his feet" and seek election to the Federal House from an eastern constituency to the next parliament of Canada.

PICTON

Safety is feared for the lives of thirty-four men, names unknown, who were caught in a squall off the Main Duck Island, Scarboro, in a small craft.

Fishermen of the Main Ducks, 14 miles from here, who arrived Sunday morning to their homes, told the following story.

Two Canadian men, unknown, laying at the Main Ducks harbor Saturday in a twenty-foot open craft, No. Q141, owned by Joseph Dunevin of Cape Vincent, N.Y., put out into the lake for the American waters that afternoon, and have not been heard from since. When the boat with about four miles south of the island a south west wind of gale proportions swooped up accompanied by a driving rain and hail and the sea was churned to a cauldron of foaming surf, and it is believed by fishermen that the small craft could not weather the blow which continued for several hours. Seas were mountainous.

Lampreys Numerous

According to fishermen, lampreys are very thick in the waters in the lake this month. These eel-like fish are a great menace to other fish. Having a round, sucking mouth filled with numerous minute teeth, these creatures follow schools of trout and whitefish, attaching themselves to their prey and boring, leaving large marks upon them. Many of the older fishermen claim that lampreys in great numbers forteli good catches of fish.

Double Rainbow

A beautiful sight was witnessed at Point Traverse during a rain shower, when a double rainbow appeared over the lake. Two huge arches of vivid colors, with a sky of dark blue as a background, and with brilliant flashes of lightning streaking between them at intervals, presented a striking picture.

A few minutes later, a second double rainbow appeared, but with less brilliancy than on the first occasion.

Finally the man started on his way walking beside his bicycle. It was then that he noticed for the first that the man suffered a seizure of some sort while riding the bicycle. $100 Reward

Good work by the Picton police resulted in the identification of the still which had been in operation in the Bay of Quinte district. Evidence of two men for breaches of the Inland Revenue Act in the Liquor Control Act.

On Friday evening, September 2nd, Inspector of Inland Revenue at Picton, Reginald Abraham, in company with County Constable Jas. Lovelace and Chief of Police Ben Biddle, visited the residence of Curtis Selman, on the West Lake Road, acted with a search warrant information having reached them that liquor was being manufactured there. The search party arrived about eleven o'clock they found the still in full operation. Selman was in the kitchen when they located.

Hiding in Cupboard

Jesse Burns, who resides in the Orlead neighbourhood, was discovered hiding in the cupboard a few days after some liquor was discovered.

The still was a five gallon one for the purpose. On the stove, with a fire burning merrily beneath, was a copper boiler with the lid soldered on. A screw top was provided for filling. A coiled up lid an inch pipe and lengths of rubber hose led to the worm (a spiral-shaped brass tube used for condensing) into a wooden pail.

Upstairs police found two barrels of mash suitable for the manufacture of about seven gallons of liquor, 23 gallons and the other 15 gallons of mash.

Thus officially closes the career of one of England's finest naval figures, one who was marked with rapid promotion and outstanding service. "We seem now to have more officers than opportunities for them," said Admiral Hodges last week. "Things have been changed since my young days."

It will be needless to add that a similar reason for his voluntary retirement was given by Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmond last July.

MILK WAR IMPENDS IN UNITED STATES

Stabilization of Milk Prices Demanded by Producers of Supply

Living Minimum is All Demanded by Producers

N. Y. CUT OFF

Strike is Spreading to Mid Western States

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 24— Milk strikes in some of America's principal centres, and the threat of such a movement in New York, today gave a more serious aspect to the agricultural war for higher prices, which started in Iowa more than a month ago.

Producers throughout a large section of the country awaited with interest developments in the New York where stoppage of the flow of milk from upstate to New York City, estimated at nearly 4,000,000 quarts a day, was threatened.

The emergency committee of the New York milk shed said it had been informed that producers in New York had decided to strike unless price negotiations with the independent wholesalers and the price of milk is increased to the "living minimum."

Meanwhile milk strikes, already in effe t, continued among producers of Ohio, Michigan, Georgia and Nebraska. At Toledo, Ohio, a dairy company obtained an injunction against picketing.

The agreement followed several anxious hours in the earlier part of the day when a new rift among the negotiators arose at the same time that Gandhi's physician pronounced his condition to be growing grave.

Modernist Bishop Barnes To Enter House of Lords Learned in Mathematics

Will Take Place of Bishop of Lincoln Who is Retiring

IN CONTROVERSY

His Views Recall Liberal Church Thought of 50 Years Ago

London, Sept. 24 (By Thos. T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer) — The Rt. Rev. E. W. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, will shortly become a member of the House of Lords. The two Archbishops, the Archbishop of York and the Bishops of London, Winchester, and Durham are always members of the House of Lords, and the 21 other Bishops are members according to the seniority of their consecration. Dr. Barnes will step into the place which is about to be vacated by the Rt. Rev. W. S. Swayne, who has been Bishop of Lincoln for the last 12 years, and who is retiring through ill-health. Dr. Swayne is 72 years of age, and on more than one account had an arduous time at Lincoln. His retirement, which will be generally regretted, is expected to take place in November, when the restoration of the fabric of Lincoln Cathedral, which has been extended over the last ten years, will be otherwise.

Is Modernist

Dr. Barnes, who has been Bishop of Birmingham since 1924, was the earliest Bishop to be nominated by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald when his Labour Ministry was in power. He had his full share of publicity, both by reason of his modernist utterances and also by reason of his differences with the present Archbishop of Canterbury. Dr. Barnes is admittedly very learned in mathematics, and there are critics who say that this learning dominates his line of thought. There are equally responsible critics, though, who hold that the terms in which Bishop Barnes submits himself are largely responsible for most of the trouble. It is said that a parallel to some of the views of Bishop Barnes which have caused outbursts of controversy could be found in "Essays and Reviews" that almost forotten contribution of liberal church thought of over half a century back.

All men will be entitled to make representations to divisional officers and these will be forwarded to the command-in-chief who will appoint a Board of Commander to consider the collated representations. It is understood the first review will be ordered about the end of 1933.

Bees Swarm in Autumn, Summer Has O'erbrimmed Their Clammy Cells

One of nature's strange phenomena was reported to the Ontario Intelligencer on Friday when Mr. Wes Gray of the 2nd. concession of Thurlow reported the finding of a swarm of bees on his farm.

Mr. Gray cannot explain the swarming of bees at such a late season as there are no flowers in bloom from which the bees might gather honey and the hives are well supplied with honey for future winter's use. Although Mr. Gray has come to hive of bees of his own the strange swarm of bees landed in a corn field about a mile away and there the position of his hives. The bees are in one of the large fruit trees.

Upon gathering expert advice on the matter it was ascertained that the swarming of bees now was most usual. About the only reason that can be attributed to this case would be the overflowing of honey, tending to smother the bees. If they did not desert their hive.

CASE ENLARGED UNTIL THURSDAY

Alleged Fraud Case Will Be Heard at That Time

LEAVE LEAVES ON THE LAWN

Burning Leaves on Asphalt Pavement Ruins Surface

Throughout the city careful householders are busy raking up the first few scattered showers of leaves which have begun to cover side-walks and lawns. In the majority of cases the dead leaves are raked into small piles on the side of the road and set on fire. As long as the road on which the leaves are being burned is a gravel one no harm will be done by the fire, but when the road is of the asphaltic type, then departmental frowns are registered by the city engineer's office. Burning leaves on asphalt roadways destroys the protective asphalt coating and leaves small pitch in the surface. These in turn with ice and snow in the winter and help create large rough spots. In time the deterioration becomes quite marked.

The best thing to do with dead leaves, declare local gardeners and professional lawn keepers, is to leave them on the lawns. They form a valuable fertiliser for straggly grass which has been starved

SKUNK SUICIDE CAUSE OF ODOR

Motorist Unavoidably Struck Creature Crossing Road

A. B. Dermott, local salesman, rolled his car into a downtown body shop for repairs late Friday afternoon. Employees in the shop sniffed suspiciously and audibly remarked that the car must have been recently engaged in the odorous pursuit of pole-cat hunting. Search however, failed to disclose any dead carcasses or skins.

Mr. Dermott chuckled on his return. He accompanied the explanation with an apologies "Something," he explained, "over which he had no control."

Earlier in the afternoon, while returning from Stirling, he had observed a skunk meandering slowly over the road not far from that latter village. As he approached it ducked back into the bushes at the side of the road. Then it popped out again, right under the wheels of the machine just as he drew abreast. A horrid shrieking ensued, he admits, and, somehow one of the front wheels caught it—and it died instantly.

"A clear case of skunk suicide," added Mr. Dermott. "And there wasn't much that could be done about it."

That the degeneration of a nation follows close on its prosperity is perhaps the only sequence in historical events which approaches the certainty of scientific law.

BURNS FATAL TO MRS. ROBLIN

Received Burns When Gasoline Torch Exploded

Mrs. Viola Roblin, wife of Ivy Randell Roblin of, the 8th concession of Thurlow passed away last Friday at the Belleville General Hospital as a result of burns sustained Thursday afternoon when a portable gasoline torch exploded which Mr. Roblin was operating at his home.

The late Mrs. Roblin was born at Kitchener, Ont., thirty eight years ago, the daughter of the late William Meinke and Mrs. Meinke. She had lived at her late residence near Holloway for the past seventeen years and was a member of the United Church. Since making her home in this part of the country, Mrs. Roblin had endeared herself to the neighborhood, and her many friends deeply regret her tragic and untimely passing. To them, left to mourn her loss their sympathy is extended.

The immediate family surviving are the husband, the mother, Mrs. William Meinke at present residing at Holloway, one sister Mrs. Ross of Kitchener, and a brother Alexander Meinke of Toronto.

The funeral service is to be held Sunday afternoon at her late home, and Monday morning Martin and Son, undertakers, will convey the body by motor to Kitchener, for interment.

It will cost about $250,000,000 to duplicate the Great Wall of China, engineers estimate.

VAUDEVILLE PROGRAM MUCH APPRECIATED

In the Kiwanis Karnival vaudeville programme last night, one may have thought that Amos 'n Andy had been prevailed upon to give a special number but it was only "Slim" Burgess, repeating by popular request, his remarkable imitation of the well known characters. In this manner the capable master of ceremonies opened the vaudeville numbers for the evening. Miss Lillian Marsh delighted with a clever tap dance number, which was given during intermission in the Style Revue.

Mr. Sid Long on xylophone and trumpet gave several selections, which were received with applause by the audience. "Valentine" dancing team in an original song and dance number made an instant hit. Their "slow motion" bit, tap dancing and harmonizing being very well done. An amusing act in which Slim helped out, was very funny while a radio drama and the agony over the moth balls concluded the vaudeville in smart style.

Supplying Seeds for Forty-Four Years

When Mr. C. E. Bishop was learning the business of a seedsman years ago on one of the largest seed farms in England, he little thought that at some time in his future life he would be exporting seed from Canada to his native country; such, however, has come to pass and the firm of C. E. Bishop and Son, Seedsmen, of this city for some years past have enjoyed a large trade in the British Isles. The seeds exported are principally Alsike and Red Clover, and during the past season 12 cars of clover seed were shipped direct from Belleville to Old Country ports. As a result of this export trade, the local farmers have been receiving a better price for their seed than they did prior to the opening up of this export trade.

Mr. Bishop has been an active and highly respected citizen of Belleville for 44 years. In the year 1888 he opened his first store on McAnaney street, in the building now known as the Moncrief Block Building. After being in this location for some years, Mr. Bishop moved to Bridge Street and occupied the store one door east of the Standard Bank building. Later he moved into a store on Front Street a short distance south of Bridge Street and 12 years ago he bought the building which the firm now occupies at 175 Front Street.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Bishop took into partnership his son, Mr. Charles F. Bishop, who had grown up in the business and had received an excellent training as a seedsman under his fathers' direction. Today the firm of C. E. Bishop and Son is widely known and highly considered in the trade.

In addition to their export trade, a large business both wholesale and retail is carried on and during the season many shipments of vegetable, flower and farm seeds are made to all parts of Eastern Canada and Newfoundland.

Many lines have been added in recent years to satisfactorily supply the requirements of gardeners and farmers.

The bulb business has grown to tremendous proportions in comparatively recent years. When Mr. Bishop received his first shipment of bulbs from Holland at his Bridge Street store, people seeing them displayed, would inquire what variety of onions they were. Today great interest is taken by flower lovers in the many kinds of bulbs and Bishop's Seed Store supplies their requirement to their entire satisfaction.

New Kresge Store to Conform To Building By-law of City

Plans Altered to Add Another Storey to Building

To conform to the wishes of the City Council, who had brought pressure to bear on the company in an attempt to alter proposed plans of the one-storey construction of the Kresge Building to be erected on Front Street, changes in plans which will permit the addition of one more storey to the building, were announced from the company's head office, Detroit, Mich., on Friday afternoon. In an interview with a representative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer later in the day, Mr. J. Jacobs, engineer in charge of construction who is at present in the city announced the decision of head office.

Previous plans which had been submitted to the council through the city engineer, and for which a building permit had been sought, called for construction of a building of one-storey design, and with a height of approximately thirty-five feet. It was felt by the council that such construction would not conform with present building standards on the street and an attempt was made to have the submitted plans altered. In this they have been successful. New plans are now being drawn by the company's architect, Mr. G. A. McKillop, of Windsor, Ont., but have not yet been received in the city. According to Mr. Jacobs, in charge of construction, little delay will be occasioned by the company over the alteration.

Start Work October 1

Preliminary work on the demolition of present buildings in the block now occupied by the Hydro office and Cedar Shop will be commenced by the company on October 1st. According to Mr. Jacobs and his associate Mr. L. T. Bishop, who now occupy offices in the new block, present buildings will be almost entirely razed. Local labour will be employed during the process of tearing down the building, and reconstruction thereafter. The work of the new buildings will be 41 feet in width and with a depth of 132 feet, and with a basement as present under the block will be devoted to storage space. Actual cost of construction has been placed at $50,000.

Original plans had called for a facing of black marble, with marcotta edgings and the finish work to be in polished metal. Whether new plans will affect exterior trimming and design will not be known until they are received.

Credit to City

"Due credit should be given members of your city council for the interest they have displayed in this matter on behalf of the city they represent," declared Mr. Jacobs, commending on the proposed changes which had been made to building plans. "The new store will be a credit to any community," he added.

Mr. Jacobs, who is permanently attached to the construction staff of the Kresge Company, building new stores all over the Dominion, reports business very brisk. He has just returned from Three Rivers, Quebec, where they built a large store of the same type to be built in this city. "Belleville, we believe, will be one of the best located stores in the province," he declared.

PLAY SAFE IS REQUEST MADE

Fire Chief Lynch Gives Advice to Motorists at Fire Time

When clanging bells and shrieking fire sirens on the trucks warn of the hurried approach of the heavy vehicles the safe, urges Fire Chief William Lynch to drivers of the motor cars in the congested areas about the city. Pull up to the side of the curb and let the fire carts pass. This request is made by Chief Lynch following several narrow escapes the department has had this summer in which accidents to firemen and citizens has been averted only by mere chance. Nearly every occasion near accidents have been caused by drivers of cars attempting to cut in ahead of department trucks at cross streets. Driving just before answering an alarm at the Oak Hall store, one chances which had been made to only by a fraction of an inch when a truck attempted to cross the intersection of Front Street and Bridge before the arrival of the hose cart from No. 1 Station. The driver, of the hose truck, Mr. Stan Wadell was fortunately able to flip the wheel on a bare chance of missing the other truck.

"Trailers" those who follow at breakneck speed behind the fire trucks to the scene of the fire, also come in for some criticism from Chief Lynch. "If it ever became necessary for one of our trucks to make an emergency stop, those cars following so close behind couldn't stand a chance, it might mean instant death for someone."

FREE WHEELING GIVEN AS CAUSE

Three Cars Slightly Damaged in Odd Accident

A rather odd motor car accident, in which no serious damage was reported, happened on Bridge St., late Friday afternoon. Driving his car out of a parking space, Mr. Martin, 103 Bend street, Toronto, had her car parked on the south side of Bridge street. She backed her car out and started to drive eastward on the street. Just after starting, however, Mr. Martin noticed a truck behind her and pulled over to the right side of the street to allow the truck to pass her. Her car was equipped with free wheeling, a device which Miss Martin was unaccustomed to. Her car collided with a car parked on the south side of the street, which was owned by Leo Barrett of this city. The force of the impact knocked the Barrett car ahead with a jolt, which in turn forced the car parked alongside of it, the property of Lionel Train also of this city.

Constable Isard investigated the accident and found that the Barrett car merely had its rear carrier bent, while the Train car was damaged to the extent of a right front fender and the right running board being bent. No charges were laid as the parties concerned amicably settled the damages.

W.C. MIKEL K.C. CHOSEN TO REPRENENT U.E.L.

Magistrate Mikel has been requested by the United Empire Loyalists Association of Canada to represent the Association at the funeral of the late Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., on Tuesday the 27th instant, at 2.15 p.m. at St. Thomas' church.

Sir Gilbert Parker was a member of the United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada and sometime ago wrote Magistrate Mikel that he felt a greater pride in his U. E. Loyalist descent than in any honour that had been conferred upon him, and Magistrate Mikel who is Vice-Consul of the United Empire Loyalists Association of Canada, suggests that all citizens in this vicinity of U. E. Loyalist descent should endeavour to attend the funeral.

BELLEVILLE BONDS SELL HIGHEST

The most encouraging sign of the upward tendency and stiffening of prices has been shown in the remarkable strength of Belleville six per cent. bonds sold on the open market to bring 105.16. This is believed to be a record price so far in the Province of Ontario.

No fewer than ten firms tendered on the $113,162 in bonds offered. The difference in bids was remarkably small.

This demonstrates in the most striking way the confidence which financiers and bond dealers of Ontario repose in the city of Belleville and its ability to pay.

The bonds were for schools, sidewalks, sewers and pavements, and ran from twenty to thirty years. They are all serial debentures.

Belleville have felt reason to be downcast over conditions before the revival as well as those who fully realize the stability of the city have every reason to be proud of the standing of Belleville in the eyes of Ontario.

ROBBING MELON PATCH

"The frost is on the punkin," sang James Whitcomb Riley without knowing what was going to happen melon and punkin patches in and about Belleville. Little do we think that intruders do not mind taking toll of this desirable produce.

To break into a watermelon patch, take melons and damage others is a poor reward for the farmer or citizen so industrious as to endeavor to grow produce, only to have it snatched away by those who did not plant the seeds or care for the young plants and vines. To bring the intruders to justice may end the tendency to look upon other people's property as one's own. The rights of owners in property, whether land or house or even vines must be upheld.

Fortunately those who do take produce without any color of right are few in number as compared with the law-abiding who regard the rights of others. And even some who do take melons do not do so as thieves but in a spirit of sport and bravado. Unfortunately they run foul of the law, and are doing an injustice to the owners. For that they are, if caught, punished for an example to others to leave things alone.

EDUCATION GOES ON

Education is not falling by the way in time of stress even though parental budgets shrink. Indications are for a large attendance at the provincial university which may in part be explained by the lack of employment for young men who have turned their faces towards the university though there must be a falling out of some who would otherwise have entered upon their courses of study this autumn. Many no doubt feel the need of an occupation which will fit them for work in which there may be less likelihood of unemployment and are starting at college in the expectation that by the time of their graduation things will be humming again and the job will be seeking the man. The present day graduate has of course a little more difficulty to face.

Encouraging signs appear at Albert College where the registration is highly satisfactory in view of the general situation and more than meets the expectations which had been held out for this year.

The crowds of students registered at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School are further proof that the need of education is not lost sight of in these days. Education is one of the chief stabilizers of society.

COMMENTS

It is no wonder that the Prince of Wales is popular in Denmark, the home of his grandmother, the late Queen Alexandra. She was one of the most popular consorts in British history and it is noteworthy that her grandson, the heir to the British throne is perhaps the most popular young man of the age.

Union among churches appears to be the thought of a very large proportion of the people who feel that there should be some working basis if not organic union among the various branches of the Christian Church to combat atheistic communism and materialism, and to face the problems which paganism presents to Christendom today. So much discussion must surely indicate a deep substratum of thought along this line and while there is room for differences, there is no room for such great differences as split the church.

A young Canadian, Arthur Beverley Baxter, editor of the London Daily Press, is visiting in Canada and is able to interpret to Canadians the British opinion. He stands in a peculiar position as directing the trend of thought in the world's metropolis while still possessing an unerring knowledge of the problems of the newer parts of the Empire like the Dominion.

SNAPPING TURTLES, WILD DUCKS AND BABY MUSKRATS

SNAPPING TURTLES—Believe it or not, but there is a possibility of a new industry being started in Belleville whose principal output will be snapping turtles. The Ancient Mariner, the First Fisherman, the retired Big Business Man, the Tired Travelling Salesman, the Book Agent, the Insurance Salesman, the Wandering Minstrel, a scattering of Fireman, and one lone Front Street Columnist, were gathered in front of No. 1 Fire Station discussing the report of the Royal High Railway Commission, when, apropos or otherwise, the question of Snapping Turtles came up. The Wandering Minstrel told of the great demand in New Orleans and other places in the United States for turtle steaks and turtle soups, and wondered if there were any snapping turtle hereabouts.

"Sure," said the First Fisherman, backed up by the Ancient Mariner, "I can git ye a ton of snappin' turtles right out of the Bay of Quinte in no time at all — they sometimes can get a big price in Buffalo," said he, "fresh water turtles being esteemed even higher than the salt water kind by those epicurious persons who call the turn on high class steaks."

"Yes, indeedy, there used to be quite a business in snapping turtles hereabouts, but it was a cartiful business, but finally had to bootleg them into the United States on account of a rulin', or no rulin', by the Customs Moguls. Buffalo would take all the Bay of Quinte snapping turtles that could be unloaded at the fish docks there, but the custom men got figgerin' what classification to give the turtles which had been coming in under the head of fish. The wise guys at Washington said that a turtle wasn't a fish, nor was it a fowl, nor was it fresh herrin', so the decision was that such a heavy duty was laid on turtles as some kind of a luxury close to caviar that the business of catching 'em and shipping 'em stopped right there, except for some little bootleggin' which didn't last as the risk wasn't worth the revenue."

"So there you are," said the First Fisherman. "There's lots of snappin' turtles to be got, but until Uncle Sam classifies 'em as fish, there's nothin' doin' in the shippin' line."

"How about mud turtles?" somebody asked.

"Nothin' doin', no good for eatin' or anythin'," said the First Fisherman.

"How do you catch the snapping turtles?" asked a curious one.

"Well the turtles are thick in the marshes, and the best way to catch them is with a wire trap with a trick opening," said the First Fisherman. "Inside the trap is the bait, enclosed in a wire so the turtle can not take it away. The turtle can smell the bait for a long way so he comes ambling along to make a meal. The trap soon becomes full of turtles and the fisherman just naturally calls the meeting to order and empties the trap, making it ready for the next class. I bet I could get a ton of turtles out of the marshes in no time a'tall."

"What do the turtles feed on?" someone asked.

"Well, for one thing," said the First Fisherman, they are very fond of ducks, and just hide in the marsh where flocks of ducks settle on the water to feed. The turtle keeps very quiet until he is surrounded by ducks then they basked head of his'n goes up like lightning and there is a splashing and a scattering of feathers as a duck is pulled under the water to satisfy the appetite of a hungry turtle. Muskrats, too, are favored by the turtles as choice morsels. The turtles burrow in under the muskrat houses and whenever a young muskrat ventures forth to see what is on the outside Mr. Turtle grabs him quick and makes a meal of 'him."

"How large do these Bay of Quinte snapping turtles grow?" asked a fireman.

"Fifty pounds, or more," said the First Fisherman, backed up by the Ancient Mariner, "but generally speaking they'd run about twenty-five pounds on the average—and good eatin'—son you never laid your tongue over anything more swell than a Bay of Quinte snappin' turtle steak."

So you see if Uncle Sam ever changes his mind and decides that a fresh water snapping turtle is a fish Belleville is likely to have a new industry—and most of the readers of this column, no doubt, can add this little story to The Things They Never Knew 'Till Now, and, Believe It or Not, there are more things we don't know, than we do know, despite all that we do know or think we know — and if this is a Tall Fish Story, or a Tall Turtle Story, excuse it please — but it seemed interesting to me, even if it might be mixed with fisherman's fiction license — so the Turtle Story is hereby passed on to Sidelight readers as a good yarn without affidavits — so that's that, until the next session of the Fire Hall Parliament.

PAUL WANER SETS RECORD FOR DOUBLES

Pirate Outfielder Beats Mark Set by Chuck Klein

A'S SECOND

One Victory Needed is Obtained Over Senators

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Four straight pennants too big an assignment for the Philadelphia Athletics, but Connie Mack's great team has done the next best thing by nailing down second place in the American League.

Needing only one victory over Washington to clinch the "almost" honors, the A's went ahead and did it by pounding three Senator pitchers for an 8 to 4 win yesterday. No matter if they take the two concluding games of the series, the Senators finish no better than third.

In an effort to keep their chances alive, Philadelphia sent Monte Weaver brilliant rookie with 22 victories to his credit, to the mound. Weaver, who was slammed from the box in the fourth innings. Lefty Mahaffey, another A's rookie, and Philadelphia fingers, was credited with the win.

Jimmie Foxx's chances of eclipsing Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs faded when he failed to knock one out of the park. The slugging first baseman got 3 hits, which two games to go.

The champion Yankees meantime uncovered a World Series pitching prospect in Johnny Allen, a big right-hander who has bobbed up to pitch convincing ball after the race is all but run. He chalked up his third straight victory, shutting out the Boston Red Sox for 7 hits with seven bbs.

With Dewgrs and Ruffing looking far from "right" at this crucial stage, Manager Joe McCarthy, who has conveniences, failed to get anything resembling a rest in the two attempts, and that is bad.

The Yankees have worked St. Louis over twice, 6 to 2 and 12 to 6. Earl Whitehill letting the Browns down with three hits in the nightcap. Cleveland won a weird contest from the Chicago White Sox 13 to 6. Five pitchers worked for the Sox, including Manager Lew Fonseca. He did better than his pitching hirelers, at that, for Fonseca took a fall in the one inning he was on the hill.

Paul Waner, shaggy Pittsburgh outfielder, set new National League record by increasing his 1927 total, doubles as the Pirates lost to St. Louis 8 to 5, in the only Nat'l League engagement. The former record of 59 two-baggers belonged to Chuck Klein of the Phillies.

Jimmy Foxx is the only player who has hit at least one homer in every park of the American league this season. Babe Ruth has yet to get one in Chicago, Lou Gehrig in the Cleveland, Smead Jolley in Cleveland and Jonathan Stone in Washington, otherwise they would share with Foxx the distinction of making a circuit clout in every city in the junior major.

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

Ten years seems to be quite a long time to look ahead but it was just ten years ago this week that the then Belleville Grand Trunks booked up in one of the most hectic play-off series ever played by the O.B.A., when they battled the Peterboro "Peter" winning the third and deciding game at Oakawa.

That was the first season in which Al Heckman and Jack Williams made their appearance in the loop. Hock was still seen in action this summer while Jack Williams after a few seasons of pro ball with Detroit, was a guest on the Belleville bench one day in Kingston last summer.

In that hectic 1922 season Peterboro won the first half of the schedule while the Trunks staged a belated rally to win the second half. The first play-off game was played in Belleville and the locals won 3 to 0 in the return game, although the Trunks made whilst the Peter nosed 7 to 2. They managed to beat the ball all around enough to let the Peter win 3 to 0. In the third game played in Oshawa, what a surprise happened. We wonder how many of our readers were at Alexander Park that day? Poor "Jack" could not seem to "get 'em" by the local batters with the result that Belleville was that game by the score of 12 to 0.

Without a doubt that was the worst reversal of form ever seen on the Central loop. The Peter simply blew up while the Trunks, behind the superb pitching of Jack Williams, had a field day at the expense of Heckman and his team mates. That game saw Wicky Wickwire centre, Jack Hall at short, Pewsey Mills was well why mention his position, Wicky and Harry Mills was then carrying around first base and Hall was at his usual spo position. J. K. "Crock" Williams at the bat was handling the "pitchers" Meagher pivotted the double plays around second. Babe Casey was in right and Slim Hagerman covered the left field territory. Jack Williams and Ray Mallon looked after the pitching duties that season. "Oh won't you bring back those wonderful days."

The Belleville Victorias left for North Bay yesterday leaving Fewand "Stab" Palmer, their star right fielder at home. Palmer could not make the trip but will be with the team when they face the Pirates here in Belleville next Wednesday. Previous to leaving for the north, Coach Chummy Grew announced that he would start either Ralph Dyer or Fritz Nelson against the Pirates on Saturday. If the Vics can hold the North Bay hitters at bay for five or six innings, Campbell may be called upon to do the relief pitching if needed. The Vics left by motor about 2 p.m. Friday. It is expected that they will arrive in the wilds about 11 p.m. that night. Accommodation for the party of sailing 216 on the phone the interested baseball fans of the city will be informed of the progress of the game.

Today ushers in the local football season when the fast Oshawa Generals will be pitted against the local B.C.I. footballers at the new Memorial Grounds. Coach Les Shiels has a large roster of players and will give them all a chance in today's game.

The "grunt and groan" or as Lou Marsh says "mauling, battling, who's doin' the battin'" artists are working over in Picton tonight. On the same card Scotty Kline and Jimmy Clark are to exchange punches with the gloves on. Next Wednesday the "rasslers" move over to Belleville arena when the Masked Marvel and his manager, they usually finish by both of them getting into the argument), meet Scotty McDougall and Red Larocque. We might add here and now that Larocque is only appearing in the role of aid and adviser, said the ring, but, we cannot see first hose and bottle of pop in each side if the Marvel's manager pulls that act of his suavely stepping up and grabbing his wrestler's opponent's feet.

Tonight marks the official opening of the Recreation Bowling Alleys. Manager Leo Barrett has been renovating the alleys all week and tonight the local bowlers will swing into action after a summer's rest. The fall schedules for the various bowling leagues will be published in this paper shortly.

By Sylvia Parker

Have you ever wished you could walk out on your life and start all over again somewhere else? Just leave everything and go somewhere and be someone not yourself? No many of us get the chance. But Frank Clarke did.

Oh couldn't have happened if he hadn't been in that railroad wreck and crawled through the window of the overturned car, bleeding and bruised, he dragged himself across the tracks to a telephone booth for a telegraph station to wire a report of the wreck to his paper on the Clayton Citizen. He must have been a bit dazed, for he wandered all night without finding a hotel. And then, landing in Mountainville he bought the local paper, and read his own name listed among the dead!

Frank's first reaction was a feeling of elation. "God must have murmured. "I've all have plenty to say this time. Try and convince her I didn't spend the night sleeping somewhere instead of walking the legs off trying to get the story in."

And then she thought came to him like a flash! He didn't have to go back and explain to old man Ramsay and to Mary Ann! Why thought he was dead! He didn't have to go back at all!

Clutching the paper, Frank hurried down the streets of Mountainville Commercial House and confronted the disarrayed image in the mirror. "You can consider yourself one lucky lad," he murmured, just like Mary Ann's mother monish and you'd have been the husband of a fine woman, and then maybe you wouldn't have had to step on it!"

Frank stretched his arms above his head, yawned a deep luxurious yawn. "It's just as well this way, kind," he said drowsily. "If I ever do, why pick out a big-shot on a country paper? Little Frank never was a go-getter and all Mary Ann's dying couldn't make him one. When I settle down I'm going to get a soft berth, plenty of jack, a chance to travel—"

His head shot out accusingly. "Why did you let yourself in for that? Anyway You know you're not! Miss Efficiency who always gets her copy in on time. Running over to work up from leg man to owner of the paper. You just didn't have the guts to say her proposition didn't appeal to you. Oh, you should have known what she was doing. First she's the best of pals, drinks tea and talk shop, then she's the butcher's bill and all the other romantic things of wedded life. No thank you, Not for Frank Clarke. All I want is a job that'll bring me enough for a room and board and a little stud on the side. With no wife wanting to know where you spend my time and my money."

He began to live. Trilled right out of the fire by a railroad wash-out. It's lucky I landed here and got hold of that clothes. I would have turned up at my own funeral!"

He became serious. "You've got to put miles between you and Clayton, Mr. Pleasant-town. There is nothing behind you but a scared rate job-and a go-well she is a darned nice girl, pretty, too, but she might have been your wife!"

It was less than a year later that Clarke Brooks stumbled out of the city room of the New York Sentinel. His shoulders sagged, he needed a haircut and he fingered his bat nervously—all the earmarks of a man looking for a job and turned down again.

"Frank!"

Clarke Frankie stepped abruptly, turned to check with fear on Ted Willard, sports editor of the Clayton Citizen. His old pal did not reveal by the twitch of an eyebrow that he recognized his old running mate.

"Sorry," he mumbled. "Frank's the name, but you must be mistaken. I don't know you."

"And I don't know my grandmother," the other replied, linking his arm into the elder's weedy one. "We used to talk about comparing notes together didn't we? But you beat me to it!"

"I tell you, there's some mistake, Ted Willard," he repeated, but he reluctantly followed Willard.

Frank's head was throbbing and they were on the sidewalk. "The mistake is yours, boy. You should never have stayed in the newspaper game. Now, you know this town is small, but I do. Where can we go and talk?"

Frank's incognito crumpled. "Back of this barber shop. How did you know, Ted? How did you recognize me? I'm clothes to look robbed a bank. Swinkly clothes, too."

Cezar nodded. "Picked 'em up in London. You working for the Sentinel?"

Frank shook his head. "Working for myself. Got a scoop and I'm going to break into, Oh. Don't try it, Ted. You haven't got a job. You don't! Old man hasn't gone in for staff correspondents,a has he?"

Cezar held out his gold cigaret case and Frank's eager fingers helped himself to a cigaret.

"You can have your old job back in the Citizen if you want it. The car went on.

"Does a hungry man want to eat?" Frank sated eagerly. "But how can you fix it? Is Vivian still there?"

Cezar shook his head. "I thought you knew. Vivian left me sooner or later. She's here with me. We're on our way back from England. Honeymoon!"

"Honeymoon!" Frank gasped. "Where'd you get the jack to honeymoon in England."

Cezar held up from the tall glass. "You're asking a pile of questions, Frank. Guess I owe you an answer. Then you can have your old job back because I'll fix it for you. The paper's mine, mine and Vivian's."

Frank stared, his mouth droped open.

"When you'd been 'dead' half a year," Cezar continued, "I plucked up courage to write to Vivi. I felt I could ever forget you. It seems she felt the same. The old man died and I learned he'd left all his money to Vivian, provided she'd marry Ted, husband. Ted could carry on the Citizen. We're going back, now, to do just that."

Frank put a clammy hand on Cezar's shoulder. "Tell me one thing more," he whispered, lips cracked and dry. "Howdy the old man come to leave everything to Vivian?"

Cezar laughed. "She's his niece. Nobody to claim money. Some fool notion she had about not wanting to be liked for the money she was going to inherit. Can you imagine it making a difference whether Vivian had money or not? A girl like her!"

Mirthlessly Frank joined his laugh.

A DUAL REMEDY

By Glen F. Stillwell

As soon this Slim brazen roared over the Blakely pasture, Amos Blakely's face clicked and frowned ominously. "I tell you that crazy aviator is going to be the ruination of my dairy business," he told his 19-year-old daughter, Mary, who faced him at the dinner table. "Scaring my cows so they have gone out a different place to start his aerial circuses."

Mary brushed a straying lock of chestnut hair back into place but said nothing. Like him, she had her small oval face, her deep blue eyes and her calm and friendly. She had never met Slim Watson but the flying business was familiar to despite her father's rancor toward it.

It had been a dry summer and, later in the afternoon when Amos had gone to the pasture where Holstens—as had become their habit—broke down the fence which separated the aviation field from the Blakely pasture.

On seeing the herd rounding on hostile territory where the grass was greener, Mary hastened to drive them back to their own pasture. She had on a pair of old overalls and a straw hat was pulled well down over her shining hair.

"Hey, young fellow! roared Slim, just recognizing that the slim boyish figure whose back was toward him. "I've warned your father to keep those cows off this aviation field. I mean business. Get 'em off, and keep 'em off, or, by thunder, I'll kick you clean over the fence and chase the cows into the next county!"

Slim realized that wandering cows were a decided menace to aviation. Secondly Slim was an agreeable young man but Mary did not know this. She gasped and spun around, her face white with quivering alarm.

The airman's words died in his throat with a sputter. He coughed and turned redder than a tale Cherry, for the young person, Miss Mary, he managed to stammer.

"Mary implied, "I'm sorry about the cows," she offered amicably, "but I have a totally contrary at times."

"Oh, they're not so bad," fibbed Slim. "I—I just let my temper get the best of me, that's all." He looked at her with open admiration. "Would-would you like to see my ship?"

Their eyes met in a glance that was the beginning of their future merger of the dairy and aviation business.

"No sir," said Amos to Mary a little later, "I'm not going to fix up that fence. I don't care if the cows do get over on the aviation. And if he hits one of them he'll pay for it, see?"

"And another thing." Amos continued admonishingly, "I'm familiar with a standard hand, "I don't want to see you over there talking to that aviator. He's a tramp, I don't want you to have anything to do with him, understand?"

Mary nodded but her eyes were dancing. Slim's trade had potential interest. She was an obedient girl but she was also a woman and this seemed to be asking too much of her, since she knew that it wasn't the aviator that her father hated but his profession.

In the month that followed the merger between the dairy and aviation businesses progressed with aviation getting the worst of it in a business way. Slim's trade dwindled off day by day because the Holsteins continued to break down the rickety airport fence and rains, who were inclined to take a flight in his new biplane, took care to let the cows roaming about on the field and changed their minds.

Slim was up against it. All his money was invested in the plane and the hangar. Mary's father had adopted an air of stony indifference.

Mary, however, was sorely tried. She loved her father, who, since her mother's death, had been both father and mother to her; yet she regarded the tiny diamond engagement ring that Slim had given her with tear-filled eyes. This ring she wore secretly but soon she knew proudly. She hoped some day to be able to show it to her father. Until that day all was not right with the world.

She thought of those roaming Holsteins with growing hatred and finally decided that Slim was right, he felt that some foggy day Slim would swoop on the sky fairies onto the field without noticing them. There would be a crash and then—Mary shuddered. She felt that something would have to be done. What, she did not know.

Then old Kate, the blue ribbon winner of the Holstein herd, took sick. She was down on the barn floor, her sides heaving and her eyes with fear-stricken eyes. He had refused to eat anything and lay there with her head on his thumb closed over the blurred grayed-label—

Care of The Permanent

It looks as if nothing will cost the finger wave. It is a perfect likeness of the undulation that Mission Nature bestows in lucky girls. Since nothing can improve upon that design, it would seem as if the finger waves were in for long-term popularity. And, as you can't have finger waves without curly hair or a permanent, there's the old date to be made again to have boiling tea kettles placed along the electric cord.

One permanent a year won't suffice. The April ripple is getting weak. Time for another one along about the first of October. So get in for a spell of hair conditioning. Very necessary, not that the shingling steam does any special harm, but because healthy hair takes a better bilow. Even color fades to be repeated curling, though that can be avoided if the operator has a thinking brain. At any rate, hair needs a bit of nursing twice a year and the elegant time for it is just before the permanents is cashed and carried.

Make it a weekly habit to give the old hair a good brisk brushing, to part it at various places, trickling hot oil-mineral, olive or equal parts of castor oil and rubbing alcohol along the partings. Mail the nails. Gentle stroking is no good. Spread thumbs and fingers, thumbs at the back of the neck. Hold thumbs stationary, move the scalp with the fingers. Then wash. Water softened from the outer hair line to the crown of the head.

The plenty of oil. Rub it into the ends of the hair. Apply steaming hot towels. Wrap the head in a dry one, say prayers, go to bed.

LIBRARY CORNER

Sept. 24, 1932.

All those who have ever felt excitement at the sound of a passing fire engine will want to read W. Branch Johnson's book, "Fire-Fighting by Land, Sea and Air." It is a stirring account of the progress which has been made throughout the world, from early times to the present day, in the organization and subjection of fire in all its forms. The author takes his readers behind the scenes, explains the nature of the problem to be faced, the principles of fire brigade organisation. He describes the various appliances, from the manual pump to pictures the training and routine that the firemen have to fit them for their strenuous duties. Among the many interesting methods of fire-fighting described are those of the New York Brigade, used in fighting skyscraper fires, and the Venice Fire Brigade, which must travel by boats as well as by advanced methods of London and Paris. Amusing stories of famous fires are included in the volume.

Thomas Derbahlin, an authority on Australian affairs has written of exciting events which will reveal to the reader of adventure. Three sea stories of Old Sydney are collected in his book "Sailing to the World's End." Many of the days when men sailed in and out of Sydney Harbour in the first Century after the coming of the white settlers to Australia. Convicts, settlers, whalers, 'sandal-wood cutters, dealers in Kanaka labour, are typical in these tales of murder, treachery and adventure.

In addition, the modern miracle of science, is discussed from all angles by Owen Rutter, who has cast consultant of note, in his book, "Behind the Microphone and Screen." Mr. Felix has dealt openly with the controversial questions as well as the many possibilities of the present imperfect state of television. The author has explained the nature of the processes involved in any performance from broadcasting to performance essential to the rendition of successful service, and the nature of the developments necessary to make the performance of public-service quality. The study of this achievement which will revolutionize broadcasting will prove fascinating to most readers.—K.O.

WAR MAKES OLD HUSBANDS MORE POPULAR

Psychologist Discusses Question of Age of Husband

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

It has always been that a young girl preferred a husband of at least a little older than herself. Nowadays, however, not only are girls quite willing but they are likely, as well, to prefer men considerably older than themselves rather than those just a few years in advance. The Great War seems to have had something to do with this just as it has with so many things. At any rate, with so many young men killed a woman's choice was necessarily restricted. Nevertheless, this true of England and on the Continent generally.

In America such a diminution of eligible youngsters was surely not marked. But here, nevertheless, the war left its sobering effects. It made young girls more serious-minded. It made them less sentimental and less romantic. It has inclined them to what might be termed the more materialistic considerations in the matter of choosing a husband.

At any rate, many women have learned that it takes more than love with a man the burdens as well as the joys of life. Women, in short, have actually taken the place of men in many occupations. Women have even been drafted—and despite their apparent lack of strength and responsibility—have services life really is. Indeed, their agility and seeming frivolousness is nothing more than what psychologists call a "defense reaction" against deeper and more serious feelings of a different sort inside.

Women will find that there is more genuine and lasting enjoyment in companionship with a man of thirty or forty, who is settled and knows what life is all about, than with a stripling who is all impulse and good intentions, but little more. At the same time, it is likely to be a stable provider and one to be depended upon. Such a one gives a woman a feeling of security that is highly prized, and rightly so.

To be sure, young girls enjoy the young fellows for dancing and a jolly evening, but they prefer the right spirits for a good time. But when they begin to think seriously, when their thoughts turn to matrimony,

When her newly-found freedom a woman soon learns how fleeting the reckless abandon of youth really is. It soon gives opportunities for true happiness must be built upon more solid foundations. Besides having grown older herself in the years that have been passing, she craves similar mind traits from her male companions. She, herself, has learned how important it is to demand more. And usually it is only an older man, rather than one older one, who can satisfy her requirements.

Besides, we must not forget the famous "father complex." Here is an instinctive reaction which every girl must needs respond to.

The Editor of Hygeia is the model of all males to a child. And this overdevelopment is rarely otherwise overcomes, it carries with it for instance, the tendency to pick out ideals are linked solely with an older person. Hence we find that girls rather naturally fall in love with men more nearly their father's age than their own.

It is not to be recommended, however—and this is a purely psychological conclusion that a girl should marry a man too many years her senior. Ten years should be considered, not more than that. Such will at least a difference beyond which it is hazardous to go. The woman who is too old may grow senile while the wife still craves youthful activities. Under such conditions happiness is likely to go on the rocks.

Yet, after all, a man's age is not necessarily conditioned by the date of his birth. Some men remain young throughout life. Others again are oldsters already in their teens.

Kiwanis Style Show Delightful Showing of Dresses, Furs and Millinery

Kroch Bros. Had Interesting Display of Latest Fashion Modes

MILLINERY SMART

Furs and Jewelry Enhanced the Embellishments on Gowns

Bringing to a close a colourful week of frocks, the Kiwanis Carnival Style Revue last evening concluded with a showing of brilliant costumes by Kroch Bros., with furs by Delaney and irresistible feminine jewelry by McKee's. Sustaining the edicts of Dame Fashion for new ideas in the Fall mode, Kroch Bros. costumes embraced every whim of the designer, developing in fine fabrics that will be worn this Autumn 1932.

Here were fashions to delight and entrance feminine hearts. Sports dresses, that graduated from the strictly useful class to a more feminine form; afternoon dresses that will make social affairs a time of quiet elegance, and evening gowns, dramatic, colorful and new and different were all presented in flattering style by the capable mannequins. Coats, in the 1932 mode, that were enhanced brilliantly by the use of fur trimmings not seen in the days of the straight cuff although this is not important, but in the variety of ways in which the fur was applied to the frock.

The alluring hats worn by the mannequins were supplied by Kroch Bros., while the wonderful costumes jewelry, rings and lovely bags were furnished by Angus McPee. Mrs. Matthewson Delaney's also furnished beautiful fur neckpieces.

Afternoon Dresses Smart

In a fascinating afternoon dress of black beige, Miss Madeline Bell, opened the show for the evening. The dress had a panel front of white braid which when detached from the dress showed a neckline high at the throat with a cut-out square back. Long tight fine sleeves with a deep cuff of motion sleeves ended in tight cuffs extending to the wrist. The black coat with fine dress had a huge "pillow" collar of black fur. A fetching, transparent velvet gown had a gaunt top of beige velvet. Miss Bell appeared in the finale in a cream evening gown of satin with silver beaded necklace and square decolletage. Its tiny bolero was bright with apricot feathers at the shoulder.

In the popular Burgundy tone, the afternoon dress of Miss Emerson was worn by Miss Emerson, the dress was green transparent velvet shoulder bow making a striking contrast to the dark shade. The matching coat had deep collar of grey wool, with a puff of this material at the wrist. The model for initial wear this autumn was apparently Miss Margaret Bowron in a mocha brown suit with long suzette collar of brown fox fur. Her evening gown was in a brilliant blue shade in velvet, the characteristic was brilliants.

Shipper Blue Popular

A navy blue was introduced when Mrs. Matthewson with success, a skipper blue costume. The afternoon dress had a deep flaring fur collar coming down over the shoulders. The coat was developed in the mornings of grey squirrel, which bordered the cuffs. Her evening gown formed a stand-up collar, that rose high at the back of the head, with white was most unusual. Mrs. Delaney wore a black velvet princess cut model of white satin, interest was centred around the shoulder line which were its only trimming.

Mrs. Brooks' costumes appeared first in a wood brown crepe dress that had original trimming of old gold lace. The coat of the sleeve was made of darker brown crepe, with large fashion buttons. Her coat made the high collar of the brown coat which accompanied the dress. Very collegiate was the sports costume Miss Burgess introduced. It was of black velvet, banded in red and white at the waistline in basketball fashion. Her model for final showing an evening gown of turquoise blue velvet, the shade was crushed strawberry and its fashion was the skirt was trimmed with three flounces and it was unusually high at the neck, with long tight fitting sleeves.

Wood's bid for a place in the fashion spotlight is strong this season and a pretty little dress of wood grey crepe was worn by Miss Marjorie Calnan. This was of lake green with tight neck and full three-quarter length sleeves. Red fox fashioned the collar and cuffs of the coat, which was worn over the dress. The friendly alliance of green and brown was noticeable in the sports dress displayed by this mannequin. The knitted material of brown had a removable jacket, which revealed a striped green and brown blouse with bertel to match, in ice blue satin, the bodice draped in surplice fashion. Miss Calnan made a graceful appearance at the closing of the revue.

Black Crepe

Mrs. M. Brooks wore an interesting gown of black crepe, which was artfully combined with velvet, the cost accompanied by having bertel trimmings of black fur. In a deep brown tone, a suit whose cost adopted the three-quarter length was worn by Mrs. Brooks, the dress having collar, and cuffs of white. Satin and suede lace were also featured in the dress. Brooks' evening gown which had a removable jacket with long sleeves.

As in the evening before, the furs were shown by Delaney's and the modish creations were dazzling for their variety. Wraps for day and evening wear were equally effective and illustrated the features of outstanding fur fashions for the winter. Pilled lines are the keynote in the cloak and even the loopettes were very swagger. Phabion's fur was the matching more mull, made a triumphant appearance last evening and won everyone's favor. It is strictly useful class to a more feminine form; afternoon dresses that will make social affairs a time of quiet elegance, and evening gowns, dramatic and colorful and new and different were all presented in flattering style by the capable mannequins. Coats, in the 1932 mode, that were enhanced brilliantly by the use of fur trimmings not seen in the days of the straight cuff although this is not important, but in the variety of ways in which the fur was applied to the frock.

The alluring hats worn by the mannequins were supplied by Kroch Bros., while the wonderful costumes jewelry, rings and lovely bags were furnished by Angus McPee. Mrs. Matthewson Delaney's also furnished beautiful fur neckpieces.

CAREERS OF FIRESIDE

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Do careers—even if successful—make married life happy? The other day I happened to be lunching in a club where I belong, but I am a non-resident membership. At an adjoining table was a woman, Mr. Brown. Young, whose work in historical research is well known, and whose books on successful women are mentioned, her name is apt to head the list.

Mrs. Brown is a charming, restful things in life for women are marriage and children." Her husband's gasp, and began to remember other "practically married" women who have said practically the same thing.

Achievement, honor, fame, these things in women's lives grow stale and unprofitable. The world's interest runs parallel with them, is detached, impersonal. It is not personal.

Florence Nightingale, who established modern nursing, bitterly regretted turning down the gallant lover her family hoped she would marry. Her natural instincts were amply fulfilled in her life work. Florence was the "mother" of the soldiers called her, mothered multitudes of wild young women who were brought in from the battlefield and hospitals. But she would have been left to die.

And Susan Anthony who gave her life's work women might have educations, professions, and be recognized as human beings, who somehow jobs with pay envelopes, rather than the pathetic beggary of women's relative's roof—never regretted.

But the writing women from George Eliot down on record that the pen and the applause that goes with it, is a fickle thing. The grand old nation seems to be in combine both things. Such women as Elizabeth Asquith Homer, Madame Curie, Ethel Barrymore, and the girl who writes "Dusty Answer"—her name has gone for the moment.

Poor modern women cannot live by motherhood alone, the day of the cave man is over. The eagles the birds have flown. How to adjust life and home industry to these two empty years—that's the question.

Juvenile Revue is Closing Night Program at Karnival

Accomplished Children Give a Complete Show

To fittingly close a great week at the Carnival the Kiwanis Club have arranged the sensational announcement of the week when they announced today that the Juvenile Revue from the Imperial Theatre of Toronto will occupy the stage at the armouries tonight and stage the complete show that has for a week previous here heralded by the press as the most wonderful juvenile production for their age and Toronto public have been flocking to the theatre saying big admissions to see and hear them. The management of the Imperial Theatre kindly consented to cooperate with and help the Kiwanis Club in the staging of funds for welfare work and are sending the show here at a low price of transportation and will leave Toronto by motor early this afternoon. The show lasts the best part of an hour and starts at eight o'clock sharp.

The cow milking contest is proving a big attraction, and it is expected that a full armouries will greet the six ladies when they step on the stage and commence milking operations on the six cows supplied by Moonlight Dairy.

The grand crowning for the hope chest will be held tonight and the ring will take place from the stage. All told it looks like a big night for a great week.

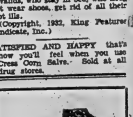
Mayor G. O. Tice will count the votes in the Little Red Cow guessing contest tonight and will present on the platform the Underwood Connor washing machine which is being presented to the winner.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

No perfect lady who has the habit of burning her tears should use mascara on her eyelashes, if she has a weeper and buys all the job, let her lodge to a beauty shop, have eyebrows and eyelashes dyed. This work is being done with brilliant success. The charge is instigated by only a half hour's time is given to the process depending on the brows and lashes being out the color of the soul orbs, make them sparkle, and that every pretty colored lights which peels have so much to say. Incidentally, we may add that pencilled eyebrows, worried down to a single line of over depicted little lunacy, simplex are not so fair any more. Eyebrows have gone normal, thanks be!

Cold cream was devised and created for the purpose of putting healing oils in a more convenient form to handle. Creams stay put better than oils. The skin has a better chance to lap them up. If the complexion is in poor condition, looks thick and horrid, is spread over with discolorations, the emollient should remain on over night. Don't use soap in the morning, just dash on cold water to freshen the epidermis and so bring along a healthy color.



Curls placed low at the back of the head are fashionable. Hair is clipped there; curls that appear in the back are made from the ends of locks that carry the finger wave or the marcel. We're all for the coiffure that has lasting qualities these days and rear curly-ques have proved to be of that character. All right when freshly made, but terrible when old.

Freckles and moth patches are due to the fact that certain skins contain more than usual pigment cells. Complexions of this character get along comfortably in the shade, but until they come in contact with harsh winds and strong sunlight. Then is the big up. They need quantities of cream, which acts as a barrier against influences that bring yallery polka dots to the surface.

An ingrown toe nail is caused by a narrow shoe. Have the nail treated as often as you will, if pressure continues, discomfort will return. Invalids, who stay in bed, who need no shoes, are rid of all the foot ills.

QUIET UPWARD TREND UPON MARKET

Rise inCarloadings is More Than Seasonal Says Report

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.— Stocks moved ahead quietly today, with rails providing most of the momentum.

The rise in car loading figures, amounting to 88,478 for the week ended September 17, was regarded as more than seasonal after making allowance for the let-down during the preceding week when Labor Day curtailed traffic. An improvement of substantial proportions had appeared, however, and so also had the agreement between Eastern and Railroad Executives on consolidations.

Prior the opening, railroad stocks showed up a point or so, and while most of these gains brought to the close against sales of profit-taking character, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, New Haven were up a point or two; at the last, Similar advances were made by several western carrier, including Santa Fe and Union Pacific.

Wheat and cotton prices were firm, which encouraged stocks. Of 4 Cars sold around 1 point to 3 points and gains of 2 to 3 were made by Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Piggott and Myers B., American Telephone, Temples Gas, Texas Union and Macy. The Motors, after showing weakness yesterday, rallied, although Mack Truck jumped 2 points to a new 1932 high. Steels also steadied, following their Friday slump. Sales approximated 1,200,000 shares.

International Nickel, Ford were slightly higher and Brazilian Traction unchanged. Consolidated Smelters firmed to advance about 50c.

MINE SHARES ARE STRONGER

Balance Quiet But Irregularly Higher in Demand

Toronto, Sept. 24—Prices among interlisted stocks displayed a strong tendency in somewhat heavy trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. Balance of list was quiet but irregularly higher in trend.

Noranda moved up 4 points to 36 cent gain and Nickel was up 25 to end. Sudbury Basin eased 3.

Lake Shore met renewed demand and advanced 50 to 54. Kirkland Lake and Teck Hughes firmed 10 each and gains ranging up to 4 cents appeared in Wright Hargreaves, Sylvanite and Brett Trethewey. Parkhill Lake gold and Hower eased a cent apiece. Among the issues fractional advances were recorded by Algoma Mining, McFood River and Malrobic.

Oils were mixed, with Penn Pete up a cent and Vacuum and Homestead slightly firmer.

Products of Home and Field Attracts N. Hasting Citizenry As Marmora Holds Fall Fair

Best Fair in History of Society is Opinion of All

Such was the concensus of opinion of the officials of the Marmora Agricultural Society with regard to the annual fair which was held on Thursday and Friday. This was agreed to by those who attended the two afternoon. A good fair will always attract visitors and this was no exception to the rule. All exhibitors went with each other in making a fine showing which was appreciated by the officials. The displays in the various classes were all that could have been desired and visitors were amazed at the various parts of Hastings County in view there. In the two main buildings the compartments were filled with displays of ladies' work, fine art, floral exhibits, fruit, vegetables, grain and domestic science exhibits. In one of the buildings was an interesting display of children's work by pupils of the village schools. It was one that did credit to their teachers and showed commendable attention. Ladies' work was fine, artistic skill and patience in the making of many of the articles.

Upon the grounds was to be seen an exceptionally large number of cattle, with Holsteins and Jerseys predominating. The number of entries was in excess of previous years. There was also a fine display of horses, sheep and swine.

Attractions on the grounds and solid drink stands did a thriving business. It was every inch a fall afternoon of rare enjoyment. The speeding up was also enjoyed to be a feature of the afternoon as did the other games which were played. The officials are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts to provide an attractive fair.

ALLEGES ACID IS DRIPPED OVER FACE

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—Talling a grotesque tale of how acid was poured over the head and wired to a table while unconscious and then returned his face, feet and clothes, Arthur Owen today gave evidence against Harold Barnes, charged with assaulting Owen with intent to rob and with administering bodily harm.

Owen, employee of a local Storage Battery Company, said he had been struck on the head and kicked in the stomach. When he recovered consciousness, he said, he was lying down on the bed

TEA LEAVES

By Jack M. Hanley

"I know you don't think so, but you're going to take a trip soon in the future, and should say, I feel that you want to, but you're afraid you won't. Well, you needn't worry you will."

Zara set the cup into the saucer and smiled up into the intent face of the listener. "Isn't that your fate?"

The woman's mouth dropped slightly at the corners, then she was fat, forty and fatuous.

"Well, I never!" she exclaimed. "You surely did guess me right, young lady. How ever did you know that?"

Bright blue eyes gazed serenely into small brown ones. "It's in your cup, madam," Zara answered, rising. Then as a silver coin was tendered: "Thank you — I hope you'll come again." She was off to another table where a party of shoppers was beckoning furiously.

"I'm so glad she's gone, my dear," one of them was saying. "You give her entirely too much. I've brought my friends to be read, Zara."

A motherly looking woman gazed into Zara's face.

"But she's fat a child!"

Zara reddened slightly, to the roots of her pale, gold hair. "I can read your tongue just the same," she answered, "and I'm not a child."

She turned the cup around three times and gazed intently at the leaves. As she read the leaves, mechanically, her mind went on repeatedly, on another track. Why did they all have to make the same remark? She wasn't a child — she was a good twenty years old. And she was sick of telling fortunes for gloeful shopees and gushing schoolgirls. Still she couldn't let on the fact that she was young — and very blonde — and — well, she was baby-faced after all. But it made her stand out among the dark synthetic girls who were the other readers and secured her many customers. She had to see her fresh young face across the table. Besides she could read tea leaves, very well.

Then HE came into the tea shop. And of course, asked for the little blonde girl to read him. Zara felt a queer palpitation as she turned his cup around and stole a quick look at his face. He was young but about twenty-eight, grey eyed and deeply tanned as he stared solemnly at her.

She began the usual formula. "Make a wish."

"I've already made three," he answered.

She glanced up quickly to see if he was joking, but he met her gaze with inquiring candor.

"I meant it," he assured her. "The three wishes I've already made."

She had quickly decided he wasn't being bold. She'd have hated for him to have been fresh. Then as she looked incorrigibly:

"The third?"

He looked slightly injured.

"After all, you were supposed to read me, weren't you?" he said, innocently enough. "The first two came true already, you see." There was a slight twinkle of amusement in his eyes.

Zara's lips tightened slightly. She began reading the tea leaves for him.

"Pardon me," he interrupted, "but what is your name?"

"I'm Miss Zara," she said.

"Zara?" He looked shocked. "You couldn't be — Zara is a dark, fiery girl with bushy black hair, Willie you——" he pondered for a moment, "are a dewy rosebud," he finished with an air of finality, "Your name isn't really Zara is it? Please say no."

There is was again! Only this time Zara was sort of glad she was young after all. But she must pull him in his place. She raised her brows, prepared to be severe, but the look of pained pleading in his face was too much for her.

"It isn't really Zara — it's Jo Anne," she smiled. "Zara is the name I work under."

"That's much better. And I'm sure you're not a gypsy either. No gypsy ever had pale gold hair and shiny blue eyes and a round——"

"If you say 'baby-face' I'll throw the leaves at you," she said. But still she hadn't minded nearly so much as she pretended. "Anyhow are you giving the reading or am I?" She frowned intently to look at the tea leaves.

"You're thinking of making a trip," she said.

He nodded. "A business trip."

Then her heart sank, as she took another look.

"And — you're in love with someone," she said in a small weak voice. "Oh, I'm sorry, I'm sorry myself for feeling so upset over it. But there it was.

"You know, you're reading marvellous," he was saying. "Can you tell me, will I wheel?"

She shook her head. "But you haven't known her very long."

He nodded gloomily. "Not nearly long enough. Tell me, do you think she'll have me?"

Zara — or Jo-Anne — was figuring hard. Looking from black and blue; the idea of letting a strange young man go off to propose to and win one who was in love with someone else was a horrible stab at the heart.

"She'll have you," she murmured, and blinked furiously. "I'm afraid I'll have to leave you now."

"Wait a minute . . ."

She turned eagerly, anxious to get away from this upsetting stranger with the dark brown eyes and the funny, solemn way of talking.

"You haven't told me if I get my wish?"

Jo-Anne gulped, eyes down. "I'm afraid you will," she said miserably.

He stopped her again shaking his head incredulously.

"I don't really seem possible — are you sure?"

"I'm sure-sorry-positive . . ."

If she didn't get away she'd do something foolish. "I've got to go — I'm another."

And with truly feminine lack of logic she hurried back to the dressing room leaving him still shaking his head in solemn incredulity.

"I'm seventeen kinds of a fool," she thought miserably. "But why are all the nice boys in love?"

For the next month Jo-Anne watched for him daily, and each day she was disappointed.

"He's probably married the girl and gone off on his honeymoon," she thought; then fell down as she wretched. The steady round of customers was twice as boring as before; the love affairs she classed seemed twice as silly. And still he didn't return.

Then when Jo-Anna had resigned herself with a dull ache to the realization that he would probably never return he came in, looking happier than usual.

Jo-Anne's heart leaped wildly as she raced to add insult to injury by remarked of anymore jewelry. She told her the FIREMEN SLEEP ON THE FIRST FLOOR AND PROVIDE TWO BREAD LINES INSTEAD OF ONE.

"That is where those babies are" thought he, and ran back, taking care to keep under cover as much as possible. Mrs. Lightfoot drove Mrs. Reddy out of that thicket and the latter had hard luck to dodge those sharp-edged hoofs. But she did shed her Mr. Lightfoot some distance. Meanwhile Reddy was in that thicket searching carefully for those hidden fawns. When Mrs. Lightfoot returned she had driven out as she had driven Mrs. Reddy out. It was Reddy's turn to chuckle inwardly. Mrs. Lightfoot knew where those babies were.

When either of the Foxes approached the thicket in which the fawns were hidden their mother appeared to take no interest, but would guard in front of the thicket from which she had driven them and dashed at them angrily if they ventured to approach.

"There are in there somewhere," said Reddy, as he panted for breath after an exciting game of tag with Mrs. Lightfoot.

"They must be, but for the life of me I don't see how they can be, for I have been all through that thicket," replied Mrs. Reddy.

"I guess we will have to actually step on one to find it," said Reddy. "She certainly has those babies well taught. Well, I've got my wind, so I will lead her off again and you make another search of the thicket.

This was done, but the result was as fruitless as before.

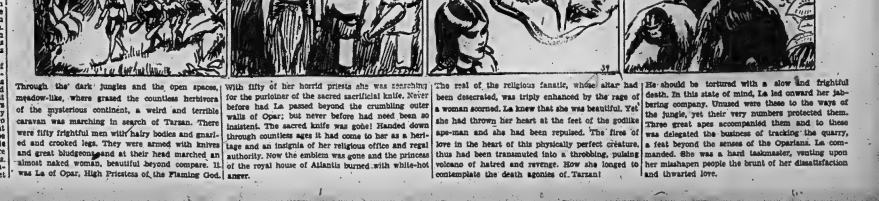
Cunning Meet is Cunning

When cunning is by cunning met,

—Old Mother Nature



Reddy Fox is generally counted the most cunning of all the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. He comes of a family famous for wit and cunning. This also is true of Lightfoot the Deer and his family. There are times when Lightfoot is quite as cunning and clever as Reddy, and there are times when Reddy's foot is even more cunning.

Mrs. Lightfoot had need of all her cunning. Yes, sir, she had need of every bit of cunning she possessed. She had a precious secret to keep from certain hungry people who, if they suspected it, would do their best to find it out. She knew that one of them suspected it, and that one was Reddy Fox. She knew that he suspected that she had babies carefully hidden in a thicket in the Green Forest and that although she had driven him away once he would return. She suspected that when he did return Mrs. Reddy would be with him, they would be very cunning in their efforts to find those precious babies and she must be just as cunning in keeping her secret.

To help her in this she each of those little fawns moved to another part of the thicket before their home. There they crouched with their necks stretched out along the ground and their ears laid back, lying motionless they might readily be mistaken for two small logs on which the sunlight or moonlight as the case might be broken by the leafy branches, made little spots. It is really they were the white spots of the little coats. Then Mrs. Lightfoot went off to another thicket not too far away, yet not too near and there she browsed at her leisure, and chewed her cud, but always with nose, ears and eyes on guard. It was there that Reddy and Mrs. Reddy found her. They discovered her before she did them and for a while they watched and noted that she never went far from a certain spot in that thicket. Reddy and Mrs. Reddy looked at each other knowingly. Those babies must be hidden in that part of the thicket.

Reddy got to his feet and walked out in plain sight of Mrs. Lightfoot. Instantly she dashed at him, her usually soft eyes blazing with anger. Reddy dodged and ran toward the thicket where the babies really were, but Mrs. Lightfoot followed only half way, then turned back. She was just in time to save Mrs. Reddy slipping into that thicket. Instantly Mrs. Lightfoot plunged into that thicket after her, Reddy, who had stopped to watch grinned.

Reddy got to his feet and walked out into plain sight of Mrs. Lightfoot

"The Ringer" Opens "Thrill Week" at Capitol

Theatregoers are looking forward with much interest to the forthcoming showing of "The Ringer," the Edgar Wallace mystery-thriller, which is to be the attraction at the Capitol Theatre for two days starting Monday.

The story of "The Ringer" was first given to the world by Edgar Wallace in his book, "The Gunup Strangers" and is commended as enormous sale. It was turned into a stage play under the title of "The Ringer" and ran for 51 weeks at Wyndham's Theatre, London, and was seen by several hundred thousand people. Subsequently it was staged throughout the province and proved by far the most successful touring play for years. The play was then taken to the United States, where its great Scottish humour was explained.

It is worthy of note that though classed as a crime story, it is entirely different from the kind that has flooded the country. There are none of the familiar gangsters, no blazing scenes of brutality; in fact, there is only one crime and that is done with the lights down.

"The Ringer"—much sought by the police and always evading them—had paid a fleeting visit to London. While there he had entrusted his sister to the care of a shady solicitor named Meister, with a grim warning of what would happen to him should he play false. Meister betrayed his trust. The players, which comprises such favorites as Paric Darwen, Franklin Dyrell, John Longdon, Carol Goodner and last, but not least, Gordon Harker, whose finished performance as the butler is a gem of artistry and humour. The sheer entertainment "The Ringer" is a film that nobody should miss.

Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights" and Buck Jones in "Branded" will be shown tonight for the last times. complete performances commencing at 7.15 and 8.30.

A glance at the programme offered the Capitol's thrill week is evidence of good fare at the popular downtown theatre this coming week.

Sept. 24 sharp lookout for "The Ringer's" inevitable return for vengeance. They engaged a clever criminologist, Dr. Lomond, to help them, but could not track down the Ringer. One night, in the presence of police and the doctor, the lights in Meister's room went suddenly out. Meister was discovered stabbed to the heart. Whence had come the fatal dagger? Who was the elusive "Ringer"?

Many critics claims that the busy brain of Edgar Wallace turned out its best production in "The Ringer" and was seen by several hundred thousand people. Subsequently it was staged throughout the province and proved by far the most successful touring play for years.

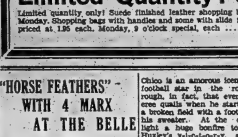
"HORSE FEATHERS" WITH 4 MARX AT THE BELLE



If it's really a long, loud laugh that this country needs, Belleville-ites can get their share of it at the Belle Theatre today, Monday or Tuesday, matinee daily, when the Four Marx Brothers, more cocoanuty than ever, are cavorting about in "Horse Feathers."

This time the setting is dear old Huxley College, with all four of the Marx-men determined to fight fiercely for their alma mammy the Chico is an amorous lothario and a football star in the rough— so rough, in fact, that when the fierce goals when he starts through, a broken field with a football under his sweater. At the end, they light a bags bonfire to celebrate Huxley's ra-ta-ta-ta-ta, and what matter that the college itself burns down while these nit-wit Neros fiddle, dance and carvet about with the campus cuties? It's all in fun.

A particularly able cast plays "straight" for the Marxes, for the others haven't a chance in the brilliance that the stars radiate. Pretty, blonde Thelma Todd and Florine McKinney, a brunette, but equally attractive, contribute the feminine interest; David Landau is the "heavy," and effective bits are contributed by Nat Pendelton, Jas. Pierce, and Robert Greig, the latter as the bearded Professor Horneyoggle whose passage-at-arms with Groucho Marx is good for several laughter.

"Grand Hotel" Coming

"Grand Hotel," Vicki Baum's brilliant stage and screen success featuring Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore and Jean Hersholt, opens at the Belle on Saturday, September 24, at regular prices. "Grand Hotel" recently finished a five months engagement at the Astor Theatre, New York, at prices ranging from $2.50 among the first theatres in Canada to exhibit this attraction at less than $1.50 prices.

POLICE HUNT OF 5 MONTHS COMES TO END

One Youth Captured When He Sought Food and Shelter

POLICE LOST

Boys Made Forest Hiding Place And Then Foraged

Halifax, Sept. 24 (CP) — Driven by hunger to emerge from his rain-soaked hiding place in the Devon woods, Edgar Morton fell into the hands of the police late last night when he sought food and shelter at a farm house.

McEwan and his companion, Albert Frank Smith, charged with breaking and entering, had eluded the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for three days. The mounties were called in when county constables had sought vainly since April to make the arrests. Forced to leave the camp they had lived in for several months while dodging the county constables, they were believed to be without food.

All summer they played a game of Robin Hood with the county constables of the district, escaping in spectacular fashion after visits to Devon village.

Advancing into the virgin forests, wading streams swollen by heavy rain, crossing and marshland, the officers failed yesterday to catch a glimpse of the defiant pair who have been wanted for five months.

During the afternoon the police were lost in the forest after losing themselves to do much hunting. Shortly after noon Constable Louis Ecker of the Halifax detachment strayed from the others. He spent two hours searching for him.

SCHOONERS ARE STILL MISSING

Maybe Have Been Swept Far Out to Sea

Halifax, Sept. 24 (CP)—The two small schooners Beebe and Maude Thornhill, with their complement of twelve, continued missing.

Carrying Captain Bart Dunphy and three others, the Beebe was last sighted by Cape Sienon coast last Saturday. There was no geographical area that it would take days for the craft to return to Canso. She was swept far out to sea.

The Maude Thornhill, commanded by Captain Stanley Hirtle, was reported since she left Port Aux Basques, Nfld.

Wreckage found at Drum Head, it was believed to be part of a dory from the schooner Catherine Patara, last reported at Long Point Harbour, Labrador, two weeks ago.

The dory wreckage bore the name L. A. Thornton, and dores from the Gloucesterman of that name, now tied up at Gloucester, had been carried by the Patara. The probability, fishermen thought, was that the dory had been washed overboard.

MINERS NOW BACK TO WORK

National Guard Protects Miners as They Return

Taylorville, Ill., Sept. 24 —Tear gas and smoke bombs of the militia burst in the streets of Lanigleville yesterday, clearing the way for union miners to go to work through pickets of a new rival union who refuse to abide by the new $5.50 wage scale.

Through a searing, biting crowd the National Guardsmen pushed their way.

Machine guns looked menacingly down the street from each end of the village. In platoons of six, bayonets fixed, the guards marched into town, tossing gas bombs ahead to clear the way.

The pickets converged in small numbers overnight from nearby towns.

Many residents joined them in the streets. As dawn came the soldiers marched in, warning that there would be no loitering or picketing. Roads in Langleyville from every direction were patrolled by the Guardsmen to make the way safe for the 300 miners to go back to the mine.

LIBERALS RETAIN SEAT IN WALES

Cardigan, Wales, Sept. 24 (AP)—Owen Frank Liberal, won a by-election in this parliamentary district yesterday polling 13,437 votes against 8,866 for the Conservative, Col. E. C. L. Pitzwilliam and 5,295 for a labor candidate, the Rev. D. M. Jones.

The vacancy was caused by the appointment of the sitting Liberal member as a magistrate.

Shortages of $100,000 May be Result of Audit In Department Accounts

One Bank Account in Existence For Nine Years

NO COLLUSION

Alfred Cuddy of Police Called Back From Vacation

Toronto, Sept. 24—Probing deeper into the affairs of Lieut. Austin, arrested provincial treasury bond clerk, police Friday discovered that his fictitious bank account under the name of Harry Taylor, has been in existence nine years. On the assumption that this account was started at the time he first began the alleged thefts, it is believed the shortages will run well over $50,000, if not nearly twice that amount.

So seriously does Queen's Park officialdom regard the situation that Deputy Commissioner of Provincial Police Alfred Cuddy was recalled from his summer vacation to take charge of the investigation. Yesterday the deputy commissioner armed his investigators with pictures of Austin and sent them to every bank in the city in an effort to trace other bank accounts which the accused man might possess.

The alleged defalcations, police believe, started while Peter Smith was in office as provincial treasurer and continued under three succeeding treasurers, Hon. W. H. Price, Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, and the present occupant, Hon. E. A. Dunlop.

Province Paid Twice

The province has paid twice on the coupons which it is charged Austin appropriated, Hon. Mr. Dunlop admitted yesterday. The minister denied the truth of rumors that other employees of the department would be suspended during the investigation. Austin was not the slightest suspicion of collusion in the affair, he declared. It was admitted, though that a degree of carelessness, excusable under the peculiar circumstances might be attached to the audit department.

Earning $2,000 a year, Austin was able to buy a home for $12,000 on which he made a substantial down payment, purchase a summer cottage, employ a maid, and operate an automobile, provincial police said after their investigations. An examination of his two bank accounts revealed much enlightening information which Deputy Commissioner Cuddy declined to reveal entirely.

"He seems to have been in debt a great deal," declared Mr. Cuddy. "This may be a blind, however, and we are endeavoring to locate other assets. There may be other bank accounts that I am inclined to think he had only the two."

Bail Raised $25,000

The deputy commissioner admitted that the $20,000 bond covering Austin would not nearly make up the shortages. If money had been taken more or less regularly for a period of nine years it would amount to a great deal more than had been discovered up to now, it was pointed out.

The system of handling coupons will be changed as a result of the discovery of the missing coupons, Hon. Mr. Dunlop stated. The provincial treasurer is actively directing affairs and the audit of the coupons under way. He mentioned that Austin's bond was raised last year from $10,000 to $20,000.

John Miller and Charles Gurnett are working on the case under direction of Deputy Commissioner Cuddy.

LIKELY TO ISSUE LOAN

Sum Raised Used to Pay Off Retiring Debentures

Ottawa, Sept. 24—(By The Canadian Press)—Canada will probably issue a loan this fall for a modest sum, while no definite decision has been made, suggestions are that the loan will be for about $50,000,000.

This loan would be an internal one, payable in Canadian money. The issue, it is understood would carry interest at 1-2 per cent.

Issue of this loan would be likely for the purpose of taking care of $34,000,000 residium of a war loan which is payable on November 1. This amount is the remainder of a 1922 war refunding loan.

Canada has treasury notes totalling $45,000,000 coming due in New York on December 1 at 5 per cent. The whole question of the renewal of this loan in New York is to be considered by the Dominion government with the likelihood of action along these lines; but a decision at the moment there is no definite decision.

In other words, it is learned, the Canadian loan situation remains in the same position as forecasted a month ago. Early authorization and announcement by the government is expected.

"Going Up".

"The Hearts Content", gallant little Puss Moth plane that carried her courageous pilot, Captain J. A. Mollison, on the first East to West solo flight across the Atlantic, went up in new style at Welda Farm, Cores, Quebec, recently.

Obeying the orders of his physician and the request of his backer, Lord Wakefield, Captain Mollison decided to return to England in the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain," so a monoplane went, too, and is seen being hoisted over the side of the liner.

Inset is Captain Mollison wearing a dressing to National Light Aeroplane Club pilots who toured past the Empress of Britain in a flying farewell.

It added, however, that the cabinet noted the agreement reached in India covered certain questions outside of the communal award. These it pointed out, deal with questions likely to arise primarily on the actual working of the constitution and which must be left to be decided by the government, such as the actual level of the representation of the depressed classes and the method of electing representatives.

MAN HUMAN IN ALL AGES

Call For Generosity is Applicable to all Times Says Preacher

Warning to those who might be led astray by the prevailing unsettled state of modern civilization that the Deuteronomic and Christian ideals suffered for the duty long ago and were not applicable to the present day, was given by Rev. Dr. Ferris in preaching at the harvest festival services in Christ Church on Sunday evening. His proof of this was the fact that in spite of the decadence of the days of the Monarchies and of knowledge of nature's laws humanity was the same then yesterday and today and will be the same tomorrow. He quoted many of the statement that modern man has not been able to invent a single new sin. Sin is sin and has the burden of life with its sins and its struggles.

Taking his text in Deuteronomy where the injunction is not to muzzle the ox when he is treading out the corn, Dr. Wright said the ox was a symbol of the toiler, be it man or for an agricultural people, few in numbers, who had the privilege of coming in contact with the larger civilizations. Christianity made no difference between us and those people of Deuteronomic days. The argument that woman is no different today from the man or woman of Deuteronomic times.

After telling that no new sin had been invented in modern times, Dr. Wright directed a remark to his people: "Do you think you are the one fool you. You are the same as the people of Deuteronomic days or the days of Christ. Sin is essentially man in every age of the world's history. It is the same old story of ingratitude. There is such a thing as being ungrateful."

Harvest time in ancient days taught the lesson of avoiding meanness. Man should not heap up the last sheaf forgoten in the field and the corner of the field, but for the heroes and widows. "Today," said Dr. Wright, "we have a land so rich I shall be tremendously happy. But you cannot gather up the last sheaf and you will not be allowed from life. A spirit of greasiness will destroy all possibility of happiness in life."

Open-Handedness

Nothing was said in the text against industry and thrift, though, indeed they are commanded, but "if you get everything for yourself, you fall and are unhappy. If you forget your duty to everything but yourself you are going to make yourself the most wretched of men.

"Open-handedness is demanded of us by God. Leave something behind, don't grasp at all. Leave something for the stranger, the fatherless and the widow."

"The standard still makes his appeal," said the preacher. In Deuteronomy God does not condone wickedness, does not say anything as to the cause of trouble or sickness, but he does demand that we recognize the partnership of God in our property and that the fatherless have a claim upon us.

"Today this message comes with particularly strong force. God says 'don't squeeze the last penny. Don't live too closely."

The church was decorated with the produce of garden and field, symbolic of the riches of Providence. Among the floral tributes in memory of the late Sir Gilbert Parker were contributions of the Anglican communion in Belleville in this early days was very close.

FESTIVAL NO NEW CREATION

Harvest Thanksgiving Dates Back Into Hebrew Period

With the church decorated with fruits, vegetables, flowers, grains and other produce of the soil the annual Harvest Festival was celebrated at Holloway Street United church on Sunday morning. Rev. J. H. Neal conducted both harvest festal services and both morning and evening saw large congregation present.

"If the harvest should ever fail unusually, mankind would starve," said Rev. Mr. Neal after choosing the 11th verse of the 65th Psalm "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness", for his text. The speaker asked his audience what that phrase would think of the present day harvest if he had penned his phrase today.

"The harvest festival is no new invention," pointed out Mr. Neal as he referred to Cena, the ancient Greek god of the harvest, who was said to have come each autumn in the same identical feathods employ. And today," the speaker went on to relate how wheat was known to be ten thousand years old but that cultivation went down through the ages until today we had the greatest yield of grain and wheat. The speaker told of how Jethro Tull had taken one single grain of wheat and experimented upon it; at Ottawa in 1919 there were 25 million Bushels of wheat were harvested from the same number of acres, 1931 yielded 400 million bushels of wheat, said the Rev. Mr. Neal.

Describing the ancient method of harvesting Mr. Neal pointed out that barley was first harvested, then wheat which was followed by the harvesting of oats and corn, concluding the following this annual procedure the harvest festival was established. Harvest time as it is today by the church. The speaker pointed out that the blessings were we today should be thankful for the harvest. Every man should realize and labor connected with the tilling of the soil recognize the fact and should point out that man today could do without industries but that he could not do without agriculture. Man is no longer as we more dependent upon the products of the soil than perhaps he was in the second instance Rev. Mr. Neal quoted from the Bible the word harvest frequently but not in a material sense, but rather in a spiritual sense to the spiritual harvest", explained the preacher as he said in so say that the harvest still expected man to harvest the spiritual harvest from God. He had taught.

Mr. Neal related the sacrifice and work connected with a loaf of bread. First the seed is sown, grows, ripens, harvested, threshed, milled and and later the baker turns out the loaf. "No matter what one studies in there is sacrifice," explained Rev. Mr. Neal as he went on to say that God went good for intellectual and moral living as well as the material world.

Rev. Mr. Neal spoke briefly on the spirit of dependence and on conclusion pointed out that man is entirely dependent upon God for existence. "Man cannot produce, nor can science alone," he said. "This has taught man to say "Give us this day our daily bread."

The choir of the church was assisted by Mrs. Hall, soloist, and Mrs. Herbert Bunting, pianist-in-music. All the music and hymns of the service were in praise of harvest and of Providence.

Wins Milking Contest in Two And Half Minutes

Saturday evening saw the largest crowd of the season at the annual Kiwanis Carnival and closed the week's festivities in a riot of entertainment. The Toronto Kiddies' Revue and the novel milking contest were the platform attractions and provided a programme of keen enjoyment.

The Toronto Kiddies' Revue of ten children is a splendid organization, its small members possessing real talent and stage presence. The programme was opened by a fifteen-year old pianist whose solos and accompaniments were wonderful. The entire company then appeared singing and dancing and won instant applause. A boy singer in an amusing imitation of a gentleman slightly under the weather was followed by Irene Hetherington of them all in a dainty frock of ruffled organdy with a huge yellow ribbon on her curls appeared with a boy not much bigger in an interesting song and dance number.

A gay cakewalk in colorful costume sang in a splendid fashion the well known song and a dashing military figure in blue took the stage for a spirited dance. An acrobatic number that showed real dexterous skill was next and was followed by a jaunty tar in a sailor's hornpipe.

The finale of the show brought it to a head with a typical Spanish plaque. It was the Wedding of the Painted Doll. First the bride was made, little beauties in lovely costumes of rainbow net with skirts touching the ground appeared. The bride was Betty Jane in her old-fashioned costume with puffed sleeves and trailing skirt. The dancing preacher and the handsome bridegroom completed the scene and as the curtain fell on a very lovely presentation of the "Painted Doll."

Throughout the evening Slim Burgess acted as Kiddies' Commissioner. When the Kiddies' Revue was delayed for a few minutes he kept the audience in the crowd chuckling and once again was responsible for the introduction of Amos 'n Andy to which he added a little Scots Burns' flavor. The effect was delicious, one would actually believe that the radio favorites were doing a turn. Slim's part in the Carnival Sign made a very capable Commissioner, keeping things going and the crowd got with his every act.

He excelled himself when the Milking Contest approached. While the Kiddies' Revue was delayed for a few minutes he kept the crowd chuckling and once again was responsible for the introduction of Amos 'n Andy to which he added a little Scots Burns' flavor. The effect was delicious, one would actually believe that the radio favorites were doing a turn. Slim's part in the Carnival Sign made a very capable Commissioner, keeping things going and the crowd got with his every act.

He excelled himself when the Milking Contest approached. While the Kiddies' Revue was delayed for a few minutes he kept the crowd in the Monroe Dairy were being coaxed up the ramp from the barn. Slim never kept the audience informed on their progress and announcements of the entries, a big spin announcers, was very good.

The milking contest, the most original competition ever sponsored by the Kiwanis Carnival Association was a wonderful attraction and was responsible for the attendance of many of the hundreds of people who visited the park on Saturday night. Five women took part and the contest only lasted three minutes, the one filling the gallon jar first receiving the ten dollars. Mrs. Roy Tracey of Elzhland Park, was first, finishing in two and one-half minutes. Mrs. Charles Hamilton of Foxboro, was second. The others taking part were Miss Thelma Loucks of Belleville, R.R. No. 2; Mrs. S. Gordon of Corcyville and Mrs. Wm. Smith of Belleville.

After the contest the main floor of the Armouries was cleared for dancing with Chas. Coyer's orchestra providing a lively dance programme. There was a large crowd on hand and this part of the programme, too, was a complete success.

ARCH MASONS AT SERVICE

Grand First Principal Attends Worship at St. Thomas'

Royal Arch Masons representing Prince Edward District No. 11 participated in Divine Worship on Sunday in St. Thomas Church, it being the occasion of the official visit of Right Ex. Comp. Dr. C. W. Heantschel, M. E. Grand First Principal Grand Canada to this district. He will be further entertained on Monday evening when a banquet will be tendered and at which he will be the principal speaker will be held at Christ Church Parish Hall. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas delivered an inspiring sermon to the large number of Companions present, practically every chapter in the district being represented. The parade from Christ Church Parish Temple, Front Street, Rt. Ex. Comp. C. H. Connolly, Grand Master of Ceremonies and Companions Tulley and Howard Anglin, Grand Stewards bearers. The Grand 2 marched with Rt. Ex. Comp. A. E. Hudgins, District Superintendent and Most Ex. Comp. Col. W. N. Ponton, Past Grand 2 of the Grand Chapter. The parade marched the length of Front Street and along Bridge St. E. to St. Thomas Church and returning to the Temple, marched along John St. to Victoria Avenue and thence along Victoria Avenue to Front St., and then to the Temple.

The building of a sure and stable arch with Christ as the Keystone of the arch was the message left with the Companions by the Vicar Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne. "It is the object of particular masonry, he said the speaker, taking his text from the 1st chapter of St. John and the first verse, "in the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God. The speaker said the arch built on the Temple of God is not a desire for the spectacular," and the text was "but is the culmination of a penitup desire of creating from labor and benevolence the temple of the Lord His presence." Asking the question "What is the Word?" the speaker answered by stating it was the living Christ, the word made flesh of God. The minister showed how the Royal Arch Masonry stands are patterned on divine laws. God finally created man in His own image and believing in His own creation sent His only son to light the way unto salvation. "Some are true stones," he said believe in the arch and the others are thrown among the rubbish. Today," he said, "it is our duty to do is follow the principles of the obligation and take for his keystone Christ."

Exchange Bills Need not Jump Hydro Rates, Commission Says

Municipalities Can Use Local Surpluses, Provincial Body States

Toronto, Sept. 26 — Additional contributions by Hydro municipalities to cover increased capital charges on the provincial Hydro debt, and the unfavorable commercial rate of exchange between Canada and the United States should not necessitate revision of local rates to the consumer, a statement issued by the Ontario Hydro Commission claims.

Replying to representations made by municipalities that the provincial commission draw on its reserves to cover this increased cost, the commission points out that municipalities themselves have surpluses and are financially in a position to pay such assistance by drawing on their surpluses.

Mayor Stewart stated that the Toronto Hydro Commission would meet on Friday morning. Provided the statement resolved the commission today, the question would be dealt with then.

Increased Hydro indebtedness resulting from exchange, the statement of the provincial commission claims, is of a temporary and abnormal cost of power, just as much as interest on capital invested is a part of the actual cost. It further claims that provincial reserves have been accumulated for such purposes, have been collected from municipalities at the commission's discretion that is applicable to apportionment of the cost, so that, to take care of exchange out of the commission's reserves would not necessarily result in discrimination against some municipalities and in favor of others.

Trustees for All

"In the application of general policies for the good of all," the statement asserts, the Commission feels justified in counting not only upon co-operation from the various municipalities with the commission, in order to secure results in the common interest, and thus to take matter of the present problem of exchange the commission feels that the position that there should be no necessity to such problem would involve discrimination as between individual municipalities.

"When it is suggested that the commission should draw upon certain of its reserves in order to take care of indebtedness incurred thru' charges for exchange upon United States' funds, an important fact is disregarded, namely that the funds which have been collected for these reserves were designed to take care of the increased cost of power by obsolescence of the plant generally, and stabilization of commodity prices and should be held available for such purposes. The reserves have been collected from the various municipalities on a basis different also is from that applicable to apportionment of exchange costs; so that the suggestion that in favor of charges exchange out of the commission's reserves would necessarily result in a discrimination against some municipalities in favor of others."

Adjust Power Costs

"The commission, as trustee of the municipalities, is obliged by law and by its agreements already in force to adjust the cost of power to the municipalities, and one of the important items for consideration is the invested in the construction of the power and distributing works. A large proportion of these funds is secured by the Province of Ontario, which requires the payment of interest and principal by the United States funds and, consequently, in view of the unfavorable conditions of exchange the commission has been obliged to pay larger sums for interest, principal and for reserves for this purpose have in the past been provided or provided.

"After full consideration of the strong financial position of the municipalities the commission deemed it best in the common interest to deal with the situation by making an additional charge, to be paid making interest and sinking fund bill, as an addition to the monthly payment for power cost, rather that making payments in a lump sum at the end of the year. In almost all instances the local commissioners are financially in a position to pay such payments, and especially so, since as indicated by the commission's investigation, such payments will not necessitate a revision of the local rates to the consumers of the municipalities.

Surpluses Returned

"It should be appreciated that year-by year, any surplus resulting from the operations of the Hydro Commission has been returned to the municipalities. The Provincial Municipal Hydro systems have accumulated surplus funds which are over corresponding to the reserves of the commission, but also have accumulated additional operating surplus and thus the total operating surplus represents the profit of their operating surplus, but also that resulting from their investments as operators.

"The in the care of the Hydro municipalities the financial position of the utilities is exceptionally sound. The total plant value of the municipal electrical utilities as at December 31st, 1931, amounts to $ 36,551,982.32, with total accumulated reserves and surpluses amounting to $53,233,314.48—or 61.5 per cent of the total plant value. These reserves and surpluses are divided, $21,853,591.21 for sinking fund and debt retirement; $13,441,179.51 for renewals or depreciation, and a surplus accounting to $18,038,543.76. On the other hand, the total investment of the Commission for power properties—according to the Treasury System—as of October 31st, 1931, as $260,418,645.35; with reserves to the amount of $24,779,264.25, which reserves are 501 22.57 per cent. of the capital investment. These are apportioned $21,894,972.86 for sinking fund; $30,254,776.55 for depreciation or renewals, and $17,150,-906.13 for contingencies and obsolescence of the plant generally and stabilization of generating costs.

"In the case of the municipalities served from the Niagara System the estimated total increase in interest charges, due to exchange, is $1,016,-764.00, and is proportioned to an added interest charge of about six-tenths of 1 per cent. on the proportionate share of the capital on which interest is charged to the various municipalities during the year 1931."

SUDDEN DIZZY SPELL FATAL

Father of Six Expires, and Analysis of Stomach is Ordered

Boston, Sept. 26—Strychnine poisoning is believed to have caused the mysterious death Sunday morning of William Coon, a 53 year old farmer of Schomberg, a township between Boston and Schomberg.

Admiralty counsel to final play, the police and Coroner Dr. K. A. Cummings of Bond Head were ordered to Coon's home. The dead man's stomach and its contents were taken in the afternoon to Toronto to be analyzed by Prof. Johnsetty Rogers and examined by Dr. E. H. Prankish, medico-legal expert working under the Attorney General's department. The theory of suicide or accident is being carefully investigated.

Sunday morning Coon went to the barn for the morning chores.

Feels Dizzy

In a few minutes, speaking to his boy of 13, the oldest child of six, who was with him, Coon complained of feeling dizzy. The lad assisted his father back to the farm house, where Coon collapsed on the floor.

A member of the family sent for Dr. Kay of Schomberg, who found Coon at the point of death. When the patient failed to respond to his treatment, Dr. Kay sent for Coroner Cummings. When the latter arrived Coon was dead.

The symptoms said Coroner Cummings to a newspaper, "suggest to me poisoning by strychnine. I had a post mortem performed and the contents of the stomach to Toronto for analysis. The result of this will be revealed at the inquest."

The coroner admitted that nothing yet revealed would suggest suicide or any motive for self-destruction. The victim's manner, when stricken, Dr. Cummings said, was that of a man unaware of what ailed him.

In Good Health

Coon had been in good health recently, the authorities learned and was not despondent. On Saturday he assisted a neighbor in a strenuous day's work.

NELLER SENTENCE IS FOR 2 MONTHS

After being convicted in the police court here on a charge of keeping liquor for sale, George Neller, Poliah, of Point Anne, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail when he appeared before Magistrate Mikel Hagey this morning.

The Neller case has been in the courts for over a month following his arrest on August 24th last, when a search of the premises by Chief Constable MacDonald of Thurlow had been interrupted by a shower of beer from the side of John Harb's garage the latter adjoining the Neller's. Harb is alleged by the Provincial Police, who made both arrests, that Mac-Donald's men were interrupted when he ran into the garage.

During the progress of the trial MacDonald testified that he had procured a sample of the liquor and of beer from Neller previous to his arrest. Other damaging circumstantial evidence was disclosed by Crown Attorney B. G. Donnan during the trial, including that after which Neller was convicted.

Half-breeds May be Grandsons Of Members of Franklin Party

Edmonton, Sept. 26—Belief that Eskimos are half-breeds, descendants of the Franklin expedition that dropped from sight in the north "Icefields of Melville Sound in 1847, was expressed here Saturday by Napoleon Verville, Edmonton explorer who returned a week ago from a seven years' stay in the Arctic.

Verville, who spent over $18,000 on an exploration expedition of his own and who, accompanied by 21-year-old Sandy Austin, dared the Far Arctic reaches that had not been seen since the departure of the Stefannson expedition, spent five months with Eskimos on Melville Island before returning.

"These Eskimos have milk-white skins except where their faces and hands have become tanned and weather-beaten," he said.

"I myself am almost sure they are sons or grandsons of members of the Franklin expedition.

"They told me, too, they had found skulls and bones of white men washed up along the coast from Prince of Wales Island right down to Boothia Peninsula.

"It is easy to tell the skull of a white man, for his is no prognathous as are Eskimo jaws.

"I am eager to get an opportunity to track down these reports from the Eskimos. I have spent almost all my money in my last trip and I hope the government will help me to get into the country again."

He indicated advice from the American Government had showed they were interested in his proposal to return.

ORILLIANS TO ENTER RACE

Syndicate Formed to Contest Harmsworth Trophy Race

Orillia, Ont., Sept. 26—E. Webb, Orillia contractor, announced today a syndicate of Orillia sportsmen had been formed to enter a boat in next year's Harmsworth Trophy races for the competitive speed boat championship of the world.

Webb's announcement said Bert Hawker, Gravenhurst designer had completed drawings for a Miss Canada I which he will pilot himself in an attempt to win for the British Empire the trophy which Gar Wood Detroit ace designer and driver, has held for many years.

Hawker, who drove a sensational but losing race in Miss Betty Carstairs entry a few years ago, will superintend building of Miss Canada I, Webb said. The boat, he added, will be built of Canadian materials by Canadian Workmen and will be powered with a Canadian engine.

Webb said the Orillia attempt to take the prized trophy with its own boat was a direct outgrowth of attempts by the syndicate to buy Kaye Don's boat, Miss England III after her unsuccessful race a few weeks ago.

The Orillia syndicate, Webb said, will try to carry on the work of Lord Wakefield in the fund sponsored British efforts for many years.

MAN DOG AND CAT PLAN LONG VOYAGE

GLEON, Spain, Sept. 26.—A long sea voyage has just been arranged here today, in his yacht Mari Luisa, Senor Wenceslao Fernandez is seeking shelter from a stormy sea, accompanied by his dog and cat. The trip is all shortly for New York via the Canary Islands hoping to establish a record for Lone Atlantic crossings.

The merchant whose store is down town where people congregate, and in a business district where people have to study ways to get people to come to the vicinity because the people are already busy shopping in that district. HIS problem is to get people to come into HIS store.

The neighborhood store in the outlying parts of the town or at the cross roads in the rural districts has a different problem. People come within his doors only when they definitely set out to do so. They do not drop in on the way to some other store. The neighborhood store must attract and hold a trade by himself and must take advantage of the points that are in his favour, for all the cards are certainly not stacked against him.

He knows his customers and his customers know him. He knows their needs and if he is close enough to them, can buy and carry in stock the type of goods that is best suited to them. He is known by them and if favorably known, they will depend on his judgment.

The cross roads merchant is the store buyer for the people, he knows the personality and is in a much better position than the buyer of a bigger store who does not know his customers personally and must judge their needs from the sales slips.

The cross roads merchant and the neighborhood store have more time to buy right and if they are careful buyers will frequently save money in buying and this will be passed on to their customers.

All the bargains are not offered to the big merchants by any means. The neighborhood merchant with his smaller turnover must watch his stock very closely and keep it up to date, and not accumulate a lot of obsolete stock. It is good policy to cut the prices of goods that are moving slowly. Display them and put in new goods. Don't let your stock get shop worn and soiled, but even so, you have cleaned up your stock, got your money and your cut in profits is probably covered largely by the saving in the cost of the cash.

In your neighborhood store, you will do a great deal of the selling yourself. You do not, or I hope you do not, sit in the back room with your feet on the desk, but you get out on your floor and get close to have them keep you away from the front counter. The personal contact is your best bet. If you are known to the children, have a little candy with a cent to spend, to the school boy or girl; to the young man or woman and so on through to the grandfathers and grandmothers; you have no trouble in a neighborhood store.

Assure your customers that they are always welcome to look around without obligation. But make your store and your stock look inviting, and attractive. Don't allow your windows to look over the stock. Have your stock and assortment complete — well sorted and the floor space clear.

Never slight a juvenile customer, nor make him wait beyond his turn. I have seen this happen over and over again. Children exert an influence on their elders and can turn them to or from a store.

A sale gracefully lost, and the customer put at ease after taking your time and not buying is sometimes better than to make the sale. Courtesy at the time of a sale lost may land one twice as good in the future.

Do not cire a customer by keeping him waiting on the phone. If you cannot give a satisfactory answer, get their name and number and call back when the information can be obtained.

Salespeople should approach the customer in every case. No customer under ordinary conditions, should have to ask for the service, you are supposed to render a reasonable service.

Never use the phrase "Yes Ma'm or Sump'm" in approaching a customer. Better to say "May I be of service, Madam?" or May I serve you?"

Give every customer that enters your store a nod and a smile, even though you are busy serving someone else. This will make him feel that he is welcome.

If your store is closed for a half day or a holiday, do not draw the blinds all down. Far better to have your windows neatly dressed, and if necessary a little front put in, with arrangements to have the awning lowered when necessary. Keep the windows illuminated in the evening, even though your store is closed. Suggestions through display today may easily result in many additional sales tomorrow.

Satisfied customers are interested customers, and to secure interest you must take sufficient interest in your patrons to make your goods interesting to them.

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column. If readers will address their communications in care of this paper. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.

NEW HYDRO OFFICES

This is a day when the municipality of the city of Belleville must feel proud of a new asset, the new offices of the local Hydro system, whose building was officially declared open by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, member of the Hydro Commission of Ontario.

Bright and modern, fitted for the purposes of the municipal Hydro system, the building containing the offices is one which will attract the notice of the people with its unique floors, its adequate accommodation for every department of the system, and its central location.

Since the city bought the local plant about three years ago it has paid off the major portion of the bonds and has piled up sufficient surplus or reserve which has already paid for the purchase and the remodelling of the building.

The offices are the visible proof of the wisdom of the ratepayers in purchasing the local distribution system.

In the personnel of the Belleville commission the city has been fortunate in possessing men who have been able to see the need of a modern office. When the office had to be moved from the quarters in the Anglo-American Building, it was the part of wise policy to set up permanent offices which the Hydro would own and which they could remodel to suit the demands of the municipal plant.

Citizens cannot but congratulate the members of the commission since its organization three years ago.

NEW CONSTRUCTION

The addition of new residential property this year when construction has been possible to a lower cost than usual is one of the optimistic signs in Belleville. During the building season of 1932 there have been put up a number of residences which should be the eye sore as well as satisfying the demands of a modern home. These properties have added considerably to the attraction of the city and to the assessment which will help others to bear the costs of civic administration.

More care is taken today in architecture of a home than in some of the building periods in the past. The house is not alone considered but the location and the grounds are more and more receiving attention. This explains why the new houses in this city have "it."

That city which is a city of homes is none the less a city which possesses attractions for industry as well as residence.

It is the belief that those who have put up the houses in this year will reap reward in greatly enhanced values.

SANE VIEWS

The sanity of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada in their discussions at the recent convention in these times of stress is worthy of comment and praise. Where it might have been expected that radicalism might seize a chance to say more than its share, none of this appeared. It is not that Labor is not alert to the needs of the present day and the storm of the present stress but that Labor realizes that in security not in demolition lies the only hope. They realize that the secret of modern labor lies in co-operation of Labor and Capital, both striving towards the amelioration of conditions which are not yet what they should be and the keenness of the viewpoint of Canadian Labor is one to stir the industrialist to emulate with his best the attitude of labor. Both realize that destruction of bulwarks is no way to bring about improvement, but that adjustments in orderly manner are the secret. Labor has shown that it is willing to trust Capital and Capital has shown and may be expected to show that it appreciates the clear-sighted sanity of the labor leaders.

NOT ROBIN HOODS

Living the life of Robin Hood is not so attractive these days actually as it is in the imagination. In the first place no one has a right to rob even the rich and then no police are so pestiferous as to drop in on the fair at almost any time.

Three youths wanted for robbery in Hants County, N.S., have been living the woodland life, lodging the police all summer and had a fairly well stocked camp in which they were planning to spend the winter. But they made their stay eluded the police but their lair with caches of food was found.

They do not find the life so interesting as Robin Hood did. They have been lawbreakers and are trying to escape punishment but Robin Hood for all his acts of robbery made of his day gave to the hungry starving the booty he managed to steal. It is said by some that Robin Hood was also interested in political life and was more of a foe of the evil King John than of the rich. He sought social changes, did the good Robin Hood.

So all in all these Nova Scotian youths are not Robin Hoods at all. They do not contain the elements of appeal to universal men that the legends centring about Robin Hood do.

THE PROMISE

By Aline Michaelis

There is a promise like a star, whereon
I fix my gaze from out the deeps of night,
Whatever was the treasure that is gone,
Be it my heart's hid core, my soul's delight,
I grieve not long or question overmuch
At the decree which stole my joy away.
My life is God's, and what even can touch
The Absolute, in mortal's little day?
This is the promise, like a star to glow
Always upon the changeful paths I tread:
There is no boon which from my life must go
But God will give a better in its stead,
Although He take away my dearest dream.
I claim this promise, follow this star's gleam!

MAGISTRATES, SHERIFFS AND MOOSONEE

MOOSONEE MECCA FOR MAGISTRATES, says a news despatch, which tells of the decision of the Police Magistrates of Ontario in convention assembled to hold their next convention at Moosonee, the farthest northern point in the province to be reached by railway. The invitation to meet at Moosonee was extended by Magistrate Tucker, of Cochrane, the town which is the end of the steel and the most farthest north, until the Ontario Government Railway was extended on to Moosonee. Magistrate Tucker in the invitation was John Loughrin, ex-M.P.P., of Mattawa, pioneer business man of the north country and a character, just bubbling over with Irish wit, a fund of funny stories, real tales of the northland, and the price of pioneering. However, the magistrates will not journey by and hold their next convention on the shores of James Bay with a wealth of historical associations around them, a sprinkling of tourists, a few Mounted Police, some trappers, a bunch of curious Indians and the ever-present husky dogs, sniffing around the outskirts wondering what it is all about. There the Magistrates will stand on the edge of the "Great Lone Land" where justice has been administered for years by the Royal Northwest Mounted Police who always "get their man" despite blizzards, floods, fires or all the machination of beast, man or devil. Perhaps the Police Magistrates of Ontario assembled in convention at Moosonee will reconsider the resolution passed at the recent session urging that an amendment be made to the Criminal Code to permit whipping in dealing with offenders under the age of 21 years, and placing the duty of whipping on the sheriff. The duty that the sheriff is supposed to attend personally to all hangings, unless he can get a substitute, is lonely enough of a business without making him officiate at a whipping post in the jail yard whenever a Police Magistrate decides to add a little touch of the cat to a sentence.

The yarn that Paraguayan women have "taken an oath that, until the Chaco is freed from the invader, they will use no rouge, powder, or perfume," does not sound as though the gesture would be of any particular use in bolstering up Paraguayan morale—or is it considered that the Paraguayan troops will fight all the harder if the girls they left behind them have all made themselves as plain as possible? It suggests a device for stopping wars, a la Lysistrata and her fellow-conspirators, rather than a way of urging the warriors on to an ever sterner resistance. MANUFACTURE HAPPINESS FOR YOURSELF

Is Perfectly Natural Striving For Human Being

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Happiness is a natural, striving for every human being and everybody is really entitled to it. Different people, however, have different ideas as to what happiness is, and consequently looking for the wrong things.

LOUIS E. BISCH direction.

Jewels and fine clothes make women happy as a rule, but there are exceptions. Every day we read in the papers of unfortunates who have had all of these things and more, yet they still have their disturbances in the love life, or they have suffered other difficulties, which have left them very miserable.

As a rule people will say that wealth brings happiness, yet thousands are happy without money, and there are even those who claim poverty is unhappiness started when gold began to fill their pockets. But they were not satisfied with simple enjoyments, but wealth brought new desires and new possibilities, and what formerly gave a thrill, afterwards became tame. The novelty of the new excitements wore off, these in turn became dull to fill this, coupled with the new responsibilities and obligations, and so on with great wealth, made these so-called "fortunate" ones a pretty sorry lot after all.

There can be no question, however, that a fair share of this world yields untold happiness. There are few exceptions to the rule that there is great satisfaction and a lot of fun in looking back upon what we have accomplished successfully if it was done with difficulty.

Giving happiness to others also yields happiness to one's self. Most people are unselfish, are unwilling to see suffering by and hold their next convention on the shores of James Bay with a wealth of historical associations around them, a sprinkling of tourists, a few Mounted Police, some trappers, a bunch of curious Indians and the ever-present husky dogs, sniffing around the outskirts wondering what it is all about. There the Magistrates will stand on the edge of the "Great Lone Land" where justice has been administered for years by the Royal Northwest Mounted Police who always "get their man" despite blizzards, floods, fires or all the machination of beast, man or devil. The building being opened for worship by the pioneers in 1882. In 1932 it was very fitting that Mr. Clarke should be the preacher on this important day, as he attended the church in the building when it was new and entered the ministry from the membership of the church. On Monday evening a large crowd sat down to supper which was much enjoyed by those present. In the evening programme was given by visiting talent from Madoc, during the evening Rev. C. A. INSULL CRASH TO BE PROBED

United States Senate Banking Committee Will Sudy

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 24.—The crash of Samuel Insull's utility empire, which involved one of the largest structures in bankruptcy with an estimated loss of 300 million dollars to stockholders, is to come under the scrutiny of the United States Senate.

While State's Attorney John A. Swanson today was busy preparing an appropriation of $50,000 yesterday with which to further his investigation, Senator Norbeck of South Dakota announced that the Senate Banking Committee, of which he is chairman, would undertake an investigation of the financial activities of the Insull enterprises.

The Corporation Securities Company and the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., were adjudged bankrupt yesterday by United States District Judge Walter C. Lindley when he said, he had become convinced that affairs of the two concerns were in such shape that receivers would be unable to salvage any of the stock holders' $500,000,000 investment.

FIGHTING IS O'ER FOR TWO BATTLESHIPS

London, Sept. 26—Two of Britain's famous fighting ships will soon leave Portsmouth for the last time. The Iron Duke, Earl Jellicoe's flagship in the Battle of Jutland, and the Centurion, gunnery practice vessel.

Most of her fittings, except removable guns which was originally ordered scrapped under the London Naval Treaty have been retrieved.

The Centurion, Terrible, which is leaving for Newport, Monmouthshire, for breaking up, became famous in the Great War, when her guns and naval ratings were transferred from battleship to Ladysmith and helped Sir George Pomeroy Colley to defend siege for several months.

After lying 60 years in the River Medway, moored from the Admiralty, the training ship Arethusa has been towed away to sea. The vessel will be replaced by the Cornwall, another training ship, which will be renamed the Arethusa. The original Arethusa was the first of British vessel to proceed into action under full sail. This action took place during the Napoleonic war.

Adelard Boulay, North Bay Hurler Holds Victorias to 3 Hits and Wins 1st Game 9-2

Pirates Have Edge in Semi Final Round of Play Downs

HERE WEDNESDAY

Ralph Ibey Pounded For 14 Hits, Wins Vic's Beta Silent

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 26.—Employing the same destructive offensive as was used to step around the Barrie Colts, the "brigand of baseball" commonly known as the North Bay Pirates, moved a step nearer the finals of the O.B.A.A. intermediate N.D.V. playdowns by throwing the Belleville Victorias, Eastern and Central Ontario champions, for a 9-2 loss here Saturday afternoon. While the locals clouted Ralph Ibey's offerings for 14 hits, Adelard Boulay held Chauncey Gerow's proteges to three meagre safeties, practically in total subjection throughout the affair.

One Big Frame

As has been a practice with them the Pirates picked on one frame to deliver the telling blow and on this occasion it happened to be the second. After Boulay had set the stick in the initial frame they gauged themselves to the extent of five hits and blew the second to produce an equal number of counters. This incident cropped up in the Quinte City lads for they were a look at in the first two innings.

Following the telling slaughter Coach Gerow sent Campbell to the rear of the box to commence to prepare for action but it only resulted in Archibald lasting during the first middle section of the pasture in the sixth. In the seventh Campbell might be explained, that he injured his pitching wing in a morning workout and found it unable to get it working to his liking.

Boulay was a rare form for the eventful encounter and his playmates showed him much in exact fashion both in the field at club swinging. The whirling hurler had to take two error debits for scores and faulty petting to the sacks. The first resulted in an error by second sack which allowed Seeney to complete the circuit for the Vics' first counter. He made the second miss in the fourth to facilitate the advance of Flagler from first to second to prepare for delivery on a single by Archibald and two-sacker. Had he fetchheld the first throw it is possible that the visitors would have been restricted to one run.

They Hit Hard

The Pirates put the score board tender at work in the initial canto when Edwards beat out an infield dribble, stole second and scored third on a passed ball and completed the journey when McCarthy lifted to Kerr and was safe on Blakey's muff of the throw. The big session for the winners opened with Chalmers dropping the pellet in the left garden for a single, pilfered second and scored, when Emma punched one to centre. Cause the infielder to earn a debit. Boulay came through with a single to right and Emma strolled down to second. Boulay stood the occupants around another station on a sacrifice fly to Blaker and Emma came in, while Boulay was being made the second victim Darrah to Blaker. Booth stepped into the third out play. Edwards took one of Ibey's darts in the ribs and stole second. McGowen followed with a double centre to send in Booth and Edwards. Johnston tried to right for a single and in came McGowen and Johnston scored when a drive to right to transfer Kilroy to the hot corner. Chalmers for the second time in the frame drew a free and crowed the runways and Emma holed to Kilroy and Boulay was stranded.

The Vic fielder made a nice run and catch to gobble up the fly and prevents another scoring. Single by Johnston and Chalmers interspersed by a passed ball, which carried Johnston to second, were not sponsible for the Pirates' single count in the fourth. Second up in the sixth, Johnston drove to deep center for a triple but wasted the effort by trying to complete a hike at the plate on a roller to the box contained.

After one lolling had been effected in the last of the eighth Kilroy started matters with a single to left, stole second, while Johnston was being retired on a whiffing and held there, while Chalmers teased Ibey for a walk. Emma sacrificed to sphere to center for a single to score Kilroy and send Chalmers to third, the latter scoring when Steels misfuffed Seeney's throw when Emma was trying to steal second and uncrowed the runways and Emma holed to Latchford and Boulay was stranded.

Scored on an Error

An error by Booth gave Seeney a life in the third and he improved his lot by stealing down to second. His tormented Boulay into trying to pick him off and a resultant wild peg parted the way for the Vics' third counter. With one away on a whiffing, Flagler connected for the team's first hit, a drive through short. He advanced on a wild peg by Boulay and after Blaker was taken down by a whiffing scored on Latchford's single to centre.

Kerr opened the sixth by driving through second for a single and a second, but made himself a part of a double killing when Johnston clipped Campbell's line drive for a relay to second. From then on the Vics were helpless before Boulay their taking during the succeeding three frames being limited to three walks. The game was concluded with Blaker being flustered in an attempted steal of second while Latchford was at bat.

The Pirates pull out by motors for Belleville on Tuesday evening to play the return number on Wednesday afternoon. A win will qualify them for the finals with Southampton. A win for Belleville will necessitate a third game likely at Barrie on Saturday.

Oshawa Collegiate Gridders Take 17-0 Fall From B. C. I.

Winners Well Drilled and Fast. Locals Suffer From Injuries

Football was ushered, quite unsuspiciously into Belleville for the fall of 1932 on Saturday afternoon, when the Belleville Collegiate team took the short end of a 17 to 0 score at the hands of the Oshawa Collegiate football team at the new Pirie Street park.

Injuries to local players coupled with poor defensive football spelt defeat for the locals in the end. George Catrom, the team's scrappy little quarterback, was injured early in the game with a badly sprained ankle in the third quarter, and Flagler, the team's star middle winger, was recipient of the same kind of an injury. Coupled with these losses the local's line failed to hold against the plunges with which the Oshawa team used to its advantage to rip and tear through the local's first line of defence, repeatedly registering first downs time after time left gaps large enough to drive the proverbial coach and four through. The visitors took advantage of the local collegiate's weakness at this point.

Well Balanced Team.

The Oshawa team presented a fairly well balanced team, and performers both offensively and defensively. Ross Locals, Cliff Campbell at left half back was the thorn in the locals side when the ball carrier ran rough and tore the entire Belleville team for substantial gains. Captain Gay, McCullough, Shelenkroff, at quarter, also shared the honors with Campbell in being a perfect game both defensively and offensively. Captain Gay, a fast, shifty, cut-kicked Reynolds of the B.C.I. repeatedly, time after time, punting for forward passes was deadly. The Oshawa team ran rough and tore the locals time and again, when they tried to carry their way through.

For the locals "Wally" Hilton stood out, while George Catrom played good football. Reynolds and Graves have not struck their stride as yet, but will be a force to reckon with when the season is over, looks to need a little more seasoning. On the whole, the local's two middies were the best defensively, while Hilton and Graves were the class in dire need of signal practise. Reynolds did the punting for the locals, but his coached substitutes are somewhat inexperienced as yet and all this year men but will bear watching as the season progresses. The Belleville Collegiate seniors have the makings of a fairly good team provided they can overcome their loss of scrimmage to some considerable extent.

No Score First Quarter.

The game opened with Jack Graves kicking off and the ball was brought back to the 25 yard line. First down Graves and Hilton gained for the locals. Graves fumbled but the ball was fumbled and Kaabul went through the centre of the locals' line for a short but substantial gain. With a series of line plunges, the Oshawa team carried the ball down again but lost the ball, when they tried to get over the locals' goal rather than kick. Graves and Ostrom made substantial gains, while Graves and Ostrom made substantial gains, while Graves Jack fumble and the Oshawa team again began another triumphant march down the field. They were but ten yards from Belleville's goal when the quarter ended.

On the second down of the second quarter Conant kicked to the deadline for one point. Oshawa 1 Belleville 0. After Graves fumbled though Reynolds was kicking better than ever, the locals could not get into a scoring position and at half time the score still stood 0-0 for Oshawa.

Conant kicked off when the second quarter opened but Ostrom lost ground on the first down and Reynolds was forced to kick. Constant fumbled and Graves fell on the ball for a 20 yard gain but again the locals could not penetrate the Oshawa line and Reynolds and later Maundrell ran the ball back 60 yards for the nicest gain of the day. Graves fumbled on an attempted aerial attack by using a series of plunges to good advantage. Conant kicked over the line but George Catrom got the ball. Oshawa's getting but one point. Reynolds kicked 70 yards and Graves downed Sheliencroff on his own 5 yard line. A series of scrimmage looked dangerous. Both players received body sprained ankles, when they tackled the Oshawa heavy five linemen. Just previous to the end of the quarter Cornish threw a beautiful 25 yard forward pass to Peirson who galloped over the line for a touch, which was not converted. The quarter ended 12-0 for Oshawa.

Intercepted Pass.

On the first play in the last quarter Hilton intercepted a forward pass and the locals started to kick but Conant was thrown to Hilton lost the ball for Belleville and Maundrell grabbed the loose ball in the hands of Cornish. Cornish then threw another perfect forward pass to Baker and the scoring ended. The locals tried in vain to evade the whirlwind brush but could not get into the scoring column. Just previous to the final whistle a spectacular play ran was attended run by the Oshawa backfield was one of the best features seen during the game. The final whistle found the score 17 to 0 in favor of Oshawa.

M. KIRKHAM WINNER TITLE

Last Year's Runner-up Defeats Mrs. Eddis of Rosedale 3 and 2

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Miss Margery Kirkham of Hamilton, Ont., Canada's leading amateur golfer, won the Canadian women's open golf champion. The 36-year-old local star bested her rival on the 'yaps' as of the Dominion's golfing history on Saturday when she became the first native player to hold the Dunlop cup of Consigned. Cold Cup since it was taken to the United States in 1927 and the feat was accomplished on the Canadian soil. Playing against Mrs. Charles S. Eddis of Rosedale, Toronto, Thirty-three of the scheduled 36 holes at Kanawaki had to be played Miss Kirkham marched out along the 335-yard fairway of the 34th to the green that proved the end of the rainbow for her and that brought her victory by a margin of three up and two to play.

The Forest Hills player thus scalped Mrs. Eddis, Virginia Engle-wood, N.J., as holder of the Dominion's ranking title. It was in 1928 that Miss Mackenzie of Toronto last won the Canadian open golf title. Mrs. Eddis, on that occasion she defeated Miss Helen Payne 8 and 6, at Winnipeg. The crown had not been held by a Montrealer since 1906 when Miss V. H. Forbes won it.

Miss Kirkham's triumph climaxed a week's golfing festivities at which including stars from the United States and England, took part in the event. The foreign threats were eliminated gradually as Miss Rhona Adair and Mrs. Eddis advanced toward the final in impressive fashion Miss Adair defeating Miss Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., and Mrs. Eddis Miss Ann Hunt of Kirkham, 4 and 2, on Friday when Mrs. Eddis defeated Miss Doris Tay-lor, two up, to enter the final.

Comparison Of Teams In World Series

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

The records of the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs for the 1932 season furnish a study in contrasts and parallels. On the surface of the signal that will send them against each other in a world series day in the World's Series.

The Yankees ran away with the National League race finishing the second highest percentage ever recorded in the modern history of baseball—.693. The Cubs won only after a terrific battle, and then only one game ahead of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who were the New York Giants, 4 games back. The Yanks won 107 games and lost 47 games, while Hack's done better if they had been pressed in the latter part of the season. The Cubs' record for victories and 64 defeats for a .584 average.

The league records they approached are .774 by the 1927 Yankees and .767 by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1926.

The Yankee offensive knocked the daylights out of the major league records for run scoring, batting, and being shut out by scoring in every one of the 156 games for 5 runs or more. They scored 5 or more runs in 55 games as the end of 1931, gave them 101 in 1930, and 91 in 1927, completely eclipsed the mark of 122 established by the Boston and Philadelphia Nationals in 1894. The Cubs were blanked only three times this year, but point of similarity cropped up yesterday when each team lost its final game by a shutout. In a fast piece cloth, the Yanks succumbing to the Boston Red Sox 8 to 0, while Guy Bush going down before the Cincinnati Reds 5 to 3.

In keeping with the tightness of the National League race all the way through the Cubs and the New York Giants, 6-3, after losing the first 3-3. The single victory gave Hack's men out in front even though the Braves trounced Brooklyn 13 to 7 and the Pirates 12 to 4 and held for third place as each split a twin-bill. The Cubs' victory was a 5 to 4 decision to Pittsburgh 7-1 and won the second, 8 to 5.

The runaway race in the American League did serious damage to Philadelphia's gate, but it was one bright spot for club owners when the Athletics' performance turned out when the Cleveland Indians finished in the first division. As a whole it was a fair season financially for most of the club owners.

Outside of the games the real interest centered in Babe Ruth's physical condition and Lou Gehrig's batting. Ruth ended the season's play under handicap at the end of July when Hornsby was dropped from the Cubs' managership and Chas. Grimm was given the job of leading the Cubs into the world series. Ruth was out twice with injuries, a torn muscle in his leg and recurrence of appendicitis but still managed to lead the league in batting, scoring in the ninth inning as the Athletics lost a 2-1 decision to Washington. In other National League games yesterday Detroit took a 5-4 decision from the Cards and Cleveland and Chicago played a 5-3 tie in the second game of a doubleheader after the Indians had won the first 6-5. Boston swamped the game after the fifth inning.

PLAYER PARALYZED WILL GET BETTER

MONTREAL, Sept. 26—Suffering from a fracture of the sixth vertebra reported to be the highest football game with McGill University here on Saturday, Freddie Tucker, middle wing, of the Westward Intermediates, passed a good night and was feeling much better, it was announced at the hospital today. Although he is at present almost totally paralyzed, it is expected that the paralysis will gradually disappear. Knocks and Boosts

If a ball team ever had tough luck the Belleville Victorias sure took the cake on Saturday. To start the day off on the wrong foot their ace hurler, Archie Campbell, got in front of a pitched ball during the morning batting practice at North Bay and his services had to be dispensed with for the day. The loss of Campbell did not do the morale of the Vics any good. Coupled to the game and all during the 12th the Vics could not seem to get their bearings with the result that they came home on the short end of a 9 to 2 score.

Taking the second innings out of the Vics' box Boulay, the portsider from the wine producers' land, the same who was rather even. The North Bay Pirates barged five of their counters in that fatal second frame. The Vics feel that they can "take" the Pirates here on Wednesday and then "make them like it" in a third game.

Following the game in North Bay a man approached the Belleville digest and produced a letter which named him as umpire of the day. The letter stated that the game in North Bay team had decided to use another official for Saturday. "Just who is going to umpire the three play-offs, North Bay or the O.B.A.A." is a question which time it should be ascertained what right the Pirate management had in changing the officially appointed umpire of the day. Although there are not kicking to any great extent they intimated that the umpiring on Saturday was one of the worst they have experienced this year.

With Archie Campbell on the hilltop on Wednesday afternoon the Vics feel confident that they can reverse the score on the Pirates here in Belleville. As Southampton beat Milton on Saturday they will lay idle and await the ultimate winner between Belleville and North Bay in the intermediate O.B.A.A. finals.

Wednesday sees the opening of the 1932 world's series at New York City when the Chicago Cubs battle the Yankees in the first baseball League winners. According to advance stories Guy Bush and Charlie Pigrass will be the starting pitchers.

INJURED IN FALL

Kitchener, Sept. 26—Going down the cellar of his home, a load of potatoes, O. Weidenhammer of Kitchener had his leg broken and suffered cuts and bruises when the stairway collapsed. He had to be hauled to the main floor with a rope.

The word "pauper" was once nothing but the Latin equivalent of "poor," and quite innocently used to distinguish the poor who received relief under the English poor law from the poor who did not.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Prettying up For Cold Weather

Is your complexions low in vitamin? Has it lost its morale, taken a slump, that much is worth while. The last rose of summer has nothing on a complexion that has been loitering round bathing beaches since early June and boiling on golf courses, getting blistered because of its owner's tender affection for Mister Al Fresco.

Complexions are supposed to be limited to the facial area—or are they?—but this noisy bromide does have expanded. They're on necks and chests and shoulders. And a fine showing they're going to make when the telephone brings along that heavy day when the One Man you've been dangling after all through the Summer season, and there is the new evening frock to put on and wonderful time.

Funny about tan. You can get it in a day, but you can't so easily get rid of it. It wood, apparently, stick around until you're ready to die of old age. That's like old-fashioned tan. That was a light touch. The modern tan, which is taken in the sun, assumes a six months' lease on it. She blackamoor her skin to such an extent that it developes into a hide, has no idea of looking human again.

A light puffery touch to the complexion can be bleached away in a few weeks. This dark mahogany veneer that is many of the golf and sporting-sometimes in spots—is something that requires unceasing daily attention and profound hopefulness.

The enthusiastic sun faddist may glory in her dark skin when the calendar calls for it, but even she is not so keen about looking like a Swedish fisherman when the little snow flakes start to fall.

Now for the what-to-do preschment.

Use hot water. Lots of it. Hot water soaks off dead skin cells, and that's what has to happen. There's no such thing as bleaching the skin. What is done is to stimulate the natural job of the epidermis to get rid of old substances and display new. Skin is ever in a state of decay and renewal. That old-fashioned cricket has to go.

After having a hot water facial rubbing, with perhaps numerous applications of a wash cloth wrung out of hot water, dry and wait one half hour. Then apply a lotion made by combining ounce of peroxide and one ounce of witch hazel. Or, if you are just an oldfashioned girl, and like to bang an old ideas, put on lemon juice and cucumber, equal parts.

Go slow with the cold cream. It stops skin flaking and flaking is what you want. Yes, the lovely countenance will look dry and it will look its beautiful porcelain finish, but you can't have everything at once. You can, if you like, do your bleaching for one week and your creaming the next week, thus fooling your complexion into thinking it is having its own way, that everything is all for the best.

Simple tincture of benzoin is a help in this urgent need of getting a new face for winter wear. After the face has had its natural oils restored to it, fill the wash bowl with warm water, add fifteen drops of the benzoin. Dip in the washcloth. Hold it to the face with flattend palms.

PRIZES DRAWN AT CARNIVAL

Mayor Tice Officiates at Drawing in Final Program

Of special interest to the large number who attended the last performance of the Kiwanis Karnival was the drawing for the several special prizes, given by the Club in connection with the event. Each year the Club donates three prizes, which are eagerly sought and this year was no exception, the chief prize being the Gurney stove. Mayor George O. Tice, himself a Kiwanian was selected by the general chairman, Harry Ash, to make the first draw from an electric washer in which the thousand of tickets were thoroughly stirred. It has been customary and a rule of Kiwanis during their several Karnivals, that no Kiwanian would be allowed to draw, but in this case it made the draw from an electric washer in which the thousand of tickets were thoroughly stirred. It has been customary and a rule of Kiwanis during their several Karnivals, that no Kiwanian would be allowed to draw, but in this case it made no difference and a pair of Kiwanians being a good Kiwanian allowed the second ticket to be drawn, the winning ticket, which was held by Miss N. Pascoe, 85 Alexander street.

Miss Phenie Levernore, Camniffon Road, was the winner of the electric clock, the second prize donated by the Kiwanis Club, and Miss Nora Harris, 37 Catharine Street, won the set of dishes, the third prize. The Joe Delaney prize for guessing the correct value of the furs worn by the mannequins on Friday night was won by Miss Jean Gray, the award was a beautiful fur necklace. The electric washer given by the Carl Read Company was won by Mrs. M. Starr after a toss of the coin she being tied with W. Fulgrove! The Mayor and the president of the Club, A. S. Collins, K.C. were chosen to call the coin with His Worship winning. Again in the Montrose Dairy contest, which was to guess the correct weight of the five beautiful jersey cows used in the dairy contest, two contestants tied and a toss of a coin was again needed to declare a winner. Mrs. M. McGuire and Mrs. Blackburn, R.R. No. 3 Belleville tied and again the Mayor won the toss and Mr. Blackburne will be the recipient of $10.00 worth of milk tickets.

The three prizes donated by the T. Palmer Jewellery company were won by C. Murdock, 77 Pine Street, the first being a diamond ring, Mrs. Art Sharp, 218 Church Street, and Miss Jean Wood. Before the drawings were completed, Mayor George O. Tice, thanked the citizens for coming out in such large numbers during the week and for the support tendered the several games. "The money will be wisely and well spent," said the speaker. "There is need for community work and in this respect the Kiwanis does not take second place."

Little Fingers Make Big Meals

By Barbara B. Brooks

Because the kitchen is the scene of so much activity, children find it the most fascinating room in the house. If anything special is going on there they are sure to be under foot. These days when it is a struggle a great help to the cook and there are times when they should be encouraged to more suitable attractions out of doors or in the playroom. However, no child should be deprived of the joy of seeing the magic which produces his supper from an array of green leaves, meat, fruit, flour, milk and the like. Hardly any child will find junket uninteresting if he has watched it being made and if he has helped the least bit it is sure to be the best dessert ever.

It is needless to say that the mother who cooks with her children as an audience has no easy task, and she must look to her methods. In a year or two daughter, and son as well, will no longer be content to stand by and watch, but will want to do things for themselves. And they will do things just as mother does. The little girl who is a "born cook" and the envy of all her friends and their mothers has watched her own mother dozens of times and follows the same orderly routine. She knows what utensils and equipment to use and how to handle them. She knows all about her stove. She understands recipes and the importance of measuring carefully. And so, when Mum's herself, spill things, forget to watch food in the oven, or run short of help in the pantry to make a gingercake. She may need advice but she knows she will do a lot of things the right way just because she has seen them done in no other way.

Cooking will never be drudgery or a bore for the child. Every step will be a great adventure. Her first opportunity to prepare the entire dinner will mark a red letter day. A menu such as the following would be very suitable for such important occasion.

Ham Scalloped with Potatoes
Buttered Beets
Shredded Lettuce Salad, French Dressing Whole Wheat Bread Butter
Corn Flake Charlotte
Whipped Cream
Caffeine Free Coffee

Method of preparing dinner: Do the marketing in the morning. Wash lettuce and place in refrigerator in a covered container or waxed paper. Fresh beets are used, cook them in the morning and heat again for dinner. If they are cooked the dinner time, be sure to start them before fixing the ham and potatoes as it will take from 30 to 60 minutes to cook them, depending upon their size. The apple sauce to be used in the corn flake charlotte can also be cooked ahead of time.

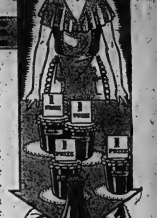
It is well to allow one hour for baking the ham and potatoes and potatoes and to preheat the oven.

HAM SCALLOPED WITH POTATOES

1 slice of ham (one inch thick)
1-3 cup flour
2 tablesp. butter.
6 medium sized raw potatoes
1-2 tsp salt
Pepper
Enough milk to cover potatoes (about 2 cups).

Peel and cut potatoes into thin slices. Place ham in bottom of a casserole. Cover with a half inch of sliced potatoes. Add salt and pepper to flour (not too much salt as the ham may be quite salty). Sprinkle some of the flour mixture over the potatoes and dot lightly with part of the butter. Add another 1-2 inch layer of sliced potatoes, sprinkle again with flour mixture and dot with butter. Repeat this until all the potatoes are used. Put the rest of the flour mixture and butter over the top. Fill the casserole with milk until the potatoes are covered. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until the potatoes are done (about 30 to 40 minutes).

With the ham and potato dish in the oven, there will be a few minutes for setting the table. The salad will be prepared and the plates placed in the refrigerator if there is room for them. After the potatoes and ham have been cooking 15 and 20 minutes, start the corn flake charlotte.



CORN FLAKE CHARLOTTE

1 1-2 cups corn flakes
Rind of 1-2 lemon or juice of 1-2 oranges or lemon
2 cups sweetened apple sauce
1 tablespoons butter

Butter a pudding dish and pour in a layer of corn flake crumbs. Cover with apple sauce to which the fruit juice or lemon ring has been added. Sprinkle the top with a layer of corn flakes. Dot with butter. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with whipped cream.

Put the corn flakes charlotte right in the oven with the ham and potatoes after the latter dish has been cooking for 40 minutes. The dessert is not brown when the ham and potatoes are done, leave it in the oven for a few minutes longer and increase the heat slightly. While the main part of the dinner is cooking in the oven, heat the beets, drain and season with butter, salt and pepper. Whip the cream for the dessert and make the coffee. Finish setting the table and the dinner is ready to serve.

Miss Macphail Calls For Socialized Planning

Wingham, Ont., Sept. 26.—"The only thing that I am interested in is getting necessary things done. I am willing to line up with any party that will do something," said Agnes Macphail, K.C., first Canadian Grey who with William Irvine M.P. for Wetaskawin spoke here Saturday night to a capacity audience on the economic crisis and the remedies for its relief.

Miss Macphail advocated strong organization of the agricultural industry to hold up its end amid the industrial, saying that growing Canadian money nearer to par with British currency, and high income and inheritance taxes, the levy went into detail of the co-operative commonwealth proposals, including nationalization of monopolistic industries and socialized planning of industry as a whole.

Financially, said Miss Macphail, we have a "penniless Canada." She favored nationalization of industries where monopolies exist, so that the country would not produce more than it required for domestic consumption and export. She declared 90 per cent of the trouble in the Dominion is done on credit.

Miss Macphail strongly favored the government putting more Canadian money into circulation. "But it will benefit the people, not merely the bankers don't want it done."

PARIS ECHOES TO WARNING

French Premier's Word Taken Seriously by Politicians

Paris, Sept. 26—Paris political circles responded with caution today to the warning by Premier Edouard Herriot yesterday in which the Premier warned the Parliamentary committee planning to re-arm, and proposed that the German army equalize its problem be solved by a new security treaty at Geneva.

The Nationalist newspaper Le Figaro hailed the speech as a repudiation of the international policy of the late Aristide Briand. Senator Henri Bernstein, in the Nationalist paper L'Agence Economique et Financiere referred to it as Herriot's profession of faith and added that it merited "reconing internationally."

KING RETURNS TO CAPITAL

Abbreviation of Holiday Due to Cabinet Crisis

LONDON, Sept. 26—King George will cut short his holiday in Scotland and return to London on Friday, it was announced today. It is taken for granted now in political circles that Sir Herbert Samuel and his Liberal colleagues in the cabinet will resign because of their opposition to these agreements.

COLLEAGUES MAY RETIRE

Austral'an Situation is Like That In England

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 26.—(C.P. Cable)—In the event of the public which Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald is now experiencing with some of the Free Trade Members of his National Government Cabinet, is the situation that is taking form in the Australian Cabinet. Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons is confronted with the possible retirement of some of his colleagues.

Following close upon the flurry caused last Tuesday by the resignation of E. W. Hawker, Minister of Markets and Transport, J. E. Penton, Postmaster General has tendered his resignation. The Prime Minister has asked him to reconsider and just now it is not known what action the Postmaster General will take.

Penton's step follows his recent announcement he might not support the Ministry's tariff proposals which caused sensation in the House of Representatives as to whether he would resign or not.

Hawker retired because the Government would not support his contention that Parliamentary Salaries should be cut more than 25 per cent.

A Research in Romance

By Isabel Woodman Waitt

Had any one called Kay Harry self-sacrificing to her face she would have denied it. That she had turned the old farmhouse into a "tourists' rest in order to send her sister, Lola, to college seemed only expedient. Of course if her parents had lived she herself might have.....

"Kay where are you?" Lola' joyous voice broke in upon her thoughts. "I've brought Professor Stearns home to supper. We've something marvellous to tell you, haven't we, Professor?"

"Indeed we have."

It had come, then Kay had been afraid that scientific, brilliant, slightly stooped young man would capture Lola's fancy. "Break it to me gently," she said, shaking hands, with that delightful little quiver in her voice grasp always gave her.

"We're covered with glory, Miss Barry. Don't you see it shining all around? Your scholarship....."

"Oh, let me tell it, Mark! I've won a scholarship to study abroad for a year! Isn't it just wonderful? I owe it all to Professor Stearns."

"Nonsense, Lola, you did it all yourself. That research she did was masterful. This is the first time any college has seen so honored. Proud of her, aren't you?"

"Proud? Kay's gray eyes misted as she said, kissing her sister on her tender cheek, "I always knew you had it in you, Lola, darling."

Kay was glad no tourists had arrived for supper. She wished they wouldn't, bring guests like the Professor without warning at her busy hand. This was a gala occasion and she'd planned on plain chipped beef in white gravy, fluffy baking powder biscuits, preserved corn on the cob, pieced pumpkin pie and coffee—not much help to tourists, indeed, but preferred it.

At table the Professor asked casually, "What career have you mapped out for yourself, Miss Harry?"

"Kay Harry" Lola answered for her, "for anything but work. Only one of us can be a drone in a family and she made me go. She really deserves it, the credit for everything I've done."

"Pass your cup and don't listen to her, Professor Stearns. 'A little more cream' Lola, you're forgetting to eat. Then, besides it is full of travellers driving in Kay, counsel herself in great shape."

There, I knew we'd never have meal in common," Lola teased, explained. "Here comes Kay's career—sic of them .She's worked like a slave; but I'm going to change it all up to her some day."

A month later Professor Harry called Both Kay and the Professor saw her off, since the ship left from Boston. Kay's heart was troubled. That little sister, could she take care of herself all alone in Europe? Separation. Their first. Oh, well, no use to be sad as it had been arranged she'd have to steel herself for that too, she supposed, wondering how Kay Mark and Lola cared for each other.

The steamer ship was headed for the open sea. Kay couldn't keep down that lump. Separation. Little Lola—all gone! Only this, of course, was different.

"We'll miss her, won't we?"

Kay had forgotten the Professor's presence. She smiled and nodded, but could not speak for tears.

"Let's get a bit to eat. This seems to me, you have been a brave girl. Did lovers always have appetites?" he pondered.

That summer Mark Stearns came, then to the Harry farm. "It's all over Lola as he can get," Kay decided. She was surprised to find that it hurt her a bit. Of course, he wished to spend his sabbatical year, and good gracious! He was in the studying evenings. It was to be the honeymoon. Dad and Mother could try his hand at running the farm on shares!

"Why, I didn't know you loved the land so much."

"And I didn't realize you loved books so much. You must have read a great deal, Kay. You're well educated."

Kay blushed, not at his praise, but because he had used her first name. "I've followed Lola in everything," she confessed.

"You're a wonderful girl. Thank heaven you are interested in a career! Where would the world be without trained women?"

"Lola's making a big success," Kay replied, flushing.

"Isn't she I'm so proud of her! The Professor declared to a small colony. Of course, my salary just very large, but I'm sure what could be made if your farm were proper run....."

"You and Lola ought to go along" Kay said, laughing, hardly. "Lola! Good grief! It's you I'm asking to marry me, Kay."

Dropping the Pilot

By Phillip Warren

William Henry Matthews—Cap'n William Henry Matthews, if you please—listened with the air of one to whom all is due to the few well chosen remarks of old Commodore Keane, President of the Yacht Association. The old timer was chatting somewhere on the dozen, only captains and honors of a Master Pilot.

Young Cap'n Matthews was listening the while, with a kind of reverent caress, the parliament which was his "ticket." Not most of his mind was thinking of Polly Stark.....

"You're the luckiest boy to get your ticket, Cap'n Matthews," the old man growled, and inverted "you ain't you? Well there' many a man has worked years for a less recognition than you got there. And mind, there's still a lot for you to learn about the sea, and shoals a-plenty—aye, and women, too. You're young.....

"—And women, too." Then words almost a responsive echo in the new master pilot's mind. There was certainly a thing he must learn to learn about one woman, if Cap'n Would Polly Stark say "Jimmy Matthews, I'll be naked to the world" him? Or would she refuse him for Jimmy Hardin? Hadn't she been kind? Yet. Couldn't ask her till he got his ticket—confound waiting. But he'd ask her tonight. Yes, sir, this very night.

Never forget, the safety of the ship comes first, Cap'n Matthews, when you're on a ship's bridge you are in command, and the responsibility is yours." The commodore turned his chair to glance out of the window at the leaden January skies, then back to the wager new-made pilot.

"Today's Friday, the thirteenth, I'd never order a pilot to take his first ship on Friday, the thirteenth. Cap'n Matthews; not that it is superstitious, you understand, but I respect other people's superstition."

The young Cap'n grinned. Friday the thirteenth was of no importance to me, sir. I'd like a ship as soon as one is ready for me, sir."

"All, you're young. And if you just make a ship today we've got her for you, the Sea Queen, just at Lambert's Point, and she'll sail as soon as she's aboard. She's not your own choosing, Lad. I'll not order you to her, but she's your assignment ship from—Well, on the deck outside, and tell the Purser volunteering for the trick."

William Henry Matthews from now Cap'n Matthews from now on—strutted the assignment slip into his pocket and hurried to the elevator. Just ten now. He'd get away from the dock by eleven. Lunch Cape Henry by three, three-thirty in the outside. An hour for the pilot's boat's dory to put him ashore and aboard. but a sharp word from Cap'n Matthews to the boatsman brought her back to her course. Ten minutes and the wind vied increased to the gale force. Snowswirling bank of fog, thick, as pea soup, blighty cold, an hypercritical eye curtain through which the Sea Queen moved like a shadowy ship.

Cap'n Matthews shivered. So this is what he'd volunteered for! The fog would delay him an hour; he'd have to leave Polly by night. But he'd make it, of course. And it was Friday, the thirteenth! Ha! He gave the order for half speed, pushed viciously at the whistle cord, and, thrusting his hands into the ship's grey mark, settled down to smell his way to Cape Henry.

Did that fog horn blowing whistle off there to starboard? Cap'n Matthews strained his eyes and ears every nerve taught, alert. The fog-horn's blare moved into the Cap'n blank wall, and the echo came something back to him, seemed to irritate those on her bridge.

An hour passed—a tense, strain an hour, a hour of endurance and a faint bellowing roar came out of the fog. Another ship! Cap'n Matthews Cape Henry, Cap'n Matthews bellowed through the fog, and listened it was directly—aheam. No mistaking Lola's bellow! The pilot ought to be close aboard now. He reached the whistle cord and sent his three blast, bluff, long, short, short, timesHe gave the signal, then waited for the fog horn answer from the Relief. No answer.

The minutes were drifting, lifting heavily to the rising seas, rolling her way. No answer. Where was the Relief?.....

"The Wagrum's skipper was getting a warning." This old thing in a Nor'wester a mile off a lee shore needs to fill that—

or two! Is id no so?"

Cap'n Matthews looked. No! I've got to get ashore! I tell you I've got to get back! I—I've got a date tonight. The reason seemed to him pathetic, he couldn't stop to explain to this fat German lady. He must get ashore ask Polly Stark to marry him tonight.

"I'll tell you, Skipper, Anchor and if the Relief don't show up there in an hour, I'll take your boy with her and make the beach. I'll pay you fifty dollars for the boat. And I'll be a mere hour between here and Cape Henry."

"I'll pod anchor in dis gale. Mister! Ned for poddings I vont! Und you'll nod take no boat from dis ship! Dot vork bass wouldn't last a minute in dis sea. You go below now to der mate's room. I'll take my ship to sea!

William Henry Matthews, all of 28 and a master pilot, stormed and swore and even begged abjectly, but the fat, stubborn German was firm. He jerked the engine room telegraph to full speed ahead, pushed the whistle cord a yank, and pointed the Wagrum's blunt nose in the general direction of Cape Henry. Cap'n Matthews went to the mate's room and lay down to sleep!

Two weeks later the Glengarry docked at Norfolk. Six days before the Wagrum had passed fifteen hundred miles at sea, and had put Cap'n Matthews aboard. Cape Henry's lights and Cape Henry's lines were made fast, Cap'n Matthews was standing on the pilot's side. He dashed for a taxi at the dock, and in the fifteen minutes that he was frantically ringing the bell at Polly Stark's house. A trim maid answered his summons—a new maid, one he did not know.

"Miss Polly? Why didn't you know, sir? Miss Polly got married last Saturday to H. Hardin, the artsymnoon. Yes, sir. Married that night. Him that went to the bank!"

The Man from Rome

By Josephine Duke

It was next to the last day of Janet's vacation, and practically nothing had happened as happening goes when one is young and pretty, rich and lonely, and has the blessed hair. For two weeks now she had been existing on the dull fare of tennis and golf, and very next minute, something very wonderful and romantic might be lurking in store for her. She had come to the shady end of a tennis court, where so many contingents to dwell on.

"If I had only known Whitaker Ber—if I had chosen a different place—if I had gone where I knew someone—"

What did any of it matter? It was almost over, and Janet realized now, it would be history, but the memory of it would be precious as the particularly alluring: the boats, the bathers, great carmine bougainvillea clouds along the verandah of the hotel. She looked now as she had looked when she arrived two weeks, up and down the long, shining beach, the gay, bright colors, by place to dance, alright, if there were anyone worth dancing with, but the trouble with Pine View guests at present was that they were mostly old or married. Janet slanted her eye to the right and left, and then, as a thought, sandwiched in the midst of a yawning fatigue.

"Isn't it pleasant and quiet up here," said a white haired woman, "after the bustle and length away from Janet's left elbow.

The hotel is having a dance tonight, I'm told, some of the younger guests will come over and swell the crowd.

"I don't know who would dance" murmured Janet. Then blushing in spite of herself, "I mean—er—"

"Don't apologize," said the old lady, "I know how you must feel. Why, I remember when I was a girl and felt rather inclined to drop it from the clouds when I met anyone. She simply had to do something about it, and the something was always well connected thoroughly eligible. Almost, I'm sure, to the extent of a large number of times. Oh! Why was William Henry, so darned dumb!

Cap'n Matthews climbed the rusty ladder of the old Wagrum and sent a swift, appraising glance into the fog. Such a dinky old tub, hardly three thousand tons; but she'd weather a gale—and this first ship as master pilot! He made his way to the bridge, spoke briefly with the skipper, a grizzled German skipper, gave the signal to cast off the mooring lines and ordered full port end of the bridge while the tug backed into the stream and pointed her blunt nose toward the sea. Master of a ship into the river channel Cap'n Matthews signalled the tug to cast off, and ever his shoulder gave the order command:

"Full ahead; Port ye're helm! Then to starboard!

"The new pilot strolled to the stern and looked back over and down the Elizabeth River. The Germans always said Mister. "Und I vant to be offer de sea vas Mr. Norvester like. She'll burn less coal mit dot vind on her tail.

As the Wagrum rounded Old Point Comfort the promised Nor'wester began to blow down Chesapeake Bay and struck her with a resounding blow. The ship answered and She heeled and yawed widely to starboard, but a sharp word from Cap'n Matthews to the boatsman brought her back to her course. Ten minutes and the wind had increased to the gale force. Snow-swirling bank of fog, thick, as pea soup, blighty cold, an hypercritical eye curtain through which the Sea Queen moved like a shadowy ship.

Cap'n Matthews shivered. So this is what he'd volunteered for! The fog would delay him an hour; he'd have to leave Polly by night. But he'd make it, of course. And it was Friday, the thirteenth! Ha! He gave the order for half speed, pushed viciously at the whistle cord, and, thrusting his hands into the ship's grey mark, settled down to smell his way to Cape Henry.

Did that fog horn blowing whistle off there to starboard? Cap'n Matthews strained his eyes and ears every nerve taught, alert. The fog-horn's blare moved into the Cap'n blank wall, and the echo came something back to him, seemed to irritate those on her bridge.

An hour passed—a tense, strain an hour, a hour of endurance and a faint bellowing roar came out of the fog. Another ship! Cap'n Matthews Cape Henry, Cap'n Matthews bellowed through the fog, and listened it was directly—aheam. No mistaking Lola's bellow! The pilot ought to be close aboard now. He reached the whistle cord and sent his three blast, bluff, long, short, short, timesHe gave the signal, then waited for the fog horn answer from the Relief. No answer.

The minutes were drifting, lifting heavily to the rising seas, rolling her way. No answer. Where was the Relief?.....

"The Wagrum's skipper was getting a warning." This old thing in a Nor'wester a mile off a lee shore needs to fill that—

or two! Is id no so?"

Cap'n Matthews looked. No! I've got to get ashore! I tell you I've got to get back! I—I've got a date tonight. The reason seemed to him pathetic, he couldn't stop to explain to this fat German lady. He must get ashore ask Polly Stark to marry him tonight.

"I'll tell you, Skipper, Anchor and if the Relief don't show up there in an hour, I'll take your boy with her and make the beach. I'll pay you fifty dollars for the boat. And I'll be a mere hour between here and Cape Henry."

"I'll pod anchor in dis gale. Mister! Ned for poddings I vont! Und you'll nod take no boat from dis ship! Dot vork bass wouldn't last a minute in dis sea. You go below now to der mate's room. I'll take my ship to sea!

William Henry Matthews, all of 28 and a master pilot, stormed and swore and even begged abjectly, but the fat, stubborn German was firm. He jerked the engine room telegraph to full speed ahead, pushed the whistle cord a yank, and pointed the Wagrum's blunt nose in the general direction of Cape Henry. Cap'n Matthews went to the mate's room and lay down to sleep!

Two weeks later the Glengarry docked at Norfolk. Six days before the Wagrum had passed fifteen hundred miles at sea, and had put Cap'n Matthews aboard. Cape Henry's lights and Cape Henry's lines were made fast, Cap'n Matthews was standing on the pilot's side. He dashed for a taxi at the dock, and in the fifteen minutes that he was frantically ringing the bell at Polly Stark's house. A trim maid answered his summons—a new maid, one he did not know.

"Miss Polly? Why didn't you know, sir? Miss Polly got married last Saturday to H. Hardin, the artsymnoon. Yes, sir. Married that night. Him that went to the bank!"

ICE MAN'S IDYL

By Helen H. Harris

Dick Pinley rapped smartly on the Vincents' back door and entered, without a fifty pound cake of ice.

Then he gasped with joy. What a girl What hair! What wonderful gray eyes! And what a figure! All this he said in his mind, for—— though he was over six feet tall and darkly handsome he was shy where girls were concerned.

"Ice man," said out loud was, "Good Morning."

Then a look expression gave some indication of what he was thinking, and, blushed before she replied, blushed before she replied, "Good Morning" and turned and busied herself with something on the stove, while Dick carried in the cake. Someone had greatly increased the new ice box's size—however. He lingered over placing the ice in the refrigerator, but the girl didn't turn toward him again.

The youthful ice man didn't believe in love at first sight. He rather he had always contended that he would have to get to know a girl and be sure that he was in love. The girl at the door was pretty, of course Dick had ever seen. And the disturbance in his heart, his mind, his heart could mean only one thing.

He whistled all the rest of the day, in spite of numerous cold and fretful pantions, who were not enjoying the first summer heat wave. They remarked on his joyousness.

His mother said, "Dick, Vincents' was a momentous one. He lingered over the ice and Rita gave him a fancy cake when he finally came out of the oven. He was more sure than ever that he was in love. The girl ended by his asking her to go to the movies with him. She had consented, but she wouldn't go till the following night.

The romance flourished. Dick Pinley and Rita Mann, she so fair and he so dark, they were a handsome couple. They rode on buses. They sat in the front row seats in movie houses. They walked. And they held hands.

And all the time Pitley was more and more amazed by Rita's beauty, her soft husky voice and the little trick she had of watching him from under her lashes.

Then one night Dick decided that he was ready to marry her. That evening was terribly high hat.

That evening a waiter with care, Wasn't it her luck that such a romantic setting should occur in Pine View just the night before she left. Dick knew he might never come the night after, and that would be worse.

She fluttered into the dining room and chose a table by a window, for the view. The waiter of Whitaker entered on the arm of Janet, and the two seated at the corners of her eyes. He was better looking than Dick, taller, more well, lean, brown, handsome, with a muscular mien which suggested great bodily strength. Janet went like a merry-go-round. But Dick was a young man, and he got all about introducing her.

"After dinner," said the old lady was true to her word, and before the dessert was served Janet was happening to her, she and Jerry Whitaker were dancing along the floor, and Dick was left alone.

Janet tried to think what she ought to say to a man who said:

"Do you live in Rome?" she finally managed.

"After a fashion," he grinned "Business necessity," he added.

Then the waiter again took him there. "What is your business?" she asked, with a blush.

"Oil," he replied. She caught her breath in a little gasp and turned with excitement. An oil magnate, and so young. "Oh," he changed the subject. "Do you know a marvelous little dancer you are"? Janets face was red. "Thank you," she said.

"Somebody's father," said Jerry. "Good heavens, it's mother! She looks younger than you, Janet. Excuse me. Will you?"

Then Whitaker Janet saw her partner hurry through the rustic lobby and double up the stairway with the morning woman a mop arms. She waited awhile, but he did not come down. She went to her room and packed her suit case. She left a message for Whitaker at Pine View, climbed into her trusty Ford, and started northward on the seventy mile drive back home.

Of course, H couldn't have lasted," she kept saying to herself. Oh, there would be some simple explanation. There would have been complications, but he would have finished the dance—he was so wonderful! Her eyes wandered to the oil gauge. It's almost empty. I must stop at the next town and get some. Dear, dear, dear," she murmured, reverting to the previous evening. "I wish I could see him again—just once more."

Janet suddenly noticed that she was approaching the edge of a small village. A by white sign at one side of the road attracted her attention.

"CITY LIMITS WELCOME TO ROME".

"Rome!" she exclaimed out loud, then sighting a filling station, she swerved her car onto the cement driveway.

"Hello, there," called a cheery voice that was somewhere familiar and a moment later, a handsome young man appeared. He emerged from the one room brick structure beside the tanks. "Speak of an angel. Say this must be telepathy. I've been thinking about you all morning. I looked all over for you last night, but could not find you. Mother was not seriously injured. I believe me this is luck."

But now I've found you again. Believe me, I'm not letting you get away. Janet, both amazed and delighted, "if you aren't Jack Whitaker—the man from Rome!"

FACE POWDER

By Robert . Hage

It was several moments before Ralph Hughes, president of the First National Bank of Turnerville, became aware that some one had entered the cage through the side door and was now engaged in powdering her nose. Smelling of the double purpose of keeping out flies and being able to see her reflection.

"Listen, Anne," he protested with an air of hurt dignity, "you can't do that. You ought to know that it's against the rules to powder your nose and that Old Man Knight objects to the use of cosmetics by any of his employees."

Anne shut up her feet, the while she gave a farewell pat to her nose. "Then why don't you keep your cage locked?" she demanded defiantly. "And just because he's president of a mint bank in a back town and has never heard of New York or Paris we're supposed to obey that silly rule. Some day I'm going to get mad and I'll powder my head right into his office and tell him what I think of him."

"Calm down, Anne," he pleaded.

"You won't have to work in this bank much longer anyway. How about the movies tonight?"

"Okay! And I hope the villain is a big, handsome cad. Meet you—"

"Hands up!" came a curt command from behind the grill. "And no monkey business!"

One glimpse at the rimsked face and glittering eyes of the man unceremoniously one of her arms went up. Then the air, raining face powder upon the, bandit, half-masked face Ralph, his face covered with powder, too.

For a block Ralph and the would-be robber shot it out without either scoring. Then the fugitive vanished in a vacant area filled with tall weeds and scrub trees. Diligently as the police searched they did not find the would-be robber had escaped.

As Ralph emerged a bullet sped past his head and he saw a posse heading for him.

"Throw down that gun!" shouted the leader. "We've got you. You're full of holes." Ralph was quick to obey.

"That's the way we handle bank robbers," snapped the leader. "And there's a standing reward of $5,000 for anyone we catch."

"Shut up, you fool!" exclaimed Ralph brushing away the arm that gripped him. Stop using that powder wholesale!" he demanded in a sharp whisper. "You got it all over my sleeve."

"But I didn't use any tonight," Ralph, doubtful," submitted. He studied the white smear on his sleeve. Then he ran the fabric away from Anne. At that moment the man who occupying the seat next to him on the left adjusted his position. The man's left-hand mate were on his sleeve also. A sudden brightening of the projection ray revealed the presence of the man's coat.

Ralph turned swiftly, grasped the man by the throat and began to pound his face with his fists. As the house lights were turned on the audience was being treated to more action than it had bargained for. Ushers and a policeman helped to subdue the disturber.

Anne crashed into Knight's office and, breathlessly, told her story. Knight, fingering a check. She braced her elbows on the president's desk and let go.

"I threatened one day to do this—and I'm going to do it now. I'm the only man in the world old-fashioned enough to let the girls to do any dolling up during office hours. Now you get out and I'm quitting." Her arms yielded to the wind was crying as her head touched the desk. Knight stroked her hair.

"Don't cry, quitting," he said softly. "You're fired."

Anne's head demanded: "Why?"

"Because, if I fire you we've got to marry you now, and before you quit, you get nothing. You see, Ralph has told me everything and he says you are the best powderer as much as they wish. In fact, the bank may buy you a puff.

Ralph stepped forward and held out the check. "And now you can buy $3,000 worth of it," he smiled. Anne's face lit amazement Anne crept into a chair and let out her sobbed:

"I don't care . . . for face powder at all . . . I just used it . . . for an excuse to go . . . into Ralph's cage."

The Maiden Speaketh

By Gilbert . Swanson

A vision of delightful loveliness never-lived a girl as I loved her. I She smiled at me, and made presents to me. A smile that took my breath away and made my mental faculties soar from the confines of earthly places of life to the sublime. That smile. It made my hair and that wonderful light and air that is laden with the fragrance of thousand flowers, a delightful mist all around and we two in the midst.

"I want you to marry me. I love you so much that I cannot live without you. I would be in heaven, a veritable heaven, if I were filled with the gold of happiness. I will make you happy, I have every everything that your heart desires. I will build a home—a house that will make you think a heaven. I have need for we two only. The world may go on its way without us. We will spend my entire time in faithful devotion to each other for you.

Wealth, health, success and my happiness depends upon you. I must have you for my inspiration. Without you, life would be empty. I feel that I could not find any girl to love as I love you. I have had many girls, bad girls, pretty girls, homely girls, but they were nothing to me. I have redeeming qualities, but you have all that they have and more besides one."

"I have not dreamed of such a girl as you, but I have never dared hope that such a girl existed. Everything you have told is of my dreams when I met you."

"We will have a cute cozy little bungalow, just we two. Where we will have no love but our own years. I will always love you, worship you and protect you. Your life will be mine, and mine will be yours. Never a thought, a word nor deed that will cause you unhappiness. I will fight, strive and work to control your every wish. I live only for you, at your feet. We will win all that is worth while and will have a home of joy them together, just you and I, I will build you a mansion, high up on the hill where you may both view the sunset at the end of day, and we will be surrounded by all the perfect love. No day shall be cloudy but the sunset, each one, shall be sunshine, for we are in love. You and I have two hearts in one body, you my queen, and the world of culture shall be at your feet."

"Your every wish and precious jewels shall adorn you, the queen of my heart, and dances and the high social whirl awaits you, if you will be my wife."

She had taken her arms from around me and sat with her hands relaxed. Her face was turned away from me. She was smiling. I heard her say, "I will be your wife."

"Youse guys have all the same line."

"BORROWED"

By Isabel Waitt

Patricia Lee gazed at the bottom of the small suitcase before mounting indignation. "What right has glad Sayres to carry on alone all by himself?" she demanded.

"Fri wager," soliloquized Ellen Sayres, "he's either hit-shy or a woman hater."

"Hit-shy? Norty Sayres. Don't make me laugh. He's selfish and shady what he is downright selfish. Yesterday he whirled across the dunes to Peaks Hill Bar all alone. This morning he went swimming, but not in the cove with the rest of us. Oh, no, he'd Harrd you know. Exclusive. Solo. Posing, if you ask me."

"Sh, he goes to the artists' ball to-night, dear."

Patricia's green eyes glinted. The artists' ball was the big event of the summer at the seaside resort on the tip of Cape Cod.

"Norton Sayres would be a super partner—so poised, so strikingly tall and dark, so perfectly matched almost, different from the rest of the summer crowd."

"I suppose," Ellen rallied on, you will go with Luke anyway."

"I think I'll—so with Norton Sayres," Patricia's chin tilted.

"And so glad. Everyone was surprised when that handsome Harrd bachelor, Norton Sayres, invited Patricia Lee, the most surprised. "Could I borrow you just for one evening?" the girl had asked, and need help." After a brief confidential chat, he agreed to go to the ball.

Hours later, Patricia and Norton were entering the party. Swinging his partner across the crowded dance floor, he led Harrard boy and polished forcibly with a Puritan and a Witch, "Sorry," he apologized.

"Darling!" beamed Ellen Beaton, the witch, catching sight of Patricia.

"Why don't you look where you're going—oh!" Ellen's partner, Luke Sayres, exclaimed when he saw who the couple was. "How do you do? So you came after all, Pat? Well I hope you are having a fine time," he continued in sarcastic tones.

"Is that—him?" Norton asked, gliding away. "Nice disposition, he has!"

Patricia saw Norton was looking down into her eyes. Her lips trembled. "He needn't think he owns me," she said, winking fast to keep back the tears. "Second Martin's all right—not possessive. We aren't married yet!"

Roughly before he could finish the sentence, the slender Luke yanked Patricia away. "Come on, dancing with me," he barked unpleasantly. "This dance and the next, and the next. Perhaps," he turned to Sayres, "you don't know that Miss Lee and I happen to be practically engaged."

"Oh! Luke, you know you promised to keep it secret," warned the girl. "Lower your voice. We'll talk it over later—somewhere else."

"We'll talk it over here—now. Are you dancing with me, or aren't you, Pat?"

Patricia looked helplessly, appealingly at Norton Sayres. Miss Lee is dancing with me," he replied for her, swinging her into the crowded ballroom.

"Oh, let's get out of her, Mr. Sayres," the girl begged. "I'm so mortified! Why did I ever subject you to such humiliation? I should never have asked you to take me, but—I—I wanted to let Luke to he's such a—pest."

They were making for the strip of beach, flooded by moonlight, when only the surf's night song to break the stillness.

"I think you did just right, Miss Lee. If you are bound to marry a cad, you'll have to do it with your eyes open. If you ask me, this Martin fellow hasn't a chance. Say, Patricia, I wonder what I would have done if he had been with my girl."

"I know," Patricia told him, "you'd have snapped him in two."

"You bet I would —if the girl had been you."

The next morning Patricia Lee did not bathe in the cove with the crowd. Mr Sayres was teaching her the crawl stroke, she told Ellen. "And what do you think? He's invited me to a dance in Hyannis tomorrow and we're going sailing all the afternoon."

Luke Martin joined them. "Luke, you were a dear," Pat smiled. "Thank you so much. Golly, I didn't know you could be so disagreeable! Now Ellen! I'm beginning to pity you. Thanks a lot for lending me your boy friend's company last night. Luke's one fine actor!"

CHILDREN THREATEN TO ABSENT SELVES

Toronto, Sept. 26—Thirty children have threatened to stay home from school unless the Ontario Department of Highways rescinds an order prohibiting them from using their own means of transportation.

The Minister of Highways has promised to investigate the matter this morning when he will receive the report of Highway Traffic Inspector William Stockdale, who stopped the children from driving to school in their own cars. The children live in Wyoming, Ont., and attend high school at Petrolia six miles away.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

When a Nose Was Useless

It sometimes seems 'tis vain to try On any one thing to rely.

Reddy Fox, at first puzzled by the extra shy way in which Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer had approached the certain pool of the Laughing Brook for a drink, had finally made a shrewd guess that it was because she had babies hidden not far away.

"Let me see," muttered Reddy, "this is just about the time of year that Mrs. Lightfoot would be likely to have babies. My, my, how I would like to find one of them before it is big enough to run. What a dinner that would be! Just thinking of it makes my mouth water. But I don't want Mrs. Lightfoot to catch me at it. No, sirree, I don't want anything like that to happen.

"If those fawns are not yw strong enough to follow their mo ther it is a safe guess that she never goes very far from them. That means that this is the reason that she comes to this pool for water instead of going to her usual drinking place. So of course those babies are not far away. I ought to be able to find them. I should be able to depend on my nose to find the little rascals."

He made his way around to where Mrs. Lightfoot had been drinking and had no trouble at all in finding her trail. With his nose he cautiously followed it, gently he discovered Mrs. Lightfoot had just ahead of him. She was feeding on certain grasses and plants of which she is very fond. She would put her head down and soon as she had secured a mouthful throw her head up again the better to keep watch. Reddy at once saw that she was alone. There were no dainty little spotted babies. Yet Mrs. Lightfoot appeared as nervous as if there had been.

"Hidden and told to keep perfectly still," thought Reddy. "They won't move, so eyes and ears will be of no help to me in finding them," he continued. "I all depends on my nose."

He took the greatest care to always keep Mrs. Lightfoot up wind. That is the wind always blew from her to him. He never got where it would blow from him to her. So at no time could she get his scent. As he took great care to keep out of her sight she did not know that he was about.

So, never for one instant failing to keep track of Mrs. Lightfoot, where she was and what she was doing, Reddy began a patient search for the baby deer he felt sure were somewhere near. He figured that inquiring black nose of his into every little patch of brush under every little low-growing tree and bush, every hollow log and stump. He took his time about it. He smelled long and carefully. Not once did his nose catch the faintest est scent of baby deer.

Mrs. Lightfoot presently lay down. She was still vigilant and watchful, but she seemed quite at her ease also. Reddy marked well the place where she was lying. "Those fawns are sure to be somewhere near her" thought he. "She wouldn't lie down far from them. I'll just wait until she gets up and moves away; then I'll have a good look all around there."

So Reddy waited, not guessing that Mrs. Lightfoot was really not quite a distance from her precious babies. She was where she could watch the place where they were hiding and so far from it that should an enemy appear she could bound away without arousing any suspicion that she had a precious a very precious secret.

Where she at last did move on Reddy hastily but thoroughly searched all around where he had been resting. He found not so much as a single whiff of fawn scent. That reliable nose of his was failing him. He could no longer depend on it. In fact it was useless. How useless it was you may judge from the fact that while pointing that nose under some bushes he almost touched a baby deer lying stretched out as still as death itself. Still that keen little black nose of Reddy's didn't find it. You see there was no odor, no scent at all. So really it wasn't the fault of Reddy's nose that he failed to find those baby deer.

SEPT 26 MR AND MRS MODERN LIFE ANNOYS A WEATHER PROPHET

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 40

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

When she was tired of walking, La made her priests carry her upon a litter. She made them build her a strong shelter by night and keep a great fire burning before it from dusk to dawn. Nor did they question her right to such service. To them she was a goddess. For many days they marched, the spea following the trail easily, going a little ahead to warn of danger. It was during a noonday halt when all were resting that one spe rose suddenly and sniffed the breeze.

In a low guttural he cautioned the others and swung upwind into the jungle. La and the priests gathered together to await the return of the sharpy anthropoid. Nor had they long to wait. Emerging from a leafy thicket he came straight to La and addressed her in the language of the great apes. "The great white ape lies asleep there." He pointed ahead. "Come, and we can kill him." "Do not kill him," commanded La, coldly, "Bring him to me, alive and unhurt. The vengeance is La's."

Cautiously the weird party followed the great ape. He halted soon after and pointed upward. There they saw the giant form of the spe-man stretched in sleep along a low bough, one strong, brown leg about the stout limb. No intimation of danger assailed the dormant faculties of the spe-man—he saw no crouching, hairy figures upon the ground beneath him nor the three spes that swung quietly into the tree beside him.

The first intimation of danger that came to Tarzan was the impact of three bodies as the three apes leaped upon him and hurled him to the ground, where he slightest, half stunned, and was immediately set upon by the fifty hairy men. Instantly he became the centre of a whirling, striking, biting mainstrom of horror. He fought nobly, but the odds against him were too great. Slowly they overcame him, though many felt the weight of his mighty fists.

Put them all together, stir in a wild-eyed script, sprinkle with some insane dialogue, and you've got the Four Marx Brothers in "Horse Feathers," which opened in tremendous crowds at the Belle on Saturday.

The premiere audience enjoyed it. So did your reviewer, and so, probably, will you.

Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in "LOVE ME TONIGHT" opening at the BELLE Wednesday.

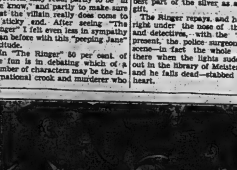
Groucho, helping it or not, is a college president this time. While the co-starring pair is introducing him in the lovely manner Groucho seizes the opportunity to shave himself. "I thought this razor was dull," he remarks, "until I heard the petting president's speech."

Groucho's purpose in becoming president of Huxley is to get his son Zeppo out of college. Zeppo, in his twelfth year as a freshman, is announced of shapely Thelma Todd, "the college widow." Groucho breaks that right up by falling for Thelma himself.

The night before the big football game between Huxley and its archrival, Darwin, Groucho sends Harpo and Chico, his trusted henchmen, out to kidnap the two Darwin stars. The kidnappers are themselves kidnapped. The game has started by the time Harpo and Chico manage to saw their way out, and Darwin has a comfortable lead when they finally reach the field.

The Marx-maniacs, however, are too much for any eleven men to contend with. Groucho himself leaps out upon the gridiron from his field seat to "take out" a would-be tackler, and Zeppo makes the winning touchdown.

That night the Huxley students celebrate with a huge bonfire. But Harpo decides the bonfire isn't big enough for such a sensational victory and goes over to the college. Suddenly word comes that the villainous gambler Jennings (David Landau), the star—there's arch foe is trapped on the third floor. Groucho, cigar and all, runs into the blazing building amid cheers. He returns unexpectedly and hands a bystander his cigar. "There's no smoking in the corridors," he explains, and rushes back into the building. He reappears—not with Landau, but with a diploma for Zeppo. "I'll bet that'll burn Jennings up," he remarks as he retrieves his cigar butt.



"It's all as pop-eyed as that, and even more so. "Horse Feathers" is packed with super hilarious stuff, and it will be repeated at the Belle tonight and Tuesday, matinee and night.

"THE RINGER" IS CLEVER STORY OF THE UNDERWORLD

A film now at the Capitol Theatre for two days that will be worth just double to you in entertainment value and thrills if you haven't read the play—but a very excellent film in any case.

That was our feeling about "The Ringer," based on the novel of Edgar Wallace's thrillers in story form, when we saw a pre-view of it today we have been told that some women readers take a surreptitious peep at the last chapter of all the mysteries they read, partly to be "in the know," and partly to make sure that the villain really does come to a sticky end. After seeing "The Ringer" I felt even less in sympathy than before with this "peeping Jane" attitude.

In "The Ringer" 50 per cent. of the fun is in debating which of a number of characters may be the international crook and murderer who gets his nickname through "ringing the change" of disguise.

An international crook, humid high and low by the police, had to fly to Australia a year before the actual story opens. He took his wife with him, but left his sister well provided for in the care of a shady lawyer and suspected "fence,"

Minor drama when suspicion falls on a young man who has suffered by Maisley's crooked teachings—minor drama when a pretty sister "confesses" to save him—but big, stark drama when a "Yard" detective tears the disguise from the Ringer's face.

Then through one of the cleverest ruses the author ever thought out, the clues "Ringer" again and again through the hands of the law. We will keep the last-minute trick a secret—its surprise is its chief beauty.

As it stands it's a good film. Even seeing "The Ringer" and before spoiling the denouement, the management of the Capitol announces that no one will be seated during the last reel.

Tonight at intermission time, too.

CLERK DREW OUT ALL BUT 1,500 DOLLARS

$41,000 Deposited by Austin in Bank in Parkdale

SPECIAL AUDIT

Losses Which Began in 1926-27 May Reach $40,000

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—H. Lionel Austin, provincial treasury board clerk, deposited $41,000 in a Parkdale bank during the past nine years and drew all but $1,500 of it out at various times, it was learned last night.

Immediately upon his return from Northern Ontario, Attorney General W. H. Price conferred with Hon. E. B. Ryckman, provincial treasurer, and later issued a statement that the amount charged to Austin will probably reach $40,000, half of which the government will have to pay. He was bonded for $30,000;

"There were no new developments in the police investigation headed by Deputy Commissioner Alfred Cuddy but he is being assisted by Inspectors Charles Gurnett and John Miller, Mr. Cuddy stated that he was still endeavoring to locate suspected bank or trust accounts owned by the arrested man.

A special audit showed losses started in 1926-27, Col. Price also announced. Austin's expensive manner of living was attributed to an annuity which it was thought he received from England. Retrieving some of the circumstances of the case, Col. Price stated that the present system of cancelling interest coupons was adopted during his regime as treasurer. Under the present debt of the province, the number of coupons handled annually amounted to more than one million. The system in use at the present time, Col. Price declared, seemed to have been the only method government trusted the confidential clerk.

With an average of 2,500 coupons daily coming into the audit department, a proper appreciation of the circumstances in which Austin obtained, he said. Another difficulty was that many people did not send in their interest coupons for some time often a considerable period after the interest date fell due.

PULLS PONY'S TAIL, KICKED IN THE FACE

TORONTO, Sept. 26.— Kicked in the face by a pony that he playfully pulled the animal's tail, 15-year-old Clifford Mark, 8, Trenton Avenue, Toronto, is in the Toronto East General Hospital, where two operations were performed early Saturday night on his face. Another operation is scheduled for today.

The accident happened on Saturday in a pasture on the home of Kraus, Segriff, Woodbine Avenue, who owns 20-year-old Dolly, the pony of which Clifford and Mark had been promised a ride on Dolly and he and some friends were trying to saddle the pony when the accident occurred. Clifford managed to catch up to Dolly when she started to run, and he grabbed the tail and tugged. Dolly reared and kicked with her hands legs, the hoofs striking the boy square in the face. He fell unconscious, his face streaming blood. It is believed he will be partially disfigured for life.

The pony, Dolly's own not shod which fact is believed to have saved the boy's life. He was rushed to the hospital and failed to recover consciousness for some time. Clifford was to have left shortly with his mother and six brothers and sisters for Matheson, in Northern Ontario where his father is building a log cabin to which the Government settlement plan.

CHINA BANKS ON U.S. MONEY

Will Buy United States Wheat, Parley is Called

Washington, Sept. 26—President Hoover today called on the White House representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture, the Farm Board and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to arrange for the sale of more Government wheat to China.

It was learned authoritatively that there was discussion of a possible loan of $8,000,000 of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds directly to China or possibly to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation to finance purchase of this wheat.

Reconstruction Corporation officials said they knew of no direct approach from China, nor from China or the Grain Corporation, and no decision on this phase had been made at the White House parley.

Grand Barrier Seen

The Reconstruction Corporation is empowered to make loans to facilitate the export of surplus agricultural commodities, provided such export does not unbalance the world market, but authorities said today China's ability to repay question still to be decided as to whether the corporation could lend directly to a foreign country.

It was said after the conference that the proposed sale would involve wheat now held by growers in the Northwest. The grain producers in that section, it was explained, have suffered distress because of the cost of shipping their product to the East or Midwest for sale.

Arrangements Not Complete

George Milnor, manager of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, has been attempting to arrange the sale to China, but it was said today no final arrangements had been made.

More than a year ago, Farm Board said approximate 15,000,000 bushels of its stabilization wheat to China.

At the White House it was said no announcement could be made concerning the conference.

MAKES CLAIM TO KING TUT TREASURE

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 26.—A man claiming to be a direct descendant of King Tut-Ankh-Amen announces that he is going to embark upon a "study of his tomb."

He claims that his ancestor's treasure was held by the Government, when he should have it. He will proceed to the temple at Sefu on October 11th, he said, having selected that date to start his hunger strike because it is the date of King Tut's death 30 centuries ago.

"Under the shadow of the god Horus" he said, "I will starve myself to death unless the government hands over my treasures."

ITALY'S WHEAT YIELD BEST UPON RECORD

Peril, Italy, Sept. 26.—(AP) — Premier Mussolini announced today that the National Grain Committee has estimated this year's wheat crop at 275,250,000 bushels, the highest ever recorded. This crop will make Italy practically self-sufficient.

So far as wheat is concerned, for consumption is about 200,000,000 bushels. The crop increase, said the Premier is not due to increased acreage but to increased yield per acre.

The slain girl, whose bullet-riddled body was left behind by fleeing terrorists was identified as Pritilata Waddedar, a young Indian intellectual and graduate of Bethune College in Calcutta. Brutus was a good dog, the friendly, tail-wagging, smiling kind of dog. Wanting to be petted he jumped upon the lady, who was frightened. From gossip to scandal is a short step, and heaven help the person or thing against whom the public mind is poisoned.

Successful merchants and manufacturers are those who realize the mischief that can be created by "They say." These business men, determined to pay the truth, themselves, about their own merchandise and service, employ advertising to protect themselves and the public from half truths, from falsehoods and from the common garden variety of ignorance that works havoc among the very best of intentions.

These merchants and manufacturers are under no delusions. They know they cannot tell untruths about their products and get away with it because there is nothing that will bring ruin so fast and sure as to turn the bright, white light of publicity on inferior wares or unsatisfactory service.

Advertising forces manufacturers to compete for your trade and your dollars. It compels the offering of better merchandise, better service, fair prices. You can trust the advertisements in this paper!

HYDRO OFFICES OPENED BY HON. ROBT. COOKE

Hydro Situation in Belleville is Praised by Ontario Commissioners At Opening of New Offices on Front St.

No Advance in Rates to Consumers Says Chairman Fairfield

HON. R. COOKE ACTS

Slack in Power at Present to be Taken up With Recovery

Monday afternoon the new quarters of the Belleville Hydro Commission were opened under most auspicious circumstances. The chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, the Hon. R. H. Cooke, M.P.P., and his fellow commissioner, the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, P.C., K.C., were present. Dr. F. E. Gaby, chief engineer and Major W. W. Pope, secretary of the Ontario Commission, were in attendance, and Mr. C. H. Carnegie, of Guelph, secretary of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association, journeyed to Belleville to be present at the opening of another municipally owned headquarters of a public service organization. Mayor W. C. Tummon, M.P., W. R. Ireland, K.C., P.P., and J. P. Hill, M.P.P., were also present to mark the advance in the Hydro interests in this city.

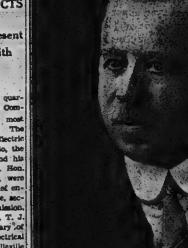
Seldom in Belleville has a more representative audience congregated than that which filled the large hall, occupying the front of the second floor of the new Hydro building block. Some two hundred men and women of this city displayed with interest the excellent addresses of the various speakers and heartily applauded the remarks of the distinguished visitors in the second and last distinction to the occasion. Later they witnessed the chairman of the Hydro Board, to release the flags covering the stone tablet beside the entrance to the store and offices and declare the new offices officially opened. Following this many availed themselves of the invitation of the local manager, Donald Bell, to look over the premises, and on all sides complimentary remarks were heard relative to the completeness and beauty of the new quarters.

Chairman H. E. Fairfield and managing-secretary Scott are to be congratulated on the completeness of Monday afternoon's arrangements and the manner in which the opening of the new home was carried out.

No Change in Rates

Mr. Fairfield who acted as chairman for the afternoon's proceedings said:

"One of the privileges of being chairman is that one gives an opportunity to make a few remarks and mine will be few today, as I realize you are not here to listen to me but rather to our distinguished guests.



"First, I would like to say that it is with regret that I mention the absence of one of our committeemen, Mr. Frank Hanna. It is most regrettable that he is not able to be with us this very important occasion, but I feel that I will be pleased to learn that he is somewhat better, although he is very ill man.

"We consider ourselves highly honored in having with us today the members of the Ontario Commission, and I wish to thank them for having taken time from their very busy life to assist us in opening our new building.

"Before calling on them, may I give you a few facts in reference to our own system.

"You, no doubt, had seen in the press, mention of the increased amounts which our local commissions are called upon to pay the Ontario Commission this year. This is inevitable, due to the exchange situation and also the business conditions, but your local commission, while they are paying the matter their best attention, and are deeply concerned with increased necessary payments, think that they will be no reason for a change in the local rates. Both the local and Ontario commission have approved the schedule which has been in force and also have recommended the retaining to the lighting and water works departments of the city $127L13 and $330.85 respectively. I am sure that this will be pleasant news to our citizens and they will be able to make greater use than ever of one of the great-

The producer and manager of the Belle Theatre, brought a photographer of the Paramount News to this city to take views of the ceremony. The presence of the late Sir Gilbert in literature and public life and the interest of the school children and adults who have heard of him make the distribution of the reel story of the last tribute of importance.

Y'S MEN PLAN MEMBERS' DRIVE

Extensive plans were laid at Monday night's Y's Men's Club banquet for a membership drive for the club. The project was approved by the board of directors and passed on to the members at the weekly banquet on Monday. As the Y's Men's movement has something of an educational advantage to give its members the directors were of the opinion that the time was mature to start on a membership drive. Considerable work along the lines of Y's Men's activity has been planned for the fall semester and more members of high quality are needed to carry out the suggested projects which have been attempted by the club. Other arrangements for the annual fall dance were also completed at the termination of the banquet. Alex Gordon presided at the banquet during the evening's entertainment.

SLIGHT CRASH BY AUTOMOIBLES

Shortly after midnight Monday a slight motor accident happened at the corner of Bridge and Front street, due to the wet slippery pavement. Mr. J. S. Nasett of Brockville, was driving his car north on Front street, at the time and as he attempted to make a left hand turn to proceed west on Bridge street, his car was said collided by with a car driven west on Bridge street driven by Richard Elmer of Toronto. Both cars had approached the intersection simultaneously and as they applied the brakes to their cars the cars skidded on the slippery pavement. Sergeant A. Booth and Constable Bice investigated the accident, and after ascertaining that little or no damage was reported to either car allowed the motorists to proceed on their respective. ways. No charges were laid.

Here the party took interest the great power plants under construction. The most interesting trip was made to Moose Factory, one point of Hudson Bay Company, ten or twelve miles down James Bay. This trip was made in small boats. On the return journey stops were made at Timmins and the McIntyre, Dome and Hollinger mines visited; at Iroquois Falls it was the pulp plants there, and at Sudbury where mines and plant of the International Nickel Co. were carefully gone over and explained by the company's officials.

This was the third trip Mr. Hill had made over certain portions of Ontario's northern territory, and he stated he was well acquainted with that area since he last visited it. He was more than pleased with the opportunities Northern Ontario offered not only for mining interests, but the development of and the production of timber and pulp but for farming of every kind as well.

CLAIMS RAZOR IS FLOURISHED BY STRANGER

Vagrancy Charge is Admitted And Pair Told to Leave

POOL ROOM FRACAS

Local Pugilist Claims to Have Made Retreat at Sight of Razor

Following a fight in which one of the participants is alleged to have pulled a razor and tried to slash the throat of George Semark, local boxer, Paul Duggan and Clay McLellan of this city were arrested by Constable Isard and Evans on a charge of vagrancy Monday night.

The two accused young men appeared in the police court Tuesday morning when they were found guilty to a charge of vagrancy and Duggan pleaded guilty to the assault charge, while an additional count of professional gambling was laid out to the latter's charge. Duggan pleaded guilty and both were given a suspended sentence of three months by Magistrate Mifed and one hour to vacate the city.

It is alleged by the police that the two accused men were playing pool in a local pool room on Monday night when George Semark, During the progress of the game he alleged that took place in which Semark says that McLellan pulled a razor out of his pocket and attempted to slash his throat. Semark made a quit exit and acceding to the suggestion handed out by the police Duggan and McLellan then proceeded to continue their quarrel with Red Harrigan, another local mit artist. After this alleged fracas the two men were summoned but before their arrival the men had disappeared.

Later Duggan and McLellan were arrested Sheriff Ray by the city officers and held on a nominal charge of vagrancy although the two lads have been living in Belleville for some little time they are of the impudent type and it is said taking all this into consideration the court was of the opinion that the suspended sentence coupled with the county order to leave the city immediately was sufficient punishment.

The two young men immediately departed for parts unknown.

Turkeys Mock at Thanksgiving Fewer Birds, Fewer Killings

Season Has Been Too Cool And Birds Are Scarce

HIGHER PRICES

Turkey, the illuminating master-piece of the barn yard, also considered the major item of the sacrificial Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner, will be scarcer, higher, according to local produce men and dealers who say they already prepared their annual invasion of the rural sections of this district to secure as many of the birds needed to fill their order books already being filled.

Indications are that there is a pickup in orders being received for these birds, more than have been received for some time past. Farsighted shippers are already ahead and are already booking orders from commission men throughout the country. Belleville is one of the larger commission centres. But, due to retail, and other orders being received for the birds, turkeys themselves are going to be scarce this year. Even on farms which have in the past been able to supply from one to three dozen of the healthy eatrees, hardly a solitary turk can be seen, and even a bench test would be an apt simile.

In former years many of these farms have found turkey raising a profitable, even if highly troublesome and very uncertain sideline. But, this year has been a bad year for turkeys. Many a farmer had high hopes with the chickens of turkey eggs so carefully tended in the warm incubators, and afterwards with the healthy-appearing young chicks which abounded about the yard, but for no reason at all most of them suddenly died off. How, ever, there's a reason, according to veteran turkey raisers.

"It's been too cold for turkeys this year," declared one well known farmer. "Turkeys, as every one knows are almost as hard to kill as a cat. They've never been too much for them. Lots of them simply died from sheer cussedness, I believe. They couldn't stand the gaff. Last year was a pretty fair year, but this year a man's lucky if he has three left out of a dozen."

Although local demand for turkey has been slow, commission men depend on Ontario and Quebec markets, where turkeys are shipped annually, to supply a steady demand. Seemingly the demand is going to be there, but as far as indications point to the fact that producers will not fill the local folk.

So, producer men warn: if you want turkey this year for Thanksgiving or Christmas, or your order-ing early, or pay higher prices, for now men are about ready to travel the countryside picking out the best of the fowl for Montreal residents and Toronto epicures. By the time they get through there will be little left for home consumption. The Belleville idea however seems to be—as long as there's duck or chicken, who cares for Cranberrieasie as good with either.

Village of 383 People Finds Bonds Better Than Dominion's

Saskatoon, Sept. 27.—(By the Canadian Press)—Armaida, village of about 40 miles east of Saskatoon, which boasts one policeman, can command better prices for its bonds than the Dominion of Canada. Recently finding itself in a fine position of having a considerable surplus of cash, the village entered into negotiations with its bondholders to repurchase the debenture issue.

The financial concern was not at all anxious and refused to sell back the debenture except at a premium. The premium brought the interest return to slightly less than 6% and paid on Dominion of Canada bonds. In other words the village can make money by buying Dominion bonds, handing over part of the interest to satisfy its bondholders, and have the balance to develop the village.

TRAMPS WEAR BEST STYLE STOLEN CLOTHES

Hensall, Ont., Sept. 27—(CP)—Two fastidious and nattily-attired tramps are sought by police in Huron county.

Dropping off a freight train here they entered the general store of T. C. Joynt by removing the entire frame of the front door. From the racks, they selected suits to their liking, and dragged coats, shirts, ties and sport oxfords from the shelves. Grey felt hats completed the ensembles. Then, flinging their tattered rags, they placed them on a chair, left the place and haven't been seen since.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES OPENS

Newark, N. J. Attracts Eyes of Minor Base-Ballers

(By B. Gregory Hewlett)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newark, N. J., Sept. 27—Eyes of the Minor League baseball world turned to this red-hot baseball city today as the opening of engagement of the little world series between the champions of the International League and the American Association.

Newark, itself, was in a holiday mood as today's battle between its own Bears and the Minneapolis Millers" started the first game in the Hailstorm the classic of the double A leagues was held here. Then, too, the series climaxed a season for the Bears such as Newarkers had not seen since the team topped the International League 19 long years ago.

Partly because of the long interval between the pennant races and this city, a record crowd for little world series games was expected to throng to Ruppert Stadium for the start at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Advance sale of tickets was heavy and it was indicated a crowd of 20,000 would attend.

Acting Governor A. Harry Moore, President of the State Senate, will head the list of dignitaries attending while Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, will top the role of baseball celebrities.

LOWER TARIFF IS FORESEEN

Sutherland Predicts Reduction Not Far Distant

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—"Money must be dethroned as the dictator, and must resume its real place as the servant of humanity," declared Hon. Ian Mackenzie, M.P., for Vancouver Centre, former member of the Mackenzie Government, in a luncheon address to the Lauder Club Monday. Mr. Mackenzie set forth his conception of the task confronting Liberalism in Canada. He declared for establishment of a national bank to separate national financial policy from the private business of lending money.

Mr. Mackenzie described the Liberal Party as the "Centre-Forward" Party, avoiding the extremes of reaction and radicalism. He declared: The nineteenth century battle for political freedom has been won We must now dedicate ourselves to the twentieth century problem of economic deliverance."

Liberalism's Objectives.

Embodied in his address was a list of objectives forward which he contended, Liberalism must direct its efforts if it was to keep in the forefront of progress in these changing times. They were:

Care of the unemployed as a national duty.

Devising of remedies for the eradication of the causes of unemployment.

Placing work before the dole us all unemployment policies. Unemployment insurance on a sound actuarial basis.

Writing down of interest rates.

Recasting of the banking structure through establishment of a national bank.

Coverage in meeting the question of public debt.

Creation of a national committee to investigate the entire governmental structure of the Dominion —Federal, Provincial and Municipal.

Fearless promulgation of Liberal opposition to trade restrictions, prohibitions, and embargoes and reaffirmation of faith in the development of world trade.

Declaration in favor of lowering of sectri tariff barriers.

Co-operation by international study in solution of crushing world problems.

Growth Despite Cost

"It was a year ago on the 1st of August that the last reduction in rates was made and it was very gratifying to your commission, to know that our revenue in August, 1932 was above that of 1931.

"There are other matters I would like to discuss at this time but the sermon will not permit. I hope, however, at a near future date to have the privilege of addressing the citizens of Belleville and going into details and explaining the happy prosperous financial condition of the Belleville Hydro."

On finishing his address the chairman called on the Hon. Robert Cooke to introduce the speaker of the afternoon, the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

Mr. Cooke said he was pleased to be present in Belleville at the formal opening of a public-owned building which marked a development of public ownership in Central Ontario. A year ago Mr. Meighen had decided to associate himself with one of the greatest organizations in America, the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission and he did not believe he was making the last trade that decision, certainly his fellow commissioners have never had no intention of making an address, he left that for his colleague, Mr. Meighen.

Memories of Belleville

"A hearty reception was accorded the ex-premier of Canada when he arose to address the audience. Mr. Meighen said he had been lured to Belleville today, not to make a will. He recognized Mr. Cooke as his chief and it was a disappointment not to hear from him as the main speaker of the afternoon. He was one of the men whom his chief had yet made on him. "Very interesting things I like to go into towns and cities and meet former friends and I have had many happy memories of Belleville. He sincerely regretted today the absence of Charles H. Ponton, who had been opposite him in the Commons at Ottawa, it was with sincere regret he had learned of his illness and his sympathy went out to Mrs. Ponton and his family; it was his hope and that of all that Charles A. Hanna's recovery would be soon and complete.

Refers to Parker

Synchronized with this was the sad passing of a man in Belleville's midst of one who had sat in the advanced council of Belleville and had been one outstanding in the firmament of literature, Sir Gilbert Parker. A great name made in Canada and throughout the literary world, one which had added lustre to Canada's glories and those of the Empire. Mr. Meighen left Belleville in the loss of an illustrious son.

He did not intend making an exhaustive review of the great work which had been done at the luncheon at noon. The Hydro was at present under judicial review and it was not his intention to enter into any controversy over which this was taking place. He had complete faith in Hydro and when thoroughly believed that out of the present investigation the truth would emerge then Hydro would be thoroughly vindicated. Any organization of a business such as the Hydro, handling millions of the public's money was open to scan and ever would come in for criticism, but on examination and operation of the Hydro of Ontario had been since its origin and throughout its stupendous growth and nothing but fear by any fair-minded investigation. He had come on this occasion after the inquiry had been launched, however the Hon. Robert Cooke was a member of the commission and might be called upon to give suspended sentence and perhaps that was why he was not talking this afternoon leaving it to the role of his business lieutenants to do." Ontario Hydro throughout the province, however, had become a prominent role in investigation that was under way.

Outstanding Institution

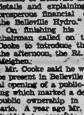
The Hydro Commission of Ontario had become an outstanding institution in the realm of public ownership years ago, the initial work had been established and the long days of uphill work done by forestal leaders such as the late Sir Adam Beck.

Every big enterprise was always criticised and no matter what the administration would always have to meet criticism, and the critic would find support for their attack. The Hydro Commission had been exceptionally scrupulous in the management of the trust imposed in them. They had displayed courage and consistency in the discharge of their duties and laying the way for the future. They were too made to the people in the carrying out of their plans and their actions, duties to be heartened whole-heartedly to the harping criticisms.

Trustees for People

The Hydro Commission while appointed by the Government of Ontario, are trustees for each of the municipalities now some 700 in number served by the commission and are answerable to them for the progressiveness of their policy. They have to maintain a fairness of administration to all concerned.

The province supplies the money used by the municipalities in the establishment and furthering of their Hydro requirements; the Ontario. The administration of the affairs of Hydro are safe in his charge and he free hands in the Hydro's future under him.



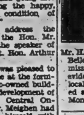
Surplus Power

"Though now possessed of surplus power the future will take care of it. It was impossible to gauge and foresee the dip of finances, but when certain agreements and extensions were entered into and planned. Hydro had power, however, a great reserve and fortified its financial position strongly. Soon the slack whigh prevails will be overcome and when it does come when this is absorbed. The power of the St. Lawrence River, way is that of Ontario and not the school house" days of cattleford, Mr. Hannigan recalled studying Dominion's.

Ten years will probably elapse before Ontario is allowed on to take power from that source and will very likely need it by then.

The commission regarding the St. Lawrence power has been reasonable and defensible.

Concluding Mr. Meighen again expressed his happiness in being in



Mr. H. F. Fairfield, Chairman of the Belleville Municipal Hydro Commission, whose guiding hand is evident in the achievements of the local Hydro. Mr. Fairfield presided at the opening ceremonies on Monday afternoon.

tario Hydro Commission is in the position of banker of these funds. It is their duty in this relation to supervise the expenditures of these municipalities in Hydro matters and advising and recommending. They are not the servants of the Government but servants of the municipalities over which they have supervision only. They are trustees for the people.

The Ontario Hydro has changed the standard of electricity in Canada but in any other advanced country, of private interests creating great public utilities and aroused their people to the great march toward public ownership.

A Contrast

"Achievements of the Ontario Hydro are difficult to compare with those of private concerns" said Senator Meighen. The genius of the Ontario system is in opposition to the genius of private interests. Those concerns are out to make as money promotes the efficiency of the commission's objective being profit. There is no outgo or extension unless profit is seen in it. With the Hydro its management

Mayor G. O. Tice, member of the local Hydro Commission, who with the City Council throughout the years has come to the Ontario Hydro Commission concerning their hospital problems.

Belleville once more and "seeing to be free, I am glad to be back here." Whatever his stand had been in the past it did not influence his decision in the Ontario Hydro Commission today.

Mr. Cooke again stated that the meeting frankly admitted his deep interest in the success of the Hydro in Belleville the past three and a half years. He had sought to encourage the owning municipality, of the Belleville system and he was gratified to see the steady increasing success of the enterprise.

Recalls Purchase

Looking back sixteen years ago, there was no connection locally to Central Ontario from Toronto on the west to Ottawa on the east, only extending north to Lindsay which had a 5 cent interest in the local system. The province had local bought the privately owned system serving this city for $8,500. Then and in one year had cut the rates 50 per cent. Then Campbellford, Trenton, Cobourg and Napanee now connected with the system.

Very few in Belleville had misgivings when the local system passed from the hands of its own commissioners at a price of $176,000 for the power in two. Belleville, Cobourg, Trenton and Napanee now connected with the system.

has ever in view service at cost with extension to make available for service the people in the various sections of the province. Mr. R. H. Saunders, one of the first men ago said he hoped to live to see the day when the farmers of Ontario got electricity. Today in that town, with a hundred homes are equipped electrically while in the year following township of Thurlow four miles south of the city by Hydro of the province. The people received a return of service and increased revenue, a decreasing rates while the privately owned companies seek profit for the benefit of its shareholders and not the province where profit warrants. Since taking over the distribution profits in this section of the province the rates have been have reduced the rates a half to a quarter as the law approved the service.

In Belleville since the municipality took over the utility two reductions in rates have been made. The plant was purchased for $176,000 in 1929 and already $100,000 of this had been paid and this amount had not to be paid till 1939.

Question of Taxes

"There was no intention of the Hydro that they did not pay taxes while the privately owned public utilities were the only paid taxes on their profits. There was much of misunderstanding on the argument, but the Hydro did pay taxes, on its real property assets but not on improvements. This had been agreed on as a simpler and fairer system to follow. It was not the desire of the Hydro to operate at cost and any profit was by a sympathy in returning to it as a refund.

"T. R. Cook, chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario needs no eulogy at my hands. He feels he has a great example to follow in the history inaugurated under Sir Adam Beck. Investigation and attack have been withstood under the leadership of Robert Cooke. He is a man with his feet on the ground, firm in the belief of the future of Hydro in thority on Hydro electric development and one of the most valuable men associated with electrical development and service in Ontario.

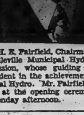
Men of Vision



Harking back to the "little red

Mr. Hannigan recalled studying the rule of three with a lad who had gone a different way from him for years in finally meet again with a common interest, Hydro Electric development, the lad being none other than Hon. R. J. Cooke, Chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario, also present at this gathering. Another local reference from the chair the speaker was to R. J. Graham, also present, who owned more than thirty years ago, when Mayor of Belleville had urged the development of the Moira river for electric light and power. Mayor Graham was unable to secure backing for the project and proceeded to develop it himself, live to see the farmers of Sidney township lighting their homes with electricity. That prophesy has come true to the extent of ten hundred and fifty horsepower in Sidney being lighted with electricity and the needed power developed in Thurlow township. Thus are men of vision always rewarded and it is men of vision who can be hopeful and confident of their building up this greater Canada, said the speaker.

Forty-seven years ago while a boy in Campbellford a man had come from Belleville to visit Mr. Hannigan's father what a wonderful city that was, Belleville with a combination of wires and poles and large globes of electricity and the lighting of which they never had been lighted before. His father took it with a grain of salt, but the boy utterly believed it.

In The Beginning.

Proceeding with his story of electrical development in Ontario the speaker said that the power companies had rendered good service in their day, leading up to

Hydro Commissioner Chas. E. Hanna who was unable on account of ill-health to attend the ceremony of the opening of the Belleville Hydro offices on Monday afternoon, but hopes that the former chairman would soon be restored to health.

for the past twenty years and it was due to him more than to any other man that the Ontario Hydro was in the predominantly satisfactory situation it is today.

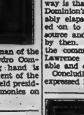
Local Satisfaction

Dr. Gaby said it was a deal of satisfaction to him to be in Belleville to assist in the opening of the new Hydro premises here. The relations obtained in this city the past year had justified the figures submitted by his department.

From Central Ontario 22 corporations had been taken over by the Hydro and these had prospered under other utilities and purposes aside from those specific of power distribution and these parts of their service had to be eliminated. In accordance with this the expenditure been figured as lost. There was nothing obscure, however, in success and the twelve years of operation the same principles of public ownership and rate ownership and interest paid to the Ontario Government. In 1928 $1,000,000 of Hydro profits had been turned over to various municipalities throughout the province.

In Eastern Ontario expenditures of $18,000,000 had been made. There was $8,000,000 in reserve funds for the protection of the municipalities in Ontario and these municipalities themselves have also developed by this equalizing this amount.

Dr. Gaby had paid grateful tribute to the Gentlemen Power Commissioners at a price of $176,000 for the power in two. Belleville, Cobourg, Trenton and Napanee now connected with the system.



$311,000 Plant

It was a deal of satisfaction to know the able assistance of Manager O. H. Scott had been retained. Under him the local plant had been developed the expectation of the Commission's expectations. On a $311,000 municipal property in the Belleville system there remains only some $60,000 debt now to be paid to the municipality of Ontario.

In the absence of Mayor Tice the chairman called in Manager Scott to present the operating figures for 1931 and see so many of his fellow citizens so interested in the afternoon's proceedings.

Following this Mr. Cooke unloosened the veil from the statue in front of the building, unlocked the door and declared the building open for business and inspection.

In all, the opening of the Belleville Hydro Electric's new building was a success in every detail.

Ex-Mayor George A. Reids former colleague in municipal affairs and one of the staunchest advocates of municipal ownership in the city of Belleville who has taken a deep interest in the affairs of the local board of which he was a member for two years.

made enabled a payment on the principal of $112,000. The present Hydro offices and warehouse system had cost $35,000 and was paid for without any additional taxation to the citizens of the community. It must be admitted that a commission has been extraordinarily fortunate in all the opening of the Belleville Hydro Electric's new building was a success in every detail.

TO REGISTER APPLICANTS FOR RELIEF

Order-in-Council Implements Recommendations of Advisory Committee

TRANSIENTS

Residence Cards to be Issued by Municipalities of Indigents

Toronto, Sept. 27.—Compulsory registration of all applicants for relief in Ontario is provided by order-in-council passed by the Ontario Government to implement recommendations of its advisory committee.

Heads of families and others, the new regulations provide, must register with the municipality in which they are resident and will receive a residence certificate card which, if the family or person moves to another centre, must be produced before relief is given by the municipality.

The order-in-council, the contents of which were made public by Hon. W. H. Price, attorney-general, replaces that passed in the main by the orders recommended by the advisory committee though the steps have been taken to institute suggested interment camps for transients.

The interment camps, Col Price explained, were in the process of subject of negotiations between the Ontario and the Federal Government, and further announcement in this regard might be expected later.

Monthly Statement

Among other suggestions adopted by the Government are provisions for monthly statements of relief expenditure from municipalities to the province, through textbooks at any time the Minister may ask for them.

Ontario contributions to direct relief will be maintained at last year's level, with the proviso that the Minister may increase this amount to any municipality which is not able to carry the burden.

FRIENDS SHAKE HANDS OF FORMER PREMIER

The short visit of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen to Belleville, Monday, afforded an opportunity to a number of his friends in this district here to once again greet him personally. Mr. Meighen is looking the picture of health, and has added weight since his retirement from the premiership, in the 1920's. His able, inconspicuous leadership in Ottawa showed he still retains all the brilliancy of his premiership days and has if it were possible, gained in eloquence.

On Saturday, as Mr. Meighen said "it was a pleasure to him to once again be in Belleville among old faces" in South Hastings. Those same faces, however, have a reciprocate that sentiment, the former Premier was admitted into their one time leader, and the latter with the bitterness of yesteryear forgotten.

Arthur Meighen was yesterday welcomed to Belleville once more, and it is to be trusted that again will this city in the very near future.

LEAVES DOGS TO HER HUSBAND, NO MONEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Florence Hunter died leaving $50,000 and eight dogs. Her husband got the dogs, she said in her will, "because I know he will provide for them." He also gets the residue of the estate. Besides four of the dogs were dead when he got them.

In telling notice that he would contest the will, Louis R. Hunter called attention to the fact that the will left his wife's estate to blood relatives, and to the Christian Missionary Alliance the Red Cross animal relief and the American Humane Association and not to the provision for him except for the dogs.

He found four of the dogs dead in the cellar, he said, and had them buried in an animal cemetery where other dogs lie. Hunter had owned and bred setters.

There is a late saying to the effect which it is impossible for a husband or wife to disinherit the other. Mrs. Hunter, however, declared her will one day before the law was so effect.

Parish Church Where He Attended as Youth Scene of Last Farewell

As the congregation was gathering for the opening of the funeral service, Mrs. Ross Hunter at the organ played softly "Marche Funebre". When the vicar of the parish, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne began the service of the order for the burial of the dead, which was fully choral, the church was filled with the friends of Sir Gilbert, representatives of various public and military organizations and citizens. The sentence opening the burial service were sung by the vicar after which the choir led by Mr. Ross Hunter began to sing the ninetieth psalm, "Lord, Thou Hast Been Our Refuge from One Generation to Another". The hymn "Jesus the Resurrection Morning" was sung by choir and congregation, after which Rev. Canon Ralph Right Rev. John Lyona, Bishop of Ontario, addressed a few words of the friends of Sir Gilbert present. The triumph song of the church was sung.

"For All the Saints who from their Labours Rest."

Who Thee by faith before the world confessed,

Thy Name O Jesus, be forever blest, Alelulia!!

This familiar lesson from 1 Corinthians 15 chapter, 20th verse, "Now is Christ risen from the dead," and the triumphant hymn was the "Nunc Dimittis" and the funeral cortege with the church, the organist played Dead March in Saul.

INTEREST IN HYDRO

One of the most encouraging signs Belleville has seen was the large attendance of citizens who witnessed the opening of the Hydro offices on Monday afternoon. The attendance was beyond expectations, the accommodation of the second floor being taxed. This sincere tribute of citizens to the success of the local system was one which the members of the Hydro Commission appreciate.

"Nothing succeeds like success" goes an old saying and if ever it was true, it is true in the case of the municipally-owned Hydro system. It has been a success, paying from the beginning proportion of the indebtedness before it was due and having the new offices and improvements all paid for besides possessing a surplus and having made reductions in rates which have meant a cut in expenditure to the consumers of $95,000 in the three years of operation under municipal ownership.

One of the surest signs of the progress of the utility is that the rate to the consumers will not be advanced even though the Local commission has been called upon to pay more for power to the Ontario Commission as a result of adverse exchange rates which have been ruling for the past years. This statement by Chairman H. E. Fairfield of the Belleville Commission was welcome news to users of electricity.

The hundreds who heard Hon. Robert Cooke, chairman of the Ontario Commission, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, member of the Hydro Commission, Major W. W. Pope, secretary and G. A. Gaby, engineer of the Ontario Commission as well as the local board members and the local manager, Mr. C. H. Scott, at the opening ceremonies and the large number who took in the unveiling on Front Street also took in the visit that they were privileged to participate on such an occasion. The beauty and accommodation of the building completely satisfy all.

It has been a proud day for the members of the local commission to see their efforts achieved and the progress prophesied bounded to and to witness such an endorsement of their efforts as the citizens manifested.

There is one point about the building which makes it unique—the front. No one could fail to notice the effective front, recessed where fronts are generally projecting and done in material and color in complete harmony. The idea of withdrawing the show window where usually the front projects and where a local thought centre is projected was a bold one and it would not be surprising to see that the idea is taken up by architects and store-owners because of the additional freedom given for window-shopping, free from the molestation of those who are walking past. The recessed window also accentuates the show-space within. The local commission with the architect and the manufacturers of the glass plate are to be congratulated on the innovation.

Modern decoration and construction in association with the sale of one of the world's greatest discoveries, electricity—no wonder, they go in company. Comments by those who inspected the front and the interior were complimentary of the Hydro Commission and indicative of the place which Hydro occupies in the forefront and the van of modern progress.

A NEW ORDER COMETH

The new order of Quinte pioneers have a worthy object — to stimulate interest in the history of the Bay of Quinte section. This region ought to be proud for it has reason to feel that the district has made a more notable contribution to the national life than the Quinte area.

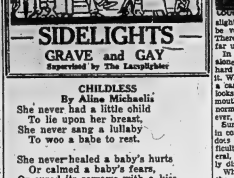
The best way to serve the nation is to, start at home. Therefore patriotism should be local and then spread to take in the whole Dominion. He who is loyal to the home surroundings is loyal to the sum of all the districts which make up Canada.

The creation of this association was a happy thought.

SHOWMANSHIP AND PRINCIPLE

Kiwanis has shown that its membership has a knowledge of showmanship else how could the large crowds which attended the carnival programs be explained. Year after year the Kiwanians have held high carnival for philanthropic work and their success has never faded.

The reason is clear. It is perhaps twofold: they have a righteous cause and they know how to attract. Such a combination could not be thought of as a failure.



GANDHI

Citizens the world over will be pleased that Mahatma Gandhi has not been permitted to immolate himself by starvation. The Hindus and Britain were right in reaching a compromise which will probably lead to the better understanding and to an ultimate settlement.

The death of Gandhi would but have beclouded the issue.

The death fast was a dramatic card to play by Gandhi but no one can say he did not mean it. Two divergent opinions have been held by the world as to himself, one accepting his attitude at face value and the other crediting him with being a ballyhoo man. Well, Gandhi has proven that he will go to the extent almost of ending his life through sheer will power even when the body is craving food. For that he must be given credit.

As regular as the hands pointed to the hour, there used to be a dog howl. That day is past with the extinction of the "singing terrior" of McAnnany Street. Many noted the animal which gave vent to a wailing when he heard our Big Ben strike. Now like most mechanisms the clock will continue to strike long after the dog reaction is over.

She never sang a lullaby
To woo a babe to rest.

She never heeded a baby's hurts
Or called a baby's fears,
Or cured its sorrows with a kiss
Or wiped away its tears.

She never bore the weight of cares
That every mother knows;
She never thrilled with ecstasy
Of love that mounts and grows.

And so, for every little child
She passed upon the street
She felt a quickening of love
Through all her being beat.

She dreamed of all the happiness
She never would attain,
And every little child on Earth
Was cherished in her breast.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN, uncompromising exponent of the silent drama and opponent of "Talkies," with his funny feet, his amazing canes, and the pathos which has accompanied him from rags to riches, set a thousand or more kiddies off in hilarious hysterics at a matinee performance of "City Lights" Saturday Afternoon. At the same time extracting laughs from grown-ups addicted to Charlie Chaplinism—all this at one time in Belleville, while at the other the Four Marx Brothers, Harpo, Groucho, Chico and Zeppo, packed them in at a continuous show from one o'clock five. All of which goes to prove that what the world really needs is a good laugh, and a good laugh is capable of doing a whole lot of good. Even if Charlie Chaplin is foolish and the Marx Brothers nonsensical, the mere fact that they can create laughter in a sad old world filled with all kinds of trouble makes them public benefactors.

WEBBER AND FIELDS, old-time comedians, celebrate their golden jubilee of stage partnership Sunday evening in the Hotel Astor, New York City, where they were bonded a banquet by the theatrical profession and presented with two golden loving cups. Hundreds of friends of this talented team of entertainers filled the great banquet room of the Hotel Astor to do honor to them, cheerfully paying ten dollars a plate for the privilege. William A. Brady, dean of the theatrical profession in the United States, gave a very interesting address, the proceedings being broadcast, giving the highlights of the stage in the last fifty years, since the juvenile Webber and Fields first broke into the limelight by doing a turn at a Bowery theatre for the princely wage of two dollars a week, and no cakes. Webber and Fields, with fifty years stage experience behind them, are still going strong, and last season broke into radio where they made good on their merits as entertainers, as Mr. Brady says, radio measuring its favorites not by past performance or personality but by the goods delivered. That a theatrical team could act together for fifty years and still like each other, was a miracle, in Mr. Brady's opinion.

MOST MOUTH DEFECTS ARE EASILY CURED

Cause of Abnormalities in Life and Palate Not Known

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Harelip and cleft palate are almost invariably found together, and then are found among the same families. It is rare so far up as the nostrils.

In cleft palate the soft palate alone may be abnormal, or the hard palate, may be involved in it. When looking into the mouth in a case where both are involved it looks as though the roof of the mouth were split in two. Most abnormalities of this variety, however, affect only the soft palate.

Surgical help is always indicated in conditions like this, for not only does such a baby find it most difficult to nurse and to feed in general, but the abnormality is highly disfiguring as well.

When harelip is not pronounced, the sooner a corrective operation is performed the better. In the more marked cases, on the other hand, it is usually well to wait until the child is at least two months old and has started its normal growth development.

While surgeons hold divergent views concerning the best time to take corrective measures, and, as is taken, most seem to agree that it is best to wait until the second year.

The exact causes of either harelip or cleft palate still remain a mystery. That there has been failure of union of the cranial sutures while the infant is still in the embryonic stage is the most likely reason this should occur in certain cases and not in others cannot be answered.

It can be said, however, that no mother who gives birth to such a child should accuse herself in any way. Rather, it is a kind of act of nature. Heredity cannot exactly be held accountable, and certainly not the one often hears — are children born in this condition because the mother's mental condition, happened to see a similar case, or dreaded seeing one.

Besides other mouth abnormalities that may exist at birth should be mentioned as an unusually large and beefy tongue, a cleft or fissure in the tongue. Nothing can be done for such condition.

Sometimes there is a shortening of the membrane under the tongue, and this makes it impossible for the child to properly suckle. This is a normal child can. When the "tongue-tied" condition is noted by a parent, no hesitancy should be felt in having a very simple operation performed as early as possible. The membrane is simply snipped and that is all there is to it. that is all there is to it!

Among the mouth abnormalities in children are various cases of so-called malocclusion, which may or may not exist from birth. These are children, for instance, in whom the upper jaw is abnormally developed than the lower. When the mouth is closed, therefore, the upper set overlaps the lower. Through what are known as orthodontic appliances—various springs and wire bands which push, pull or twist—it is now possible to stimulate the bone growth of the lower jaw, which in some cases more or less retarding that of the upper.

Children, however, often suffer from malocclusion in other ways. In consequence their lips do not chew properly, the action of the salivary glands is hindered, and the mouth appearance in such cases may really become quite ugly.

GRAND Z. IS PAID HONOR

Belleville Masonic Chapters Forgather About a Festive Board

Over 200 Royal Arch Masons, representing every chapter in the district, attended the banquet in R.A.M., gathered together to pay homage to their Grand First Principal, Most Ex. Comp. Harry Mesnikoff of Haileybury, at a commemorative banquet tendered the chapters of the district in Christ Church Hall last evening.

Seated at the head table were various Grand Chapter representatives from the province from Ex. Grand district as well as members of every chapter ranging themselves under its banner. A lengthy programme including solos, readings and musical items was rendered and highly commended by all present. During the evening Grand Principal Mesnikoff's 40th day clock was presented Most Ex. Comp. Haeniscbel by Ex. Comp. Geo. Wright on behalf of the members of the various chapters in the district to mark his all too brief official visit to this district. In a befitting manner the Grand First Principal of Royal Arch Masons responded, thanking the members of R.A.M. spirit for their thoughtfulness and kindness.

"Let us make Royal Arch Masonry an asset to offer its new candidates" was the message left by Ex. Comp. Haeniscbel when he opened his address of the evening. Previously bringing before the meeting his message the speaker pointed out, in no uncertain manner, the benevolent work being carried on by the other branches of the Masonic order from the Blue Lodges right up to the Shrine, with the Royal Arch between. "What are we doing, as a body, towards the uplifting of those in distressing circumstances?" Following this up he similar task each separate chapter was undoubtedly doing great work in its community, but, as a body, we do nothing. Each Chapter needed something to put it on the Royal Arch Masonry map. "We are not doing its duty today" stressed the evening's chief speaker when he explained that the various benevolent activities in the past had been over-subscribed.

"I care not what measure you take, but would suggest that, as a body, we do something beneficial along the lines of benevolence, education or the great work among crippled children" said Ex. Comp. Haeniscbel, as he asked the support of the Prince Edward District No. 7 in his proposed plan of introducing a new fund for Grandsoon return.

Chapter to be utilized along these lines.

The speaker left one or two suggestions with the members for their personal and careful perusal and urged them to consider them sincerely and give them their untiring support when they were asked by the Grand Chapter. He pointed out that there were over 1,000 Royal Masons in Ontario and through their united efforts a fund could be passed along toward the uplift and betterment of others in distressing circumstances. He asked the members to assist in suggesting any other plan whereby a worthy new fund could be used to an advantage.

Most Ex. Comp. Haeniscbel proved to be a speaker of humor as well as one who left thoughts of kindness and education. His address was warmly applauded by the companions present.

Previous to the banquet Most Ex. Comp. Haeniscbel, Grand First Principal Comp. No. 7 R.A.M. at the Masonic Temple where he was officially welcomed by the temporary officers of the chapter at a special convocation held for the purpose.

Other speakers present at the banquet were Most Ex. Comp. H. Chesher, Ex. Comp. T. W. Solmes, Ex. Comp. H. Vick, Rt. Ex. Comp. C. H. Kinnear, Ex. Comp. G. E. Wright, Ex. Comp. F. M. Dure, Ex. Comp. R. R. Hepburn, Ex. Comp. J. Burgess, Ex. Comp. J. Weese, M.P., Ex. Comp. H. Mikel, Ex. Comp. D. Diamond, and Ex. Comp. J. O. Herrington. Ex. Comp. Col. Ponton sent his regrets on not being able to attend. Rt. Ex. Comp. R. T. Cherry, Grand Superintendent of the Prince Edward District acted as chairman during the evening.

Comp. Mayor Tice was called upon to propose the loyal toast in behalf of the city and in his usual pleasant manner fulfilled this pleasant duty. Comp. Dr. R. Bird responded at the piano as accompanist during the evening's entertainment. Throughout the gathering with two delightful solos rendered, assisting in the evening's entertainment were Comp. Jas. Bankier, solo, Comp. J. A. Thomson, solo, Mrs. Haeniscbel, violin solo.

It was pointed out by the speakers this was the first official visit of the Most Ex. Comp. Principal of Royal Arch Masons in Belleville for over a period of ten years and all present send him the strength of a prayer. Comp. Dr. Haeniscbel for his attendance, and a safe journey when left with the companions. The gathering broke up with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

SCHMELING IS VICTOR OVER SMALL RIVAL

Mickey Walker Blinded Battles on With Courage

TECHNCAL K. O.

Walker Unable to Go on After The Eighth Round

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 27—The fight game, a big front hitten about the ears, gained up its outdoor season paraphernalia today left the heavyweight championship of Max Schmeling—and Jack Sharkey to settle part between, and settled down to discussions around the winter cracker barrel of one of the most stirring and unusual heavyweight battles of modern history.

Back in the middleweight division by his own consent went Mickey Walker, still claiming championship there, with the plaudits of 50,000 of the faithful still ringing in his ears, as game a little fellow as ever stepped out of his weight class to take a gruelling beating until there was not another breath of sustenance left in him.

For Max Schmeling, conqueror of the ex-champion Tuhaman in eight rounds in the 1932 closing show at the Madison Square Garden bowl, there was nothing left den Boom, there was nothing left this year but a jaunt back to Germany, a rest for a few months, and then return to resume his feud with whoever among them came with his conqueror for the heavyweight title in 1933.

Start Looking Good.

For a while last night, as the big crowd huddled in topcoats and furs under a sudden blast of almost wintry wind, it seemed that Walker, and not the even galled Germans, was to see a glamorous career with a stunning upset victory, and win the right to challenge Sharkey in Schmeling's place.

But in the eighth round the lightning of the black-browed technician struck Walker with full force. A right uppercut closed Mickey's left eye, blinded him. The crushing power in Schmeling's fists hauled Walker from one side of the ring to the other, floored him for the count of six and nine, left him rubber-legged, bleeding helpless when the bell rang.

Without waiting for referee Jack Dreyer's interference, Jack Kearns Walker's manager, leaped into the ring and claimed what was left of his gallant little warrior. He refused to let Mickey go further. He would not let the second in the corner attempt to patch the little Irishman's wounds.

There was nothing for Referee Jack Dreyer to do but wave the decision to Schmeling on a technical knockout.

NEWSPAPERS FOUND BEST OF INDUSTRIES

New York, Sept. 27—Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the School of Journalism of Columbia University, reported to President Nicholas Butler yesterday that newspapers as a business enterprise have been better managed during the past year than banks, railroads, industries and the government itself.

"There have been fewer mergers and failures, proportionately and numerically now financed by the public bodies of investors," the report said.

ANOTHER WORLD SERIES

The 1932 World Series is about to open again. Experts are comparing teams, performances and players now and from their studies calling the winner. Some call the Chicago Cubs, others the New York Yankees giving various reasons for their selection. If they all put as much dope in a big basket, gave it a good shake and pick a team, the selection would probably be as reliable as all the systematic dope in the world. There will always be some one, who for no good reason or some good reason will put a spoke in the wheel and upset all the dope. Last year it was the magnetic Pepper Martin who sent Connie Mack's dreams for a ride. This year it may be another, but the dope has not been mentioned. Lock and the breaks shake and pick a team, the selection often make or break a good team.

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

Despite their defeat at the hands of the North Bay Pirates on Saturday last the Belleville Yielders reel quite confident that they can turn the series when the two teams hook-up in Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. Coach Jimmy Carver was of the opinion that the ten day lay-off did not do the Vics any good, as a team. Manager B. A. Fanning announced that Archie Campbell's pitching arm was O.K. and that Ernie Palmer, their stellar right fielder, who could not make the trip northward on Saturday. The Vics got quite a kick out of the speedy uniforms worn by the Pirates. They all carry their names printed on their backs.

Manager Bernie Paul of the Pirates, will undoubtedly start Fyfe, his big right hander against the Vics. Insomuch as Bosley let the Vics down with three hits he may get the pitching assignment, however. The Pirates all hit well on Saturday when every player, except pitcher,Bosley, connected for at least one hit. Johnson, their first baseman, was the big hitter of the afternoon with two singles and a triple to his credit, we notice. Kerr, Flagler and Lalchford were the only locals to hit safely. Wednesday is another day and according to the dope the Vics should make it one apiece.

Newton Thompson, local O.B.A.A. representative, was in communication with Bert Gardiner, secretary of the O.B.A.A. yesterday and the outcome was that the Collins and Allan Meagher will officiate here in Belleville. Two North Bay umpires were used in the first game, all that is needed now is for the weatherman smile and the sun shine when the "umps" shout "play ball". This is the first semi-final ball game to be "staged in Belleville since the Nationals won the senior title in 1929. We'd better get there early to avoid the rush.

As the Masked Marvel was injured in Ottawa last Friday night he asked Promoter Bobby Sammon if Wednesday night's wrestling bouts could be changed to Thursday. Bobby did not want to consent to the switch but the Masked Marvel never finishing what he has been explained.

Many fans when the announcement of this scrap was first made following the hectic heat both wrestlers put on at the Belleville Fair Grounds, which ended in a draw, and incidentally in a lot of bad feelings, wondered why the light-haired Scotsman should have the temerity to meet a man so obviously heavier than himself. But all this has been explained with the declaration by MacDougall that he is gunning for recognition as the heavyweight champion in the Marvel's class. The Marvel, on the other hand, is considered one of the best in this class. These men may not be of the London-Lewis type but it is from these ranks that the future world's champions usually spring. MacDougall announced, following his recent draw match with the Marvel, that he would meet the be-masked boy anywhere, anytime and through any means at his wish fulfilled. The bout is to be of the finished nature which also adds to its prestige.

Frankie Hart, Belleville's favourite wrestling son, Bob Neilson of Denmark in the semi-windup bout, Kogut Kogut, the "Tiny Ruff" of Belleville ring and Matchmaker Sammon has brought a real tough customer to town in the person of Jack Neilson. As a matter of fact, Samson announced recently that Neilson was one of the best boys in the wrestling business. The bout looks to be a perfect natural. The certain-to-be crowd at Kogut battle Tiny Ruff, the ex-Georgia-Cracker, is going to be there always tends to his knitting while in the ring. Ruff on the other hand is a little inclined to assume the attitude suggested by his name; hence the (Ruff) rough.

It was also announced that an Ontario licensed referee will be on the third man in the ring for these bouts. This news will no doubt be welcomed by all lovers of wrestling in the vicinity of Belleville as bouts at the Belleville Arena.

The bouts have been postponed until Thursday night.

STREETS ARE OPEN FORUM BALL GUESSERS

Glamorous Champions and Boys of Thunder Bats Meet

RARIN' TO GO

Odds Eight to Five in Favor of Slugging Yankees

(By Gayle Talbot)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 27—The big city pulsated with world series fever today as the Chicago Cubs, glamorous champions of the National League, and the New York Yankees, the boys with the thunder in their bats, prepared to fight it out in baseball's greatest spectacle at the Yankee stadium.

Tomorrow they go at it. Two games here then three at Chicago then back here for two more if the series goes the limit. It's a short fight and a sweet one. But today it still was anybody's guess, except something to argue over, with every office and street corner an open forum.

The Cubs, slipping in this morning, were to be given full possession of the great pile in the Bronx for a last-minute limbering and fielding and a sharpening up of batting eyes. The Yankees, on the other hand, were to snap through just enough work to retain a keen edge for the big series.

Details Ironed Out.

Meanwhile the greatest activity was miles removed from the battle site.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, frosty-eyed baseball commissioner of the thousand and one details, gave managers and umpires their last instructions. And in the back room it went like this:

"Yeah, they're offering 8 to 5 on those Yanks, but it don't mean a thing. Not a thing. Didn't they lay the same figures that the Athletics would take in Philadelphia a year ago and didn't this "Pepper" Martin maked them all look goofy.

That was how matters stood. The approximate odds 8 to 5 in favor of the slugging Yankees. One expect that there will be showers tomorrow and Thursday, but the majority of fans frankly skeptical of the dope that has established the American League champions top-heavy favorites.

CANADIAN POTATOES SMUGGLED INTO U. S.

New York, Sept. 27—Two incitements were returned yesterday by a Federal Grand Jury in a case involving the smuggling of potatoes of more than 1,000,000 pounds of Canadian seed potatoes into the United States without payment of duty.

The indictments were returned to have substituted domestic potatoes for Canadian potatoes in bond which were consigned to Canadian and South American countries and thereafter to have substituted the Canada potatoes through the United States without paying duty for them.

POLICE DENY FIELD'S PUBLISHED CHARGE

Halifax, Sept. 27—Assertions in a published sworn statement of Aspinall Field, K.C., that he had definite information as to the identity of Gerald Lamoureux, who for many hours before ambushed police shot and killed Percy Sullivan, and had tempted a bank holdup at Shubenacadie on August 23, have been denied by police officials here.

PEACH OF 13½ OUNCES

Toronto, Sept. 27—Mrs. H. Vale, Humber Bay Park, Toronto, has picked a peach weighing 13¼ ounces, picked from an 11 year old tree in her back yard.

She said the tree grew from a peach pit. It is of unknown quality as Ruff has just recently came to Canada. He is a former Georgia Teck football star. The best news of all that we know of is the appearance of a licensed referee in the ring for these bouts.

Saturday's football game left the B.C.I. senior football team in a rather crippled condition. Nearly all of the local players were out of the battle well marked. The local football followers will be out en masse on Saturday next when both the junior and senior B.C.I. football teams journey to Napanee. Coach Shiels expects to have a few of last years players out before the end of the week, however. With a few additions to his senior line of scrimmage he will have a team worthy to represent the B.C.I. in 1932.

We saw the most glaring example of "betting the gate" at Saturday's football game. When 18 cones to the time when players should have left will "look in" to witness a football game when their school team is playing—Well it's about time to dispense with sport in our schools.

Max Schmeling stepped up the first rung of the ladder back leading in an auspicious and declare manner when he gave Mickey Walker one swell pasting on Monday night. The ex-champ literally tore the Toy Bulldog to ribbons and his manager was forced to call quits at the end of the eighth. One year ago Walker held Jack Sharkey to a draw. Two years ago he pinned him into the clear in eight rounds. Again we say "Something smells robbed when he fought Sharkey?"

REMARKS ARE TO BE PROBED

Reported Comment of Judge Stubbs Subject of Inquiry

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—Mr. Justice Frank Ford, of the Supreme Court of Alberta, has been appointed to conduct an inquiry into remarks reported to have been made in recent criminal cases by Judge R. A. C. Stubbs, Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg Judge was reported to have said in sentencing youths charged with breaking and entering "When school boards shut off full classes they are making criminals and have a criminal responsibility on them. We can expect a lot more of that sort of thing unless young men are put to work or allowed to enter educational institutions. Our youth will become degenerates and degenerates."

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—"I have heard nothing of the matter," declared K. C. Hull, Winnipeg County Court Judge, said last night when informed that Mr. Justice Ford of the Supreme Court of Alberta, has been appointed to conduct an inquiry.

TURKS FIND HOMER PAPERS

Documents Said to Show Where Blind Old Poet Was Born

Istanbul, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The oldest Homer of Smilet said today the Turks had discovered documents in the Seraglio proving that Homer, the ancient Greek poet, was born in the Halzapiar district of Smyrna.

The discovery over the birthplace of Homer or even whether Homer ever existed at all, is as ancient almost as the poems themselves.

Many cities are on record as claiming to be the places of his birth, Smyrna and Chios have had most support from scholars heretofore, however.

The date of the poet's birth has been variously given as 1044 B.C.

Many scholars have contended that the blind old poet is a fiction and the poems were collections worked together.

BOMBING OF JUDGE'S HOME

Judge's Wife and Maid Injured at Worcester Massachusetts

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 27—Mrs. Webster Thayer, wife of Justice Thayer, who sat during the Sacco-Vanzetti trial, was injured early today when a bomb exploded at the Thayer home.

A maid, Miss Joanne Szabe, was also injured. She was rushed to a hospital. Mrs. Thayer was taken from the house unharmed.

Mrs. Thayer suffered cuts and injuries and the maid minor cuts and bruise.

So dark said the explosion was due to a bomb, planted at the rear of the house. The back of the Thayer home was destroyed, every window was shattered in the front of the house and the roar of the blast could be heard three miles away.

Judge Thayer's comment to the police was: "They can't kill me that easily."

ARSON TOUR IS FAILURE

Benoit Turns King's Evidence at Trial of Student

Saskatoon, Sept. 27 (CP) — "The story of how plans for an "arson tour" of Saskatchewan, Alberta and some of the northwestern States were laid away when the first fire at Vanscoy, Sask., proved unsuccessful was told in Assize Court here.

John Benoit, accused of arson, turned Crown witness at the trial of C. O'Neill, former student of the University of Saskatchewan. O'Neill and himself, he said, planned the destruction of a dance hall at Vanscoy as their first coup. Benoit said he had placed $1,500 insurance on the hall.

The two conspirators, he testified, had quarreled about setting the fire. The hall was selected owing to danger to persons in adjoining buildings, O'Neill had insisted on going ahead.

QUAKE KILLS 120 PERSONS

Two Greek Villages of Jerisos and Stratoniki Are Stricken

Vienna, Sept. 27—Dispatches from Athens said today 120 persons were believed to have been killed in an earthquake which struck last night in Macedonia and Chalcidice. Most of the victims were said to be inhabitants of the villages of Jerissos and Stratoniki.

The quake was felt in Jugoslavia, where there was considerable damage but apparently no loss of life. And in Bucharest, where the tremors lasted 13 minutes.

Records of the observatory here showed a series of shocks which began at about 10 p.m. They all together nearly three hours. The maximum swing of the seismograph needle was nearly 200 millimeters north and south. The east-west needle was thrown off during the first quake, which was the most severe.

The observatory at Belgrade estimated the center of the quake in southern Serbia where there was a disastrous earthquake several years ago.

MAY NEED NEW PRISON AREA

Refusers of Government Relief Ask to Go to Jail

Prince George, B.C., Sept. 27—British Columbia, already with one extraordinary prison area to care for unemployed, Doukhobors, may need another for a group of demonstrators, mostly foreigners, who refuse to accept the form of government relief offered and insist on having themselves placed in jail.

Charged with unlawful assembly after efforts of police to persuade them to keep order failed, 43 men are in custody here.

The trouble started last August when a group of men refused subsenance in camps and asked for relief instead. The camps created disturbance, singing the "Red Flag" and in fact, the authorities say, threatening immediate offer of provisions in the Government Relief Camps nearby, and refusing to accept the form of government relief offered and insist on having themselves placed in jail.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Eye Beauty Depends Upon Expression

(By Helen Jamieson (Mme. Qui Vive) Tell me, pretty maiden with the saucy soul orbs "full of genie salutations and soft responses?" If they aren't, they should be. All right to fire them up now and then but, as a steady conduct rule, eyes should behave pleasantly. Their manners ought to be gracious. Among the features eyes as beauty assets take first place. The individual is judged by them. They reflect character, or lack of it.

Human sparklers are considered most beautiful when they are rather too round nor too long. They should be set about the width of the eye. Long, thick, curly black fringes contribute to their loveliness; the perfectly shaped eyebrow adds its quota. The eyebrow has been pretty nearly put out of beauty circulation since tweezing got a running start, but we're hopeful that it will be back to normal in due course of time. Little dollies must eventually tire of ruthless devastation of those facial decorations that are like the wing of the raven in flight.

Dull thoughts shadow the eyes; bright ones illuminate them. The animated, intelligent woman gets credit for fine eyes whether she has them or not, because she supplies them with an enchanting moving brilliance. The nit-wit can have the eyes of an angel, and nobody will ever know it. Back of them shine all the soul windows, puts the smart gal in the universal beauty chorus.

Loss of sleep affects the eyes, reddens and dulls. Lack of fresh air takes the glint out of them. Anything that upsets the digestive organs will dull the expression of the human lanterns. The girl who bawls when the fancy seizes her is doing an injustice to optic nerves. But we needn't worry about her. Blubbering just isn't done these days. High courage is fashionable, complaining to bring on a remote age.

Eyes are self-willing, self-wishing. Some flood away foreign particles. Tired eyes find refreshment in alternating applications of hot and cold water, which stimulate circulation, take kinks and knots out of the nerves, restore the glint and glitter.

Pink eye or any sudden, disturbing inflamation requires the immediate attention of an eye specialist. Infections are frequently due to rubbing the lids with hands that are encased in soiled gloves.

Eyes are not only painful and disfiguring, but they deplete the vitality of the eye tissues. Improving hints produce them. Or an invading germ pushes into the port in which the winker lives and has its being. A stye is a small boil. It should be bathed with a warm solution of boric acid several times a day. When it comes to a full head, it can be touched with a toothpick around which cotton has been wound; the pus will flow out.

There has of late been a lot of chatter about eye exercises. Specialists disagree on that subject, some going for them, others claiming that the eye, turning this way and that, is in a constant state of exercise, in fact during waking hours it never gets anything else. Poor thing works every minute.

Violin is Gift To Little Girl

Josephine Blake's Playing Wins Gift For Young Prodigy

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—A fortune-tte little girl is Josephine Blake, 9-year-old violinist, well known in Belleville.

Josephine was this week presented with a beautifully toned violin from a collection of over 200, owned by Mr. W. J. Saunders of Crawford street, Toronto.

It happened through his hearing Josephine play at a concert last winter. Mr. Saunders was so impressed by her accomplished performance that an introduction was arranged, and her joy knew no bounds when he promised her a violin all of her own.

While Josephine has played in some of the largest halls in Canada, she has had to use borrowed instruments, as it was so difficult to obtain an instrument small enough but with sufficient tone tain.

for this diminutive prodigy. Monday she got one.

She started on her first instrument at two-and-a-half years, and has won many awards for violin playing— she has made a strong friendship with Mr. Saunders, who is an old-time-fiddler with many medals to his credit. He has one of the largest private collections of valuable violins in Canada.

Josephine Blake is the little violinist who started by getting her first violin at two-and-a-half years and surprised musical Canada by winning a gold medal at five in contest with those almost twice her age.

Share the Children with Dad

(By Constance Cameron)

Many fathers aren't as interested in their children as they should be for the simple reason that they don't know their children, and in many cases the mothers are partly responsible. Some are jealous of the child's interest in Dad, while others, if only passively jealous that Dad as a sort of "bogey man" who will mete out dire punishment when he gets home.

Small wonder that the bond between hosts of fathers and children is slender and precarious!

It is also unjust, for beneath nearly every man's indifferent, hard-boiled exterior there is a soft, yearning paternal spot that hungers for recognition, just as woman's maternal inclinations need outlet.

Then why not share the kids with Dad? If Sonny asks you a question pertaining to business, banking, Latin or who hires the man to pave the street out front, why not ask him to talk it over with Dad when he gets home? Turn over to Dad and the youngsters every bond of interest that you can. Answer all questions with which your husband is bombarded by him to answer. It won't lessen your child's respect for you one iota. Dad will. Dad knows more about some things than you do. We can't all know everything, and a child isn't apt to realize that.

They Need Him

Give your children time alone with Dad. Encourage them to go on hikes or short excursions with him. Dad will get much closer to their innermost thoughts in a few hours alone with them than in days with you around.

Let Dad read the bedtime story once in a while and put his son or daughter to bed. Hearing a small child say his prayers most certainly does Daddy and even anyone, and it may mean more to your husband than you can imagine when he tackles tomorrow's problems. Share the children with Dad. He needs them and they need him.

YOU'D NEVER KNOW HER . . .

This is what Mrs. Albert Bolton, of Toronto, writes: "Our little girl, Margaret Jean, was nursed for the first few months, but this did not satisfy her. I had heard about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. Her flesh is firm; lovely, straight limbs, good bone development, and she is so contented. Last September she won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition, against 102 entrants.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beechman)

SIGNING GREETING CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. Will you kindly state the correct way to sign Christmas cards, if one wishes to use the given names of man and wife? Is it correct to use the wife's name before the husband's.... as Mary and William, or should it be William and Mary?

2. In serving a dinner where one has a side dish such as corn, just where is the dish placed by the plate?

3. Is there such a thing as a widow's ring with black edging and diamonds in the center? Is it correct and proper to wear a ring after the passing of one's husband, or should one still retain the same ring?

D. R.

1. Usually when greeting cards of any kind are signed with the names of husband and wife, the wife's name is written first. Of course, if the wife signs the cards, as usually happens, it does seem more convenient for her to sign her name last, but this arrangement always seems a bit awkward, a bit lacking in "preference."

2. The side dish may be placed on either side, whichever seems more convenient. If there is only one glass on the right side of the plate, the side dish may be placed there. But usually it is true, we do find it, when we first sit at the table, on the left side, below the bread and butter plate.

But side dishes are really so unnecessary that nowadays we rarely, very rarely, see them. Items that belong to the main course are placed on the dinner or luncheon plate with the meat.

3. I do not know of this kind of ring, and it would seem in very poor taste, a faddish, bizarre idea.

Surely the wife who should the widow discard the sentiment of the "ring" that, in reality, really is the symbol of the marriage?

NORMAL NAME

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Will you please tell me the proper way to address a lady's name in a personal notice in a newspaper, as for instance a letter to a lady, if the person's husband is dead and her name is not John Smith or Mrs. J. B. Smith, or should her name be used, for instance: Mrs. Clara Smith?

E.

When we use a widow's formal name, as in a letter to a lady friend or in an address on an envelope, we should use the first name that she used when her husband was living. We should not use the first name in this form. Her name is Mrs. John Smith, or, if she uses her middle name, Mrs. John Butler Smith.

ADVICE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in great need of your advice and as I think you give such good advice to others, I am going to you.

I have not lived with my husband for two years as he died and he died. I would like to know how long it would be proper for me to wait before marrying again? I have been engaged to marry for over a year. We don't want to do anything that is not proper.

W.

There are so many personal features about such a situation that an outsider naturally hesitates to give advice. And, judging from what you say I see no reason why you shouldn't marry within, say, three months. After all, your friends must know that things you have not lived with your husband for such a long time, would be fairly absurd to assume a period-of-mourning. So I see no reason why you should postpone your new happiness unnecessarily.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Perfume is the queen of cosmetics. It doesn't only add a glowing color upon the cheek, it doesn't add style or substance to the glorious crown, it doesn't serve to reconstruct loveliness that has started to fade. But it imparts an elegant million-dollar soul-glow and creates a sense of luxury that makes it well worth its costly price per ounce. The wise buyer of perfume uses it with real discretion, seeks a perfume that tickles her fancy as well as her nostrils, sticks to one single florette odor, using it day after day until her wardrobe has taken upon itself a garden-like fragrance.

When curls are considered a desirable adjunct of coiffure trimming, the hair must be cut the proper length, which means that there must be material for several turns of the iron or, if the finger wave is employed, enough length to form two complete circles. Short hair, no matter how carefully it is curled has a naive, quaint way of getting stubby and ragged-looking at the wrong moment. Especially if tendrilled ends of the permanent have been trimmed.

The daily bath accomplishes something more than a skin scouring. It acts upon glands and pores, gives the skin a chance to better fulfill its duties as an eliminating organ. There is less strain on the delicate glands of the face when all the skin surface is clean; the girl who suffers from excessive crops of hair and scalp will find the daily bath of service in the beauty cause. The sallow glow is helpful. Moisten a bowlful of salt, rub the crystals over the body, turn on the tepid shower.

MISCHIEVOUS BOYS RIG UP "SUICIDE"

Saskatoon, Sept. 27.—(By The Canadian Press)—Red coats and police raced out to a sub two miles north of this city to investigate a report of a man hanging from the railway bridge. An ambulance, its siren shrieking followed close behind while reporters besought taxi drivers to make more speed.

As the cars approached the bridge the shapeless form of the man loomed ominously, the lights of the auto playing on his shapeless pants. It was merely an empty sack, with old pants tied around it, the work of mischievous boys. But it sufficed to stop four car drivers who sped back to the city to give the alarm.

Moderate Rise Seen With Professionals in Charge

New York, Sept. 27.—Stocks wavered for a while at the start of trading today but later advanced moderately, under leadership of the rails and utilities, in a quiet and largely professional market.

There were some soggy spots, but most of those were cared for when the general list turned upward. Rails dropped 6 points at one time, then headed by Allied Chemical, Worthington, Delaware & Hudson and Lehigh Valley were also under pressure at times although Allied Chemical erased all of its early loss when it declared declared the regular 50 cent quarterly dividend. Union Pacific converted an early loss of 1 point into a gain of nearly 2. Santa Fe, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Illinois Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio showed 1 or more.

General Motors advanced a point and fairly animated trading and gains of equal scope were made by Chrysler, Nash, Mack Truck and some of the accessory shares. Utilities were firm, but not particularly active. Consolidated Gas, Commercial Telephone, Public Service and American Waterworks each made a point or more. Gains of around 2 were made by Dupont, American Can, American Smelting, Eastman, Air Reduction and Westinghouse Electric.

Wall Street was more quietly expecting announcement of the personnel and organization of a new bipartisan committee which, it was forecast, would especially be set up to investigate financial and operating conditions in the railroad field with a view to recommending helpful legislation.

NICE GIRL

By'Kathrn Bomis Wilson

Walking behind him, you'd say he was about twenty-two for he carried his tall, slim, elegantly groomed self, jauntily. He twirled his cane deftly, pleasantly thinking youth in his walk. But walking quickly beside him, you saw shadowgrey-pinched sullenness about his derby. You'd notice, too, the deep shadows in his eyes. Meeting him face to face, you'd be startled by his sharp little black eyes, short chin and weak mouth under a carefully moustache. You'd think it a crafty face not a day younger than thirty-five. And you'd be right.

He had just opened a check account at the First National Bank. Presenting the check of Jay Kangwell at the First National Bank. Presenting the check of Jay Kangwell with bitter and contemptuous emphasis, "that's just what I thought—nice girl!"

WRONG START IN COAL RATE

Justice Fullerton Says No Right to Dictate Fixed Rate

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—The whole method whereby the Railway Board Council fixed a rate at which the railways were required to haul coal from Alberta to Ontario was wrong, "from the beginning, wrong in the wrong footing," according to Mr. Justice G. P. Fullerton, chief of the Board of Railway Commissioners, here today.

The Board was hearing the reference to its respecting the costs to the Railways "if any," over the rate of $6.75 per ton", these costs being based upon the average year 1928-1931 inclusive. The "out-of-pocket costs per ton" of transporting the coal from Alberta to North Bay and Toronto were also matters to be enquired into.

Today's brief hearing was featured by Chief Commissioner Fullerton's statement criticizing the proprietary in law of the order-in-council which instituted the rate of $6.75 per ton for the eastbound movements of Alberta Coal. Pursuant to the order of the Governor-in-Council. The Board of Railway Commissioners had in 1929, issued their order requiring the railways to establish the $6.75 rate, the Chief Commissioner said.

"I think the Board was wrong. The Governor-in-Council had no right to dictate to the Board what rate should be fixed. That is a matter for the Board."

NO SOLUTION OF BRITISH CRISIS

London, Sept. 27.—Events are moving swiftly at No. 10 Downing Street. In the unpretentious public office street Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald is dealing with the situation which has threatened the moral character of his Government.

But who misnorrow's vital Cabinet announcement will be, seems to be little likelihood of any formula being devised which will be wide enough to cover the Liberal Free Trade objections to the agreements entered into at Ottawa.

TIED IN SOCCER

London, Sept. 27.—(CP Cable)—Accrington Stanley and Southport played a one-all draw in a scheduled match of the English League third division, northern section today.

NO SENTIMENT IN BUSINESS

Britisher Thinks Canadians Are Hard-Headed People

London, Sept. 27 (C.P. Cable) — "Canadians are a most difficult people to deal with," declared A. Heyworth of Huddersfield, who attended the Imperial Conference at Ottawa.

"The Canadians were determined to keep the textile trade, both in cotton and wool, intact. Although they appeared not unreasonable in discussing other commodities they were adamant with textiles. Canada impressed me as a country where sentiment did not seem to exist when it might affect business.

"There was a feeling of friendliness and a desire to help noticeable in conversations with other countries but with Canada it seemed to be Canada first all the time.

Cloth Trade

"The Canadian clothing trade today does not seem to be a profitable industry. There are large parts of the woollen worsted business in the hands of wealthy influential people while the clothing trade is in the hands of a large number of small people whose sole interest is buying goods they can sell profitably regardless of where the goods are made.

"It is quite absurd to suggest that New Zealand is in arrears in her contributions to the League of Nations or that the prospects of obtaining full contribution are doubtful," declared Rt. Hon. George W. Forbes, Prime Minister of New Zealand, referring to reports emanating from London, chiefly The Daily Express, that a crisis in the league's finance was impending and that New Zealand had failed to pay her share up to the present date. Mr. Forbes added that New Zealand had recently decided to pay quarterly instead of annually and therefore part of the present year's contribution is yet unpaid. It would be paid in due course, concluded Mr. Forbes emphatically.

BALLOON LANDS ON LATVIAN FRONTIER

Warsaw, Poland, Sept. 27 — The United States navy balloon participating in the Gordon Bennett Cup race landed at 12.00 a.m. today close to the town of Wasilkow, near Vilna, on the Polish-Latvian frontier.

The exact distance it had travelled from Basel, where the race started, had not been computed, but it appeared virtually certain that the navy bag had won the race and the cup.

CANADIAN WHEAT SHIPPED TO EAST

Winnipeg, Sept. 27—Altogether some eight or nine shiploads of Canadian wheat harvested in 1932 will find its way to far eastern ports, according to agreeing opinion in grain circles here. Confirmation of reports of the sale of two shiploads of Alberta wheat pool grain was forthcoming, but it was further intimated shipments to Shanghai would probably far exceed that amount.

While United States farmers are endeavoring to have credits extended to China by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in order that they may dispose of some 13,-000,000 bushels of wheat in the Orient, Canadian exporters are shipping wheat to China by the shiploads on a cash basis.

CANADA PENSION ACT ONE OF BEST

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 27—"I believe the Pensions Act in Canada to be not only one of the best but the best of any nation engaged in the Great War," declared Col. F. J. Fickling, president of the Ontario Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion, in his presidential address before the convention of that organization here today.

SECOND CROP MAY FOLLOW SECOND BLOOM

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 27 — H. G. Arnott, Rosedale resident, today was wondering if he is going to have a second crop of apples.

A tree on his land burst into bloom a few days ago and warm weather tempted him to hope it might bear again this season.

Some of his friends said they thought the blossoms a sign of mild winter.

WOMAN NOT TO BE EVICTED

Judge's Decision Sheds Hope on 87 Year Old Blind Couple

London, Ont., Sept. 27—Hope came today to Mrs. Ellen Carder, 87, blind and crippled widow, when County Judge Ingram dismissed application of executors of her husband's estate to have her evicted from her home.

Under terms of the will made several years ago Mrs. Carder was to have use of the home for life on condition she paid taxes. For some time she managed to keep to conditions of the will until her only son was committed to the Ontario Hospital for the Insane. He almost at the same time became blind and lost the use of her limbs.

It was then she found herself unable to pay taxes out of the small Old Age Pension she receives.

The Judge ruled today he had no jurisdiction as the application for eviction should not have been made under the Landlord and Tenant Act.

The relation of the woman to the estate, he said, was that of tenant. He suggested if the executors were determined to have the aged woman ousted they might go to the Supreme Court.

MAUREEN ORCUTT WINS FIRST MATCH

Peabody, Mass., Sept. 27.—Maureen Orcutt, of Haworth, N.J., who has been pointing for the Women's National Golf Championship since she returned from Great Britain last May, today won her opening 18-hole match from Virginia Snyder of Rye, N.Y., by a five and three margin.

Miss Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto taking 44 on the first nine holes was one up on Miss Jane Brooks, of Sparkill, N.Y.

TEXTILE STRIKE ENDED

MANCHESTER, Eng., Sept. 27.—The long strike, of textile workers in Lancashire ended today with representatives of workers and employers signing an agreement.

The mills will reopen tomorrow, it was announced.

Before the coming of the oil lamp lighthouses were lit by candles or coal fires. The last of the latter was the lighthouse at St. Bees, where a coal light burned until 1822.

'Innocent of Everything'

By S. S. Sylvester

"Will you do me a favor, George?" Phil asked his newspaper colleague who was about to leave for another bi-monthly Saturday afternoon off.

"Sure," said George. "I'm your bachelor friend, you know."

"I want you to get some one to steal something for me."

"What, steal something?"

"That's it. I want you to get some one to steal something that belongs to me, and still cannot belong to me."

"You'll have to explain that. I'm only a humble newspaper reporter."

"Dunlos and I had a little quarrel"

"Ah! Phil's marvelling and Lois can't being let out—"

"Of course, as my friend, you're to keep this strictly confidential, you understand."

"I'm your friend and not a social scribe. That makes it doubly sure."

"Dunlos has been so extravagant lately that I've got to economize and to stop her. She's the greatest little wife in the world, but it can't afford all the little things she wants right now."

"Listen, Buddy, I don't want your wife to get sore at me."

"You won't have anything to do with my scheme directly."

"That's better. What is it?"

"She's been buying fancy shades fancy curtains, fancy lamps and all she does now seems to realize I can't afford everything. I told her to be more careful with her spending."

"And I suppose she bought a new car, now."

"Not that bad. When I came home for lunch today I found she had bought a fancy new electric percolator, for six dollars and forty-nine cents, on time. I told her that was out of the question. But she said it was so cute, and only a dollar down and a dollar a week, and all that—well, you know how a woman is."

"I'm only a bachelor. But what you say seems to conform to the average male's conception."

"We quarrelled about it. And she cried. You know how sweet and helpless she looks when she cry's."

"I can understand. You're young and haven't been married long enough to get over that. Go on."

"Well, I was about to give in and let her have it when she called me a brute, said she was going home to mother, and left."

"Want me to get a lawyer—"

"No, no. She won't be angry long, and when she comes back I want her to learn a lesson. I want you to get some one to steal that percolator. You see, it belongs to us, but as there are five payments due on it, it doesn't."

"Then you'll take it back to the store where she bought it? And they will think you'll pay out the percolator and the remaining five payments, too?"

"That's it. I've left the kitchen window unlocked so they can get in. It won't have to break anything getting in."

"Why don't you save a lot of trouble and carry it out yourself?"

"I want to make it look as real as possible."

"Well, all right. But remember you take all the blame if anything goes wrong."

"The responsibilities all mine."

"I'll get some fellow who's been charging in the Saturday night crowd to follow directions. That'll cost about a dollar."

"Here's the money. I'm leaving it up to you to see that he gets to the right place and steals the right thing. Have him bring the percolator over to your room and I'll get it Monday. It's standing on the buffet by the sliding room door. I won't go home until about nine tonight because I've got extra work here. So you have until then for the job."

"All right. But remember I assume no responsibility."

"I understand. You're in the clear."

A couple of hours later George called Phil on the telephone.

"I got a fellow out of the park who I think is O.K. I took him down to your place and showed him just what to do. As soon as he's gone, I'll do it."

Phil smiled slyly to himself as he worked the rest of the afternoon; he felt so good he even treated to an extra good supper in an extra good restaurant. Darkness had long over the city for some time when he returned to the flat—the 'phone rang. It was George.

"Phil, I'm in a jam and then bested. "I am afraid we made a mistake—that fellow hasn't brought that percolator yet and since he should have been here long ago."

"Maybe he got caught" said Phil excitedly.

"There's no police report. He's probably sold that by now and is enjoying himself. You'd better go home and see if he took anything else. I'm sure sorry—"

"I'll go home right away," Phil said hurriedly, and hung up.

He ran all the way, thanking heaven that Eunlos chose a flat only a few blocks from his work. When he fitted the key, the door opened. There was Eunlos. She ran toward him, threw her arms around his neck, exclaiming between sobs:

"What's gone?" he asked, being so confused he hardly knew what he said.

"The percolator! Oh, I'm so sorry. After I left today I was thinking of what you said about it costing so much, and about me being more economical. And so after I had supper at mother's, I thought I'd hurry down here and return it before the store closed. But it was gone!" This was followed by another burst of tears.

"That's all right dear," Phil said comfortingly, and drawing her closer as he spoke. Then under his breath, expecting to hear the worst, "Did he take—I mean they steal anything else?" turning his face to hide his guilt.

"No. That's all that was taken. You aren't angry, are you, dear?"

"Certainly not." They exchanged kisses. "It was as much my fault as yours."

"That's sweet of you to take some of the blame," she said, "when you're innocent of everything."

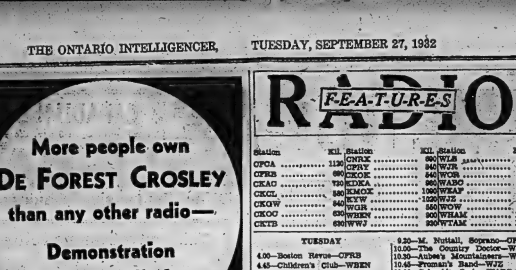
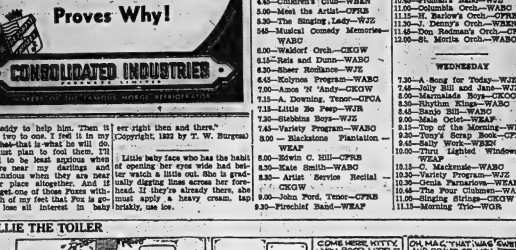
Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

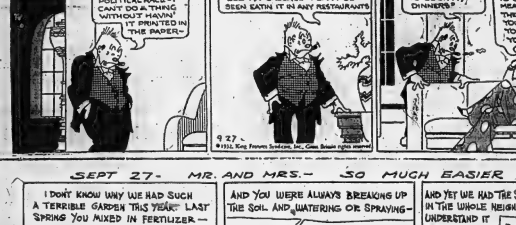


Recommends Daily Use of Bisurated Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Acid Indigestion



Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive, hyperacidic acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomach gas distension is caused too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Acid stomach gas distension is really the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.



It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition. Get busy with some form of treatment which will neutralize the excess acid on the stomach walls, soothe the irritated lining and relieve the gas. A little Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (its powder form—never in liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Time now to think of joining a gym class. Lots of women find that a form of exercise substitutes for outdoor sports, of which there aren't many in the winter season. Exercise is as necessary to women as to men. Gym work develops shoulders and busts, makes a girl chesty. And that's essential if she is going to prove a second and bolds carrier of this season's lovely frocks.

MADOC DISTRICT CHEESEMEN MEET

Director of Dairying W. H. Barr is Speaker

Marmora, Sept. 26.—(Special)—One of the most successful meetings in the history of the Madoc District Cheesemakers' Association was held at the Marmora Cheese Factory, North Marmora, on Saturday evening. The meeting was called to order by John Bell, President of the factory.

After welcoming the gathering of makers and patrons, he called upon Instructor Herb Bailey to act as chairman. The latter in his remarks stated that the meeting was purposely called as a joint meeting of makers and patrons, that the matter of linking up with the Central Ontario Cheese Factory Patrons Association should be considered. He referred to the good work accomplished by the Cheesemakers' Association, which was calling the members three dollars yearly. Good certificates had come of this organization. The cheesemakers had been able to improve the quality of cheese. At the present time he could say the standing in the Madoc district was fairly good.

Director of Dairying

W. H. Barr, Director of Dairying, was then called upon to speak. He said that during the seven years he had been engaged in his present work he had not been before been able to visit the Marmora factory. He was pleased with the plant and the way in which it was kept. Everything was in place. There is need in every business for care, neatness and tidiness. He saw the factory was so bright, clean and tidy as in 1932. There is only as it should be for a dirty, untidy and slothful cheesemaker is a wasteful man. He hesitated to say anything about farm work. One hired man had gone through many things you can't tell him about, he said. He did not think any man of men were having so hard a time as the farmers' energy in so many were out of work. He would say, however, that nothing increases the value of milk as getting the best quality of cows does. He referred at length to cow testing and declared it was the only way to get the best quality of cows. He referred at length to cow testing and declared it was the only way to get the best quality of cows. He referred, in regard to over-ripe milk, the speaker said he could not understand why forty-five out of fifty patrons of a factory would allow the other five to send in milk of such quality.

Mr. Barr then dealt with the matter of rifles in the cheese, urging that all factories be equipped with screen at doors and screen to keep out the pest. Continuing, he said that he had visited six factories in the Madoc district that day and had not seen any of these pests in any of them. Your instructor has the unenviable record of only three municipal districts in all his group from May 1st to August 31st and that in 72 factories, he declared. "At the same time," he remarked, "there have been 36 cheese with flavor defects. The producers may not be genuinely responsible but they have got to accept a great responsibility for it. He had never known a time in the past 10 years that the farmers were so ready to accept responsibility as today. There are 600 odd cheesemakers in the province which may be a problem, but it is a 600 per problem to take care of the 20,000 patrons connected with their factories. He considered it the best plan for farmers to form themselves into clubs. They should get together and put their feet under the table. The needed topic for these ceremonies of cheesemakers he knew where to get it, but if he required it from cheesemakers, what topic should he go?"

Concluding, he said that Mr. Mallory, the succeeding speaker, would outline for them the workings of the Central Ontario Cheese Factory Patrons Association.

Fred Mallory, secretary-treasurer of that organization, also gave a striking talk. He said he was present as a farmer—that and no more. He had been doing good as an organizer. He reminded those present that when the quality of milk is not right the farmer often does not know what is wrong with his milk. He should have an expert available to look for troubles which he did not understand after he had done all he could to find out. He voiced the opinion that old pastures are not what they used to be and need rebuilding. Cheesemaking used to be a nine-month term but now it is only a six month term. He appealed for organization of the farmers. The Montreal Produce Association is so well organized we think they are controlling our prices," he remarked. Factory patrons would change this by organization. He had not been in a single factory where there had been refusal on the part of the patrons to organize. All they were asked as a contribution to the funds was 3 cent per thousand. His remarks were followed intently and made much impression on those present.

Stanley Joss, manager of the U. D. C. at Belleville, asked for a few remarks, paid a tribute to John Flanegan, maker at the Marmora factory. "In the eight years I have been in Belleville I have only had six cheese under No. 1 grade from John," he said. His own company had a fine thousand. His remarks were also to the audience.

Hugh Mallory, president of Cook's factory, voiced his favor of organization and proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the speakers.

John Bell, returning to chairman's duties, asked for suggestions from the patrons present. All seemed of the opinion that cheesemaking was the proper course to follow, but voted to leave such over to the annual meeting when practically every patron is present. The attendance was great with the presence of several ladies.

"BY WHOSE HAND" MYSTERY STORY AT THE CAPITOL

Do the thirteen actors playing in the mystery melodrama, "By Whose Hand?" showing Wednesday at the Capitol theatre, go in for detective or mystery fiction?

A questionnaire conducted on the set revealed the interesting fact that some of them do like this type of literature and that even those actors who prefer heavier reading confess to being vastly entertained at times by a good thriller book.

Ben Lyon does not read detective stories as a general rule, although, if a good one is highly recommended, he will usually read it. He and his wife, Bebe Daniels, have a library of more than 10,000 books, the bulk of them bequeathed by her grandfather, but he admits that the arduous work of acting and studying scripts affords little time for reading other than daily newspapers and certain weekly periodicals which keep a busy individual in touch with the world's important news developments.

Barbara Weeks, the heroine of the film, also says she loves to read detective and mystery books, having an especially soft spot in her heart for one of the late Edgar Wallace, S. S. Van Dine, Mary Roberts Rinehart and A. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories.

Ethel Kenyon, one of the feminine heavies in the picture, doesn't go in much for detective books, but confesses to be more interested in the Max Beerbohm and John Dos Passos type of literature.

Tom Dugan who plays the comedy detective, reads everything that he prefers O. Henry and Upton Sinclair's books.

Tom McGuire, the conductor, reads even the weekly detective magazines, but says he likes the literary readings with those hectic blood and thunder stories. Good detective thrillers and has gone for them ever since.

Nat Pendleton, the burly-wrestler-actor who plays the role of Elihu Delmar, admits a preference for reading to philosophy and psychology. He is a great fan of Conan Doyle and was a close friend of the late Millen Brand, who started for a time as a professor of psychology before taking up acting. Pendleton doesn't read detective stories at all.

Helene Millard, who plays the interesting role of the psychiatrist, seldom reads detective stories. She prefers biography or books related to the drama.

Kenneth Thomason, who is also a Broadway playwright and actor, likewise prefers to read plays and books on the drama. He is continually curious whenever he picks up a good detective or mystery story, he is fascinated by it.

Dolores Rey, the former Follies girl just signed by the Fox studios to a contract by Columbia, prefers to read the most highly recommended current fiction. Books which she has read recently and enjoyed were Somerset Maugham's "Cakes and Ale" and Sinclair Lewis' "Dodsworth."

William Halligan, who plays the detective, is an omnivorous read once he said that, while he doesn't read detective or mystery fiction as a general thing, he enjoyed Gilbert Chesterton's famous Father Brown detective stories and Dashiell Hammett books.

"By Whose Hand?" is a swift moving mystery thriller with several murders occurring on a dimly lit man trail. The film is published one by Harry Adler.

SNOWDEN, SAMUEL, SINCLAIR LEAVE CABINET

Eight Junior Ministers Resign After Discussion of Policy to Implement Ottawa Trade Pacts

Snowden's Letter of Resignation is in Bitter Words

ACCUSATIONS

Says Pledges Broken on Tariff Issue by Union Government

(By George Hambleton, C. P. Staff Correspondent)

London, Sept. 28.—(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)— Three Cabinet ministers and eight junior ministers today resigned from the National Government, their three resignations compelling them to leave a ministry whose majority is pledged to implement the trade agreements signed at the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference.

London, Sept. 28 (C.P. Cable)—At the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa has cost the National Government of the United Kingdom the services of three outstanding Free Trade Cabinet talents.

Viscount Snowden, long the right hand man of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, resigned from the cabinet today along with the two leaders of the Free Trade Liberals—Sir Herbert Samuel and Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Prime Minister MacDonald, it was stated, would immediately select successors to Lord Snowden as Lord Privy Seal, Sir Herbert Samuel as Home Secretary and Sir Archibald Sinclair as Secretary for Scotland.

Later today seven Liberal ministers, not in the cabinet, were expected to follow the example set by Sir Herbert and Sir Archibald.

Disagreement over the implementing of the trade agreements with the Dominions signed at the Imperial Conference has formed the British government from an all-party coalition into a ministry consisting, so far as the cabinet itself is concerned, of men who are willing to back the tariff measures be-

EMPIRE TRADE, CABINET CRISIS AND THE APPLECART

London, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Cabinet Ministers were flocking through the door of No. 10 Downing Street today for the vital Cabinet meeting which saw the resignations of three Free Trade ministers who were in disagreement with their colleagues over the procedure to be followed in carrying out Imperial trade pacts.

In the midst of it all a huge delivery van rumbled by. It carried a great advertisement on its side:

"Australian apples — good health for a penny a day."

Snowden, Parting with Ramsay MacDonald, Looks to Seclusion

Wednesday's Resignation Separates Friends of Years

OTTAWA PACT

London, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Viscount Snowden, who for years have battled side by side, either in power or in opposition, today came to the parting of the ways.

"From Chancellor" in the Labor Government of 1929 to 1931, in the first National Government of August-November of last year, and lord privy seal in the present National Government until today, Lord Snowden at last found he could not reconcile his free trade convictions with the decision of the majority of the Cabinet to proceed with tariff legislation necessary to carry out the agreements signed at the Imperial Economic Conference.

The agreements signed which followed the fall of the Labor Government Lord Snowden, by radio and public statement, has been one of the most earnest supporters for the National Government. To his bitter attacks on the Labor Party of which he had been for so many years an outstanding figure, was largely ascribed the devastating defeat Labor met at the polls.

Free Trader.

But Lord Snowden remained a free trader throughout. When the National Government introduced itsseclusion.

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 28 —Word reached here today of the drowning at Norland yesterday of two year old Helen Chynoweth.

general tariff scheme and ended Britain's traditional free trade policy last February, Lord Snowden like the free trade Liberals retained his Cabinet portfolio under an "agreement to differ." An agreement that marked one of the greatest steps in the history of Cabinet procedure.

Whether the iron-lipped, crippled and frail Lord Snowden, who had cried France over reparations at the Hague, who on Sept. 21 of last year told the world of Great Britain's suspension of the Gold Standard, and carried the crushing burden of the Chancellorship of the Exchequer through the most difficult period confronting the country since the Great War, still actively oppose the Ottawa agreements from his new seat in the House of Lords is questionable. It appears more likely Lord Snowden will become a

BARGAINING CALLED WRONG

Secessionist Ministers Issue Joint Statement

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The text of the joint letter of resignation addressed to Premier Free Trade Ministers of the National Government, made public today.

"Our view of the whole policy of hard bargaining with the ministers between different parts of the Empire is wrong. We regard continued unity and harmony of the British Commonwealth of nations as of supreme importance to the members and any of great value to the world at large. That harmony has been assisted by conferences such as that at Ottawa and our view is that it can only be imperilled. The process is clearly evidenced during these proceedings of pressing one part of the Empire to make unwilling sacrifices in order that another part of the Empire may be induced, although the sacrifices would be made against sanctions, is not the means to promote unity and harmony. There are differences of economic interest between the different parts of th Empire which arise inevitably from their differing conditions. To bring these trade questions into the forefront of the political field is to invite disagreements between Empire governments which will likely sooner or later become serious. Tighter bonds may mean greater freedom. The policy is most dangerous to the whole future of the Commonwealth."

FIRE-BUG AT WORK, OTTAWA

Dominion United Church and Windsor Hotel Damaged

Ottawa, Sept. 28—Police combed the city today for a fire-bug suspected of setting twin fires last night in the high pointed spire of Dominion United Church and the Windsor Hotel, occupying corner sites on Metcalf and Queen Streets in the downtown section of the city.

One man was arrested last night as he watched the fires but after questioning for two hours he was set free. He admitted being in the hotel a few minutes before the flames were noticed but denied lighting them.

The church fire, with damage estimated at $3,000, originated in a pile of hymn books in the Sunday school hall. The fire in the hotel, directly across the street, was traced to a bundle of old papers stuffed in a hole kicked in the wall of a room on the third story. Damage to the hotel was negligible.

INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP IS REPORTED

Fifth General Council of Mother Church Opens Today

BALANCE SEEN

Dr. Oliver May be Asked to Seek Re-election as Moderator

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 28 (CP) A review of the work done by the United Church of Canada during the past two years was begun here this afternoon when the commissioners to the Fifth General Council of the church gathered for their sessions in the First United Church.

Representative of ministers and laymen of all Canadian Conferences and of divisions at home and abroad, the commissioners will hear reports from the boards in charge of evangelism and social services, pensions, education, religious education, home missions and foreign missions. The reports are expected to show a balance between favorable and less favorable aspects of the church's financial condition when they give rise to considerable debate. Last year's drop in contributions and the Missionary and Maintenance Fund deficit may be used as an argument for retrenchment. Proponents of the union which would maintain all branches of service unimpaired will point to the increased membership and the high value placed on property assets.

May be Re-elected

The fifth Moderator of the church will be named by the council during the morning session. Rev. Dr. E. H. Oliver, Saskatoon, who as the present Moderator, presides. The council meeting today may be asked to name a successor, in the event that he does no so or either another minister or layman may be named to the highest post in the United Church.

Electric Association Executive Agrees to Aid Payment Exchange

TORONTO, Sept. 28—The executive of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association yesterday approved the request of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission for municipal pro-rata payments of exchange on its bond-interest payments in New York. Joseph Gibbons, chairman of the Toronto Hydro Commission cast the only dissenting vote.

Mr. Gibbons moved the motion on the grounds all the commissions faced could not be met. Hydro Commission, he said, had already paid $225,000 in exchange rates on its own New York Bond payments. He claimed that Provincial Bonds negotiated by the Provincial Commission should be met by that body. The Ontario Hydro Commission's attitude was that its reserves were not created for such contingencies as exchange payments.

Mayor W. J. Stewart informed last night of the action and its approval which Toronto would continue its refusal to meet the $461,000 requested of the city's hydro body as the city's share of exchange and reiterated his previous stand that the Hydro body should meet the payments out of reserve.

In his capacity as a member of the executive of the Ontario Hydro Commission, Mr. H. E. Fairfield, local Hydro Commissioner, attended the meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association held in Toronto Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Fairfield stated that after discussion had been very thorough in which the Hon. Robert Cooke, chairman of the Hydro Commission of Ontario and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Commissioner, had made thorough explanations, the vote was taken in favor of the municipalities taking care of the exchange burden.

"This will not necessitate any change in rates here," Mr. Fairfield assured a reporter today. He added that even, Toronto willish is objecting, could easily pay the share apportioned and yet have a large surplus.

Speaking of the architecture of the new Belleville offices, Mr. Fairfield added that this had cost the local commission nothing. The local manager, Mr. C. H. Hoot, deserved the praise of commission and citizens because it was his plan for the beautiful white structure.

"We know we stand one hundred per cent. behind the Ontario Hydro and we want to keep it at that."

CHURCHILL IS STILL WEAK

Suffers Relapse From Attack of Paralytyphoid Ulcer

London, Sept. 28— There was no change this morning in the condition of Winston Churchill, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was said at the hospital where he was a patient today to be suffering from a relapse from an attack of paratyphoid which struck him at Salzburg, Austria, recently.

His physicians said last night he was very weak and had had some hemorrhages. But that his condition was not critical.

A bulletin issued by his physician last night said:

"Winston Churchill is suffering from the effects of a severe hemorrhage from a paratyphoid ulcer. The hemorrhage has ceased and his condition is satisfactory. Complete rest and quiet will be required for some days.

CHILD DIES IN HIS CRIB

Accidentally Gets Head Caught in Crib Which Strangles Him

Arden, Sept. 28 (Special) — On Monday evening, the one year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Clancy of Arden, accidentally strangled to death while playing in his crib.

His parents were called him for the evening and then returned to the kitchen to attend to some duties there.

In an hour she returned to see how her baby was sleeping and to her horror found him dead. In some manner he had pushed his head through a V-shaped aperture in the side of the crib and very likely slipped, causing the neck to be constricted in the narrow space so that he couldn't cry out.

Coroner Dr. Sheldon of Sharon Lake, investigated and found that death was due to accidental causes.

Funeral is being held this afternoon (Wednesday) to the United Church, Cloyne, services will be conducted by Rev. W. Shadbolt.

Yanks Lead In Fourth by Scoring 3

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Sept. 28.—A sudden rain squall drove the Yankees and Cubs from the playing field at 1:20 p.m. as they were finishing their practices for the opening game of the world series.

The rain came down unexpectedly after a misty, wet morning had given way to a bright sun and balmy afternoon. Field attendants immediately laid tarpaulins on the base paths and covered the pitching and batting boxes while the combatants and the smaller crowd in the lower deck of Yankee series game, estimated at no more than 30,000 hurdled back to await developments.

The rain lightened after the first sudden squall and there seemed a good chance that the storm, driven by southeast winds, whipped the flags out straight on their staffs above the stadium, would blow over.

The sun came out and there was a rainbow in the sky. Laborers went back to removing the canvas covering.

Rain started to fall just previous to the calling of the game. The clouds eventually broke and the teams lined up as follows:

Cubs—Batters: 2b: English 3rd; Cuyler, rf; Stephenson lf; Hall cf; Grimm 1st; Lind c; Koenig ss; Bush p.

Said to have only mildly remonstrated with those who aimed to have them discontinue their stone throwing bout with burglars and general boodlumism in the vicinity of the old Albert College building on College Street, Tuesday evening, a resident of that district claims he was subjected to quite a barrage of apples and pears which were flung at him when he appeared. Following the fruit attack several stones were rained at the side of his house and barn by the youths who shouted loud jeers and insults for some minutes. Police are in possession of a few names of the gang who have been frequenting that district.

Young, retiring president, a life membership certificate of the Women's Missionary Society. Mrs. Young responded in appreciation in her usual capable manner. Refreshments were then spent before the meeting closed.

WILD DUCKS LEAVE HAUNTS

Wild ducks, made wary by continual cannonading of guns earlier in the season, have deserted one of favorite haunts in the Bay of Quinte, and other unprofitable feeding grounds, and have been keeping well out into lake waters away from blinds near shore. Those who have been able to secure their legal bag this year have been forced to travel far afield. Even veterans have been consistently empty handed. Canada Geese have been reported scarce this year than ever before.

Twenty-two members of the Y's Men's Knot Hole Singing Class met for their weekly practice at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday night. Immediately a crowd also gathered around from the neighborhood to gaze at the unusual arrival. Boys were mindful to keep their distance from the threatening bill with which the bird pecked savagely. Later, when rescued from its plight by a policeman, it was liberated from the stone wall at the park the creature flew heavily away.

"GENIUS" WRONG FOR "GENUS"

In the report of Rt. Hon. The directors also announced that after a complete renovation, the bowling alleys would be thrown open for fall tournaments.

SINGING DOG HAS NO SUCCESSOR

It's quiet along Front street now. Not the quietness which follows a lull in the rumble and pound of heavy traffic, but the silence of a town section, but another quietness which seems strange to many. It is especially noticeable when the bell in the tower of the city hall tower chimes. Now there is no vocal accompaniment. Formerly at the corner of Bridge Street, retiring "crier" of Macannany Street, sad dirges to each stroke with dulcet tones, but for the past few days even though down town office workers have unconsciously poised pencils to listen, when the bell rang, there has been no answering echo. Even travellers in the city have commented on it.

"I keep listening for him to howl every time the bell rings," said one city hall official today.

BLONDE HENS LARGE EATERS

White Egg Demand Here Whimsey Say Dealers

A famous chuckle which had its inception some years ago commented the story of the white horses eating more than the black ones. To match this comes the interesting fact that white hens of this district also eat more than the black ones, the barred ones, or hens of any other color.

"The answer to the puzzle, like that one years ago, is the white Crow" on the phonograph record to the other one, is simplicity itself. There are more white hens to eat the food.

Once more we dig for an answer. While hens, or to be more specific White Leghorn hens, lay white-shelled eggs. Local housewives have come to demand white-shelled eggs on the market which has led to production of the brown-shelled varieties, and the white hens which are gathered are generally sold to whisperers of the trade who promptly find no trouble in disposing of them.

This is a fortunate state of affairs for local poultrymen. The White Leghorn, best known as the most productive layer of them all, is also the hen which lends itself admirably to modern, high pressure poultry methods on a large scale. This variety of bird is easily kept, requires but a small amount of grain to satisfy its appetite, and is a hardy bird which has also been given a good second crop.

NEW SERIAL WILL START THURSDAY

Beginning Thursday in the Ontario Intelligencer begins an interesting serial story entitled "Mudcat" by Laura Lou Bookman, author of numerous outstanding successes. It is a story that is sure to interest and will keep readers absorbed until the final chapters. It deals with the real life of pretty, nineteen-year-old Mudcat Mayo who, during the year bride of Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter. Don't fail to read the opening chapters beginning in this paper tomorrow.

MILK THIEVES BREAK OUT

Milk thieves after a period of quietness have once more broken out in fresh attacks on the early morning supplies which are distributed throughout various parts of the city. Latest forays on the inexpensive table fluid were made by yeasters which have been reported to the police headquarters of Coleman Ward where persistent thefts prompt householders to take extra precautions to guard their supply.

TORRENTIAL RAIN DRENCHES COUNTRY

Torrents of warm rain which fell throughout the district nearly all night Tuesday permeated the ground with a welcome moisture and gave new life to late root crops which hundreds of farms in the section which had become sun baked and parched through weeks of drought. Although the rainfall was the heaviest which had been experienced for weeks residents of the section claim that so hard had the ground become that it will be most impossible to go the fall plowing which seems to many, it is now up in many sections are also be beginning again to fill up. Mangels and other late crops which are in the fields will be rejuvenated, while fall wheat and rye which has been sown will also gain a good start from the downpour.

Belleville Clocks Like Many Other Good Things Go Wrong

LYING BY CLOCK

Belleville clocks are liars.

Despite the fact that most of them are in the business of purveying merely morning jaunt to work are accustomed to the pulsations of the electric current which ceaselessly throbs through the power wires of the city, they stare at you baldly-frankly point with mocking hands at varying points around the dial, and dare you to be on time. But while other Belleville clocks may sin, their forerunners whose motive power is the hand-wound spring, do so openly, unashamed, shameless. Utter liars! First of the very height of pernicious prevarication stands your earnest endeavors to keep pace with their fulsome gestures.

The radio time do we set the morning alarm, boil the eggs and feed the baby. When the gong strikes it will be exactly.... You check it and truly time-piece and saunter forth.

Here, in an uptown bakery is a little-heeded timekeeper, unassuming, jollily. It is ten minutes fast. In the kitchen clock in a jeweller's window, nearby, cones a little over to the minute, with a score of almost perfect—only three minutes fast. In the window, in bold-faced array, radiate the honest Ingersoll clocks. Liars, every one of them. Liars, every one of them.

Further down the street we discover other clocks keeping a fast tempo, like soldiers stirred to a faster pace by war. Others, like crippled, lagging behind, are ten to fifteen minutes fast, others just a minute or so fast, but the fact is that a chronometer in a box plainly shows a true story. Liars.

In the post office, on the wall inside sorting room, ticks away with the workaday stride of a truthful man. Yet it, too, is just four minutes later than it, by rights, should be.

Only here, it seems, can be depended on to tell the truth. Despite the fact that it is a clock of snow which flitters through the downtown area, power, and despite the pigeons which nestle beneath its eaves and in the train of years. Old faithful is the city hall clock, honest. Consistently correct, dependable, it serves even yet as a model for the newer more stylish timepiece upon its fellow. Not a mere half minute did the city hall clock vary.

So, after this when you hear that old familiar expression: "You by the city hall clock," think slowly and all the truth in the world: "Not by the city hall clock. Belleville clocks, to be exact."

HALLOWE'EN'S SHADOW CAST ON WEE CHAP

First casualty of the Hallowe'en season, little five year old Carman Rose, Front Street, was struck in the eye by a middlecread pea from a pea-shooter in the hands of one of a group of boys who had been amusing themselves shooting at passersby and street signs on upper Front Street, Tuesday evening. The little boy, who ran home screaming, returned with his parents but the boys had disappeared. No serious harm to the lad's eye was reported.

NO MAJOR ILLNESSES WITHIN BELLEVILLE

Belleville has been blessed with a clean bill of health by Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H., and by Mr. Ross McGinnis, Sanitary Inspector of the city. "There is no typhoid fever of illness in the city," affirms Mr. McGinnis.

Surrounding municipalities, however, in neighboring communities has shown a marked increase in typhoid.

Only one case of measles, that of a 7 months old child, mars an otherwise perfect record.

MAN FREED ON ABORTION CHARGE

Girl Died in Car as He Was Taking Her to a Hospital

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 28—Under a charge of having performed criminal abortion charge, Ronald Fraser, of Brantford, is today a free man. A jury in Assizes Court in Assizes after deliberating for two hours last night returned a verdict of not guilty, releasing Fraser from the charge laid in connection with the death of Miss Gertrude Curtis, Paris Plains. The girl died in Hawtins car as he was taking her to a doctor.

Describing the events leading up to the girl's death, Hawtins said they had driven to a Burford township road and parked. The girl then lay for three hours revealed her plans. He counselled against it and left the car. Later the girl cried out. Running back he found her in a serious condition and immediately drove to the doctor.

Archaeologists excavating ruins of about 2000 B.C., at Dangihan, Persia, found the burial of a dancing girl whose body and hands were laid out in an elegant dancing pose, and who was decked with many beautiful ornaments.

Solemn Closing Scenes Farewell to Late Sir Gilbert

After life's long labors he sleeps well. He rests with all the ages.

Closing scenes of the earthly pilgrimage of Sir Gilbert Parker which lay from the cradle on Canada's East through life of worldwide significance to the end of his days Belleville were tinged with those elements of quiet, dignity, strength which were marked in the spiritual makeup of the knight baronet whose pen and whose counsel attracted the world. The deep abiding sense of a reality behind all the phenomena of life stamped the scenes surrounding his burial with a solemn impressiveness.

Impressive and sublime were the ceremonies of ritual enshrining the deepest truths of life at the spoken word of the Master, Jesus, when the Rev. St. Beauchamp Pentreath, the eulogy of his lordship the Bishop of Ontario, the Right Rev. John Lyons, the spiritualizing power of music's mighty rhythm, symbols of the rhythmic truths of life which guide men, the hallowing solemn intoning of the bell from the belfry of Bridge Street United Church, just below the home of the late Sir Gilbert, and the last scenes in the Belleville Cemetery at the close with the vicar of St. Thomas' Church reading the burial office and the words of the committal were pronounced the benedictions, all these things in which Sir Gilbert and Lady Parker rest side by side was closed and they were left to await the call of the Beauchamp Pentreath recited the hymn "Now the Carpenter's Task is O'er" closing with lines:

"Earth so earth and dust to dust"
Calmly now the words we say,
Left behind, we wait in trust
Till the Resurrection day.
Father in thy gracious keeping
Leave we Now Thy servant sleeping.

As the rich and melodious voice of the vicar spoke these solemn words which had been read from the same book seven years ago this month by the Venerable Archdeacon Beaudoin in behalf of the late Lady Parker, not one but felt that one whom they knew and loved had gone to the rest of God.

With his faithful friends, from England, from the United States and from all parts of Canada, from far and near, with wife who followed the body of the man whom state and church honored, came the man of his great public actions, Sir Gilbert Parker, to his final resting place in this country.

The train was slowing down as the man jumped and fell beneath the Wabash. The author of "The Canadian Authors' Association, Ottawa, Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, poet and the Hon. Martin Burrell librarian of Parliament. These fellowcraftsmen were present at the last tomb was sealed.

A tribute as it were from out of the past came from the boys and girls of the Ontario School for the Deaf who were drawn up 318 in number before the entire frontage of the school grounds to add their tribute to a former teacher in the far-off days whose distinction came to him in the literary craft.

Sir Gilbert was the oldest co-warden of the County of Hastings, J. W. Pearce, Foster Avenue, paid his respects on behalf of himself and as a representative of the county.

An old friend upon whom had descended the sad duty of arranging for the obsequies of his former patron, poet, novelist, and statesman, Mr. Beauchamp knew him as a boy and young man before fame smiled upon his craftsmanship, one of the men in Belleville who was the confidant of Sir Gilbert and who was in constant communication with him beyond all others was Mr. J. H. Farley, who in the following friend to the grave and who was the last to leave the grave.

Sir Gilbert's early and last wish had been carried out faithfully, he rests in the heart of the people he loved and his thought has ever been with him.

EXACT CENTRE OF BELLEVILLE

Corner of Victoria Ave. And Church St. is Spot

To the casual pedestrian you might probably query, the approximate location of the exact centre of the city ought to be somewhere in the neighborhood of the city hall. Other guesses would be as varied and as interesting. In those surmises, happen to take the question or seriously, and refer to a map of the city, the location would be placed anywhere between the city hall and the Dover Bridge. But, without the aid of a true scale map, a pair of dividers and some close figuring, one guess would be as good as another.

However, the exact centre of the city, geographically speaking, is not where it is popularly supposed to be. It is not even on Front street.

Some years ago a dispute arose between several business men of the city over that very question. The matter was argued pro and con. It rose to controversial heights. Finally, to settle the argument, the late Chas. A. Campbell, C.E., and then city engineer, spent some time making a thorough survey of the district in the neighborhood of the Church street and Victoria avenue. At the conclusion of the test a chalk mark was placed on the sidewalk at the south west corner of that intersection. To further centre the spot the point was measured in a few feet from there to a location on the lawn of the home now owned by Dr. R. E. Church, 34 Victoria Avenue.

That spot, now 53ad in the office of the city hall, and attested by the present City Engineer, Chas. A. Mack, who helped in the previous survey, is officially declared the exact centre of the city of Belleville.

Coolidge With Smith Will Study Transportation Problem in U. S.

New York, Sept. 28—Formation of a non-partisan Railway Committee, headed by Calvin Coolidge, Bernard M. Baruch, Clark Howell, Alexander Legge and Alfred E. Smith, is formally announced by Walter Bennett, president of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, one of the institutions sponsoring the move.

The committee has been invited to survey the transportation situation in the United States, and to report recommendations for relief and betterment.

Approximately thirty life insurance companies and other organizations sponsored the committee.

A statement issued by Mr. Bennett said:

"The present financial position of the railways of the United States is a matter of grave concern. Collectively the greatest and most important industry of our country, the railways have recorded thirty billions of dollars of operating deficits. Only a rise and timely relief can have averted the financial breakdown of important systems.

"This situation affects directly the security of wage and employment of the 1,500,000 railway workers. It has given rise to a severe decline in the value of the $19,500,000,000 of railway obligations and shares, and has occasioned concern to institutions which hold such obligations among their assets.

"We, the sponsoring organizations representing many of the interests concerned, believe there is no more important task than a thorough and satisfactory solution of the railway problem. We believe that you examine all phases of the problem and recommend a solution which, with due regard for the public interest, will ensure an opportunity for the railways of this country to operate on a business basis."

HAWKS

By Manly F. Miner

Hawks are not good to eat. Shot gun shells cost money and with hawks as scarce as the hawk profession left us they are, no one is going out hunting any variety just for the sake of killing. The only ones shooting any variety of hawks in Ontario are game keepers and farmers that are raising chickens and the hawks they are shooting are the hawks that are attacking their chickens or other property. Whatever they are, they are called "good" hawks or "bad" hawks ones, when they are found to be killing or killing man's birds, chickens, turkeys, ducks and so forth what ever man can get a shot gun out of the gun and with this being so why so much yelling about it.

How we determine the good from the "bad" hawks we have a wire cage with black birds and pigeons in and hawks that attack them we shoot before them in our bird sanctuary what better or more fair way can we do to determine what hawks should be controlled here, and then as much as we can get them when we send all hawks we kill to the Royal Ontario Museum for stomach analysis.

The fact that some writers on the subject don't agree, their names to their articles is proof they are not sure what they are writing about or ashamed of what they have written or afraid of losing their Government job.

Some people have raised the question that hawks were put here to eat the weak and delicate species of bird life to keep down disease. In answer to this I wish to say that several writers writing on how think the passenger pigeons were they say "passenger pigeons" were so thick that they represented 40 per cent. of entire bird population." I have never seen a passenger pigeon but men who have see passenger pigeons in such great numbers certainly don't contradict this statement. Then such being the case if hawks and owls were put here to keep the delicate ones down, their numbers should have been reduced 40 per cent. at time passenger pigeons were exterminated or in same proportion that passenger pigeons represented the bird population of continent.

Writers are continually referring to examinations of hawks' stomachs as a basis for judgment, but how many of these examinations are made by taxidermists from hunters who prefer perhaps hunting rabbits in winter shot a hawk and sent it to a taxidermist to be mounted. Hunters are not sending their hawks to taxidermists to be mounted during hot summer months because the sports men would spoil enroute thus if truth were known the specimens the taxidermists get are ones killed during the open season when perhaps snow is two feet deep thus what is the circumstances, at that season of the year only mice, insectivorous and other bird life is all over in Florida, Mexico or Central America and these hawks' stomachs are filled with rabbits, mice, squirrel, rabbits, partridge quail and so forth. Why because other bird life as all migrated out of country but if these same hawks' stomachs were examined in late May or June they would tell a different story.

Don't misunderstand me and think we want to kill, kill, kill, far from it, one only needs visit our sanctuary to find this out, but we believe man should control instead of the hawks that is to say if hawks attack our mourning doves which are valuable 365 days in the year as weed seed destroyers, or even barnyard fowl we are raising for market we believe in that stepping in and killing the said hawks and those are the only hawks we are attacking. Namely the ones that attack us as has been said before men are also going out on hawk hunting expeditions in Ontario and the hawks that are being killed are for the purpose killing one's personal property so why so much yelling by just any people. Ones living in country 365 days in the year and with their own eyes are not writing protect the hawks but men going into a rage over killing a few hawks, men living in cities and read and will even quote what so and so said fifty years ago in his book on economy of bird life to thousand miles away.

The writer of called "good" hawks at times will steal chickens and don't believe in having laws to protect this "good" hawk and at the same time imprison a man for committing the same act, namely stealing chickens.

We and our bird sanctuary we are raising between 1000 and 2000 Mourning Doves annually which live principally on weed seeds. Besides several hundred Bob-White and Ring Neck pheasants here we are saying nothing about the hundreds of other song and insectivorous birds that is an overflow from our protected area brought about by us protecting them from their natural enemies. What is the over flow of bird life to us that comes through the fact you live? Instead of you spending time and money condemning our actions here at the bird sanctuary why not get out and put your scientific thought and theory into action so we ignorant people can see how things should be managed.

A person might have all the scientific teaching and theory in the world but what good is it if it is not practical and put into practice and show it to us common people our system is all wrong?

SAYS RUSSIAN PLAN SUCCESS

Only World War Against Soviet Can Stem Enthusiasm

Montreal, Sept. 28—Any doubt he had as to the success of Communism in Russia have been dispelled by his trip to that country, said Prof. J. King Gordon of United Theological College, here yesterday.

"Nothing short of a concentrated world war against Russia will cause her to deviate from the successful operation of the plan. Russian youth, imbued with enthusiasm of group competitive spirit, will not allow themselves any moderation or deviation from the goal they have set for themselves," he declared. Prof. Gordon is the son of Rev. C. W. Gordon, D.D., of Winnipeg, known to readers as Ralph Connor.

Prof. Gordon had little to say on the treatment of religion in Russia. On their opinion he stated, "religion is a waste of time because it is unscientific."

THE EARTH'S CORE

"It is many a year since any professor of geology has taught that the earth has a molten interior. The theory was a consequence of the nebular hypothesis. Thrown off by the primeval spinning sun, what was more natural than to suppose that the earth rolled progressively from an incandescent ball of gas to a solid with liquid and finally to a solid washed by oceans? Were not the lava and fire spouted by volcanoes, and the steadily rising temperature encountered by miners as they bored deeper and deeper, evidence that the earth must still be molten within!" says the New York Times.

When Professor Imamura announces that he will soon present a paper before the Imperial Academy of Japan to prove that the core of the earth is of metal he but voices views that have been familiar for several decades. The geological world will listen with interest to so distinguished a seismologist. Earthquake waves generate several kinds of waves that tell a story, with the seismograph's aid, of their experience—tell us how long they have been on the way, how deep they have penetrated and how fast they have traveled. Velocities of artificial waves are also measured in different rocks while they are subjected to pressures as high as 200,000 pounds to the square inch. By matching earthquake records with those of the laboratory, seismologists have deduced much about the earth's interior. First we have a layer of granite ten miles thick; then 2,000 miles of peridotite—a composite of iron, magnesium and silicate; and finally a core 4,000 miles thick consisting of iron alloyed with nickel.

"The core a liquid, a gas, or iron in a state as yet unknown to physics? It is this question that Professor Imamura will evidently attempt to answer. The pressure to which the iron is subjected must be about 50,000,000 pounds to the square inch—something unknown in our experience and beyond our conception. Through the influence of Dr. Harold Jeffreys of Cambridge University the theory of a liquid core has been upheld by most. By maintaining that the core is solid, as a dispatch to The New York Times indicates, Professor Imamura disagrees with Jeffreys. It is too much to hope that either Jeffreys or Imamura has given us the final answer. There is still much X-raying of the earth to be done with the aid of seismographs, and still much room for speculation, especially since it may be assumed that the interior is almost entirely starless—a region where electrons may well be compressed into atoms of a kind never seen in the crust on which we live and where matter may be released in accordance with Einstein's theory to produce effects of which geophysicists have as yet taken no cognizance."

INTEREST EVERYWHERE

While Prof. Piccard climbs into the stratosphere, William N. Beebe goes down off Bermuda's coast to explore several thousand feet into ocean depths and pictures sights never seen before by man, the dark ocean depths of midnight, lighted up with the brilliant pale luminescence of passing fish. And while both these men are at work psychologists are delving into the mind and intelligence of men and animals and sociologists are striving to find new laws and means of social progress.

It is no wonder the present age is interesting. It is no wonder that youth and old age are caught by its romance and that middle age is still learning more and more of the greatness of having lived.

THE WAY THE WIND BLOWS

Those countries and municipalities which sold bonds after Britain went off the gold standard, losing what a loss was taken with the drop when things did not appear too bright. But a change has come over the financial world which is beginning to reveal itself in the banking circles —it is the sign of the turn. Canada's successfully flotation in New York on Tuesday of sixty million dollars of one year notes payable in gold indicates how great change has come over the outlook. This loan was one of the major loans of the past year and was avidly taken up and oversubscribed.

Another feeling is abroad, the psychologic factor is at work as it always is even in the unsentimental realm of finance, though now it is brightened by the ray of hope and substantial evidence of a trend of recovery.

HOPES FOR INDIA

As the Montreal Gazette points out Gandhi's appeal was more to those immediately concerned in the settlement in India than to the British Government. It was not a case of intimidation of London. The compromise which the elements in India reached was just what the British Government has been hoping for.

The compromise which has been reached through the acquiescence of the high-caste Hindus gives real hope that the state of the depressed classes and the condition of untouchability can slowly be remedied. Probably caste will yield to human brotherhood in the long run. India will not have to give up all the elements in which go to make up Oriental life, many of them being of the highest value and deserving of preservation. In whatever civilisation develops, but caste is not one of them.

ALONG THE AMAZON"

Bates'and Wallace, the English naturalists who spent years on the Amazon and its tributaries, reported the towns and villages as ill-planned and unkempt. Sanitation was almost unknown, and the jungle sometimes invaded a street. Neglect and decay oppressed the visitor from happier lands. But that was eighty years and more ago. Another story is told by Dr. Herbert S. Dickey, who writes to the New York Times that:

"There is peace and calm among a gentle and hospitable populace, and there is the most scrupulous cleanliness to be found anywhere in the world. The streets of even the smallest cities are clean. The trees which line the streets are neatly trimmed. The gardens in the parks bloom with gorgeous flowers.

"Naturally, the people are suffering from the world-wide depression. The products of the great basin are practically valueless. But the beggar rags are clean, and the unemployed still manage to appear in immaculate white. As all over South America, there is complaint of United States tariff legislation. The tendency is to encourage a boycott of goods exported from that country. Two large logsheets, loaded with 1,000,000 feet of mahogany, were brought down the river to Iquitos to be consigned to the United States. By wireless it was announced upon the arrival of the cargo that the new and higher American tariff would be imposed in future. The mahogany logs went no further than Iquitos. Panama talked bitterly. How were they to exchange the products of the Amazon for American goods when the tariff wall had been raised against them?

"The river people, it happens, are not suffering from the hard times so much as those employed on the United States. You lose your job. That is too bad, but all you have to do is to retire to your little farm and live on fish, turtle meat, plantains and manioc, under your straw thatched roof, until things pick up. In the old days the river steamers were small, dirty and slow. But travelling on the Amazon now is done in the modern boats of the Amazon River Navigation Company. They are commodious and clean. The time is coming when tourists will be attracted in large numbers to the Amazon."

A MAN WITH TWO APPENDICES

A case reversing the familiar joke about the surgeon who opens his patient and finds a second appendix is that in which the appendix already had been cut out by a previous operator, has been reported to The Lancet (London), by Prof. O. Marinesco and Dr. E. S. Pres, in his Week's Science (New York):

"The patient, the Italian surgeon reports, might very well have fooled the surgeons by actually having a second case of appendicitis after one appendix had been removed, for the patient turned out to have two separate and complete appendices, one located a short distance from the other. The patient developed appendicitis in one of these appendices, Professor Margarucci operated, found the diseased appendix and removed it.

"To his surprise, he then discovered the second appendix looking much like the first one, but still perfectly healthy. Not content with only one appendix to become inflamed and trouble, nature had provided this individual with a double organ.

"Cases of such doubling of other organs occasionally are reported by physicians, like the instances of people who have six fingers or six toes on each hand or foot instead of the normal number of five. Frequently such abnormalities are inherited, but Professor Margarucci supplies no facts about the presence or absence of the extra appendix in other members of his patient's family."

DANGERS OF MOTHERHOOD ARE REDUCED

Two Million Babies Born in United States Every Year

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. PH.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Although childbearing is a natural process it does not follow, because of that fact, that it can be considered healthy, or that it is without possible danger.

Every two million births recorded in the United States every year, and of the two million mothers, hundreds take serious chances by not studying the process of maternity more closely.

No woman should fear having a baby, unless there is some organic deformity or chronic illness that makes it impossible. We know, for instance, that a tuberculous mother runs a terrific risk in giving birth to a child. The drain on the system is such that the tuberculosis usually makes great headway and often, although the child is saved and even healthy, the mother pays for the experience with her life.

Yet such a tuberculous mother would be warned and aided with advice, help and treatment a doctor just as soon as she knew of her condition. Many a fatality has been avoided in this way. In fact, if women would only place themselves in the hands of physicians and invariably follow their advice, no fear whatsoever would need be entertained.

But despite the advances which science has made in behalf of the expectant mother, we still find women taking chances. Either a doctor or a so-called "midwife", inland attending a woman in labor. For going to a hospital clinic. For some reason, according to them, many women actually are afraid of doctors, and even more so of hospitals. It is a fact, I am sorry to say in the world where even the poor are looked after in the best of American hospitals, whether the case be one of childbirth or any other thing else. The physicians in attendance are skilled and well-trained, and in touch with the latest and finest. Nowhere, either, is nursing more scientific than in America.

Although every prospective mother, if she possibly can afford it or arrange it, should enter a hospital to have her baby, whether if it be her first or her tenth, I do not wish to give the impression that child-bearing cannot be carried on safely at home. But scientific help is needed at home, as well, if possible, a trained nurse should always be engaged. Not only does such a nurse give a sense of security and take away the worry off the mother, but she knows—and this is a highly important—how to recognize the unforeseen and unusual and how to handle it with dispatch and efficiency.

A woman who weighs the advantages of hospital care should make arrangements weeks ahead of time, and actually enter it about a week, or at any rate a few days, before the baby is scheduled to arrive. The arrival of the infant, if a child often is born several days either ahead or later.

A source of great disappointment to many mothers is the fact that the new baby is not of the sex which they desired. Here it is emphasized that the sex of the offspring is something that cannot be controlled or determined in any way. Wishing and hoping and speculating leads to nothing except, possibly, a case of nerves.

Lastly, the many minor difficulties sustained while carrying the child and "marking" the infant, so that there is no truth whatsoever. It's just so much idle gossip. Just one helps to undermine a mother's confidence, and make her very nervous and, in child-bearing, let every mother be scientific, let her be calm and always!

Letters to The Editor

SIR PERCY GIROUARD

23 Station St., Belleville, Sept. 23, 1922

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—It may possibly interest you to know that Sir Percy Girouard, lately deceased, served as Lieutenant R. E. in India. He received his training in active service under Sir Redvers Buller, Lt.-Col. W. F. Badgley, of Montreal, Col. Badgley surveyed the unexplored district between Lumsden and the Punjab, and the young engineers who served under them made the roads and bridges over which Lord Kitchener had to cross after the mutiny.

A passage in your article a long gap between Girouard's entrance to the army and his being made a Colonel in the Royal Engineers due to the fact that of all these young officers who were under my father in India, Girouard alone survived.

I well remember hearing my father describe, with joy, how Sir Percy won his fame in the Soudan. Lord Kitchener had given orders that the first engineer to reach a well, but finished before a certain time, should be conferred with and the time much too short, and Kitchener became very angry. He sent for Girouard and asked him what he thought. The young engineer had carefully surveyed the ground, and immediately replied that he thought it could be done. He won through it, and Kitchener's approval by keeping his word.

Very truly yours,
Veronica M. Spafford.

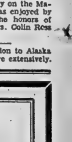
NEW SHRINE AT ST. ANNE

A SPLENDID new edifice, now nearly completed, is the result of thousands, including many United States tourists, who annually visit the famous shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, in a charming town, 16 miles from Quebec city. The new church pictured above replaces the structure which was nearly completed in 1922. The original church was built in 1658 on the same site where the first wooden chapel was erected. Standing in front of the Ford V-8 Tudor is the Very Rev. Father Elie Jourdaux, one of the Redemptorist Fathers.

JUNIOR INSTITUTE MEMBERS STAGE ENJOYABLE PARTY



Madoc—The Busy Bee Jr. Institute of Madoc, held a most successful picnic at Ozone Park, Moira Lake on Saturday 17th. Cars were provided by friends both going and returning. Going in a sudden rain storm shelter was secured in a vacant cottage. Games were played and at a short business meeting, the programme for the year's work was arranged.

A bountiful lunch was served to the eighteen members assembled after which weather permitted several games being enjoyed in the open. A few enjoyed a final swim in the Lake and a ball game was organized by two well matched teams. Darkness fell only too soon.

Friday night's jitney on the Madoc Bowling Green was enjoyed by a goodly number. The honors in the evening fell to Mrs. Colin Ross and Mr. Carl Moore.

NO STAMPEDE FOR SEATS AT WORLD SERIES

Yankees Are Two to One Favorites on First Day

CUBS CONFIDENT

Lacking Drive of Yankees Chicagos of Champ. Class

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 28—Clouds of an even deeper gray than those from the Yankee Stadium smoke stacks, cast by the baseball's most glamorous pictures today—the opening game of the series for World Series.

Marring the wildest sort of a last-minute flood of enthusiasm the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs faced the entirely unexpected threat of a possible financial depression.

Never before in the history of six previous Yankee Stadium games on Broadway and the far-reaching environs of Manhattan failed to produce whooping enthusiasm, and crowds to swamp the American League ball park.

But today, with Babe Ruth "Rufus the Bear" Ruffing primed to hurl his fireball against the cocky Cubs, with Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the siege guns, perfectly trained on Chicago's lanky Guy Bush, the ball park primed and draped in bunting, even the breeze of a perfect New England autumn day polished to a brilliance that rivals the noonday sun when there is not a cloud in the sky, tion or the revolution of the faithful seemed certain to have taken place.

The prospect was for a crowd of no more than 35,000 to 40,000, depending chiefly on a change from the cold and gloomy rainy weather of yesterday, and the stylness of the faithful for the 12,000 unreserved grandstand seats valued at $2.20 each, and 22,000 $1.10 bleacher reserving places.

New York Favored

The Yankee batting crew prevailed a 2 to 1 favorite in the scanty betting.

Far sterner opposition than these figures warranted lurked in the confident Cub array that steamed in to town on a special train yesterday morning, the cheers of Chicago's militant faithful still ringing in their ears.

While the Cubs lacked the distance, power and drive of the mighty Yankees there was no denying their championship ability. Backed by Bush, Manager Charley Grimm's choice for the opening assignment, were such steady pitching veterans as Charley Root, Malone and Burleigh Grimm, all boasting the invaluable World Series asset, experience. Add to that Lon Warneke's brilliant enough over the season's record to battle the Yankees in the second game on youth, speed, and courage alone.

There was hitting power of the character, shorter type in the bats of "Old Hoss" Cunningham, brilliant Kiki Cuyler, big Gabby Hartnett, young Johnny Rizzo, and Lon Yaske shortstop, Mark Koenig, Woody English, Bill Herman and Grimm himself.

Perhaps the slump in the interest of the cash customers could be attributed to the World Series rule, designed to frustrate the ticket speculation, of selling tickets only in blocks of two, thereby forcing the unnecessary hoke games and a sixth contest that may never take place.

Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, considered this to such an extent yesterday when only half of the 35,000 reserved blocks had been sold at $18.50 each, that he petitioned Commissioner Landis to permit the sale of single tickets for each game. The Commissioner decided against him on the ground that it would be unfair to previous purchasers of the blocks of three.

In the event of postponement, something that never has happened to the opening game of a World Series in the memory of modern man, the opening game automatically goes over until tomorrow, with the second game Friday, and the opening of the three game series in Chicago Sunday.

Umpires — Dinneen and Van Grafkan (American); Klem and Moriarty (National).

Time of Game—1.30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

ONLY FOUR PLAYERS CAUGHT IN DRAFT

New York, Sept. 28—Only four players were drafted at last night's annual major league draft meeting in the Roosevelt hotel, probably the smallest number in history.

The Chicago White Sox drafted Pitcher Joe Heving from Indianapolis of the American Association. There no other minor league last six games this season, Detroit Tigers drafted Frank Doljack, a pitcher with Newark of the International League.

Of the National League clubs, the New York Giants drafted Outfielder Ethan Allen of Rochester, American Association. Although Peel belonged to Columbus, he played with Houston, Texas, during most of the season.

The Chicago Cubs drafted Lyn Nelson, pitcher of Seattle, Wash., Pacific Coast League, and lost in the season. Nelson once played with Detroit.

CHATTANOOGA WINS CROWN IN DIXIE

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 28—Hard and fast hitting gave Chattanooga Southern Association championship, a 7 to 3 victory over Beaumont, of the Texas League, and the Dixie series baseball title.

After Beaumont scored twice in the first inning, Chattanooga came through with hits when men were on base to score two in the fourth, four more in the fifth and another in the seventh. Beaumont added one run in the eighth but could not keep up the hitting pace of the new Dixie champions. Score:

Chattanooga (SA)

CHOOSE SHEPPARD, HOGAN

Guelph, Sept. 28—Discussion over the choice of umpires for the final series for the Ontario senior baseball championship between Toronto Danforths and Guelph Leafs was settled when both clubs agreed on Abe Sheppard, of Toronto, and Hugh Hogan, of Guelph, as the official arbiters.

HACK WILSON HAS FOUND HIS OLD STAMPING GROUNDS—WRIGLEY FIELD. JUST A PLAIN JINX ON 33 TIMES BUT HACK ONLY SCORED TWO SINGLES—FORAH AVERAGE OF .006.

A JINX FOR HACK

Wrigley Field, Chicago, scene of the rise and fall of Hack Wilson as a member of the Cubs, is an even bigger source of unhappiness to him than it was last season. Wilson came to Chicago with the Dodgers for their do or die series, with an average of .306. He failed to hit and was withdrawn from the line-up in favor of Johnny Frederick. A check-up revealed that in 33 times at bat this season on his old stamping ground, the Hacker had made just two singles, one of them a scratch. For a heart-breaking meagre average of .006.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

In case Jupiter Pluvius steps in and spoils Wednesday's North Bay game with the Tigers, it will be all set game the teams will take the field on Thursday afternoon, so announced the Vics' management last evening. Not only has the weather been threating for the past few days but the weatherman is also quite adverse to even suggesting the idea of fair weather for the inclemencies O.R.A.A. semi-finals.

Manager Fanning took Archie Campbell to the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday morning where Dr. Tennent X-rayed the southpaw's elbow. The x-ray plates showed that no bones were broken but there was a slight sign of a severe bruise at the base of the elbow. Campbell was kept in the hospital all day Tuesday and attended to by those in charge. Manager Fanning was of the opinion that with careful handling Campbell's pitching arm would be in perfect shape for the second tilt against the Pirates. According to the sports editor of the North Bay Nugget the Pirates should experience little, if any difficulty in "taking" the Vics little camp with Harold Fanning at the hilltop. The Nugget sport scribe is already planning a trip to Southampton with the Pirates when they meet in the intermediate finals. (Maybe).

Some people have all the luck. The wrestling fans will see a better card on Friday night than was scheduled for Wednesday evening. The Masked Marvel meets Scotty MacDougall, Nazarine Pogzi, the rough-house Italian battles Frankie Hart and Dr. Ralph Wilson meets Jack Kogut. Without a doubt this is the best matched card we have heard of in some time especially the latter two bouts. The Hart-Pogzi needs no introduction to a Belleville audience.

Jack Forbes will be sent down from Toronto to handle the heels and the fans should profit considerably from this stand point. The Frankie Hart — Pogzi bout should pack 'em in. The shifting of the "grunt and groan" artists for Thursday night looks to be all in favor of Mr. John Fan.

Even the Belleville Citizen's Band will be present.

Coach Les Shiels takes both the junior and senior B.C.I. football teams up to the old Ontario Field for an hour's practice every afternoon now, a number of last years' players have signalled their intentions of returning to the fold much to the delight of all concerned. With another week's practice and two or three experienced linemen at his disposal, Coach Shiels will have a pretty fair senior team of gridders.

Both teams open the current season, officially, at Napanee on Saturday afternoon, when they meet the junior and senior gridders of the Napanee Collegiate. As the B. C. I. Juniors are all recruits to the game this year Coach Shiels does not expect too much of them. The seniors, on the other hand, should go places this season as they have some of last year's seniors and a flock of last year's champion juniors at their disposal. We know of at least three linemen attending the local collegiate who have failed to appear at practise as yet, and the presence of these has put the cause of football, for 1932 at old B.C.I. would be strengthened considerably.

Wednesday sees the opening of baseball's classic, the 1932 world's series. All true Canadians' sympathies lay the Chicago Cubs meet the New York Yankees and the first game will be "in the bag" by the time the fans are finishing their "current sport". Although sport writers are invariably "poor pickers" we will have to be excused with Reporter's Rifles due to their superior hitting power. The Chicago Cubs are conceded the advantage in the infield while the Yanks are far superior in the "garden". The pitching duties are voted about even. In the reporting department Bill Dickey of the Yankees, has been voted one of the best catchers in the major leagues. The probable pitchers for the opening game will be Guy Bush for the Cubs and Ruffing for the Yanks. One of the managers may pull a "Howard Ennke" though.

As expected, Rogers Hornsby, deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs is seeking his "cut" in the world series money of the team. Hornsby convinced, and rightly, in our opinion, that he is the man who selected the team that has just won the 1932 National league championship, and that he whipped it into shape and fed it through its major difficulties, and that he is fully entitled to a share of the "swag".

No matter what the kind of manager Hornsby was, the fact remains he did much good work in placing the team in a contending position, not only as a manager, but also as a player, and to vote him out of the series money was a shabby trick, to say the least. Just another evidence of the old saying that there is little sentiment in baseball.

Wrestling Results

Baltimore—Abe Coleman, 207, Kansas City, Mo., Mike Dragon, 210, Germany, 13.06.

Chicago—Ray Gar—Henri De-Glaze, 217, Montreal, won in straight fall from Al Mercier, 210, Ware, Mass.

New Haven, Conn.—Steve Zuzak, 217, New Britain, Conn., threw Mike Orgovanyi, 203, Hungary, 31.14.

Heavyweight Division

New York, Sept. 28—The heavyweight division of the fight game in the United States and Canada is mapped out today for Max Schmeling and the rugged trio of challengers for Jack Sharkey's championship and title.

Riding the wave of enthusiasm that followed Schmeling's sensational eight round knockout victory out of Mickey Walker Monday night Madison Square Garden laid out a program that will send the former champion and the three-boiler-men battling twice before next Summer, when Max, if his success continues, will face Sharkey for the championship for the third time.

JACK JARVIS AGAIN COACH FOR SEASON

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 28—Jack Jarvis, Toronto, boxing coach at Queen's University for the past two years, has been reappointed for another year. The Athletic Board of Control meeting last night gave Jarvis credit for the continuous improvement in the University's boxing team which resulted last year in the winning the Intercollegiate boxing and wrestling championship for the first time in 20 years.

Millers' Power Sluggers Are Bottled up Completely

(By R. Gregory Hewlett, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newark, N.J., Sept. 28 — Youth, speed and lots of vitality appeared to be the formula for a winning baseball club today as the Newark Bears and Minneapolis Millers laid plans for the second game of the Little World Series.

Col. Jacob Ruppert's Bears added together all of those qualities yesterday in pounding the American Association champions into submission to the tune of 7 to 0 and were ready to repeat their stunt in the game scheduled tonight under the lights at Ruppert Stadium. The starting time is listed for 8.30 p.m.

Being one up in a first four of seven game series, the Bears took first place for Manager Al Mamaux's forces, yet the International league pennant winners had not had a serious to increase their advantage by another triumph today. Harry Holaclaw, a speed-ball rightslinger, will be the choice of Mamaux in the second start of Newark's initial little World Series competition.

Forced to use four of his veteran hurlers yesterday, Manager Donnie Bush had to call on Rookie Jakucki plans. Instead of having Koon Vaz Olden, a fast ball artist ready to go into the fray, Bush was in a futile effort to halt the Bears' attack and will send Jess Petty, a veteran of veterans, into the mound breach.

Although the whole Newark team scintillated in yesterday's walkaway, it was the work of Dale Mercy that stood out above everything else in the proceedings. His performance was presented with a cat for breaking up Minneapolis' 25 pitching voyages during the regular season and then proceeded to allow the Millers but three scratch hits in as brilliant a performance as the fans of the two leagues ever has witnessed.

Another highly reputed power slugger, Joe Hauser, who set a home run record of 63 with Baltimore in 1930, Joe Mowry, and the rest — were bottled up completely. Mowry and Andy Cohen got a fan on second but they died there and no Miller reached third base.

Brennan's battery mat, Charlie Hargreaves, helped the young right-hander immensely with four good hits, two of them for extra base runs—his first of the year—and the first three were singles, all of which enabled him to drive in four runs.

I THINK WE'LL WIN

New York, Sept. 28 Here's how the rival managers looked at the World Series between the Yankees and the Cubs, starting today:

Charley Grimm, Cubs—"Well, surely I schink well win. I won't attempts to say how many games it will go. My men aren't afraid of the Yankee hitters. We have confidence in our pitchers."

Joe McCarthy, Yankees—"I think we'll win all right. There isn't a limp or a sign on the club. We're in grand shape from top to bottom."

Tweed Lodge Commemorates 113th Anniversary of Order

Tweed—The one hundred and thirteenth anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Oddfellows was duly celebrated by Tweed Lodge, No. 260, I.O.O.F., on Sunday, September 25th. The members of the order, including visiting brethren from Belleville, Madoc, Tamworth and Enterprise assembled at the Oddfellows Hall at 2.30 p.m. and marched in a body to the United Church, preceded by Marmora Band, and directed by Noble Grand R. Bradshaw, who was Master of Ceremonies, to attend Divine Service.

At the church they were joined by sisters of Tweed Rebekah Lodge No. 236, who preceded them to the church. The hymns chosen for the service were "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee," "O Master Let Me Walk with Thee," and "Nearer to the Tie that Binds." The choir sang "Love Divine All Love Excelling." Dales taking solo and obligato parts were acceptably rendered.

The minister, Rev. R. R. Nicholson, chose as Scripture reading the thirteenth beautiful chapter in the Good Samaritan, Luke 10: 29-37, which served as a basis for his address on the theme "The Man Who Showed Mercy."

Following the service at the church the lodge members, sisters and the brethren marched to Victoria cemetery to place flowers on the graves of departed members. As the flowers were deposited on the graves of Oddfellows, a poem from the poets was read by Bro. H. E. Hicks. At the same time the sisters of the Rebekah Lodge placed flowers on the graves of departed members in their beautiful ceremony.

At the conclusion of the Decoration Service the members of the two lodges formed in circle in the Anglican Church yard and Past Noble Grand Bro. Chas. Sudds, I.P.G., No. 45, delivered the address, concluding with the solemn exhortation:

"So live that when thy summons come to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To those mysterious realms where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go, not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

The procession reformed and returned to the lodgerooms.

Vitality Necessary For Beauty Rating

Being merely pretty, these days, is no great shakes. Not if you have youth and enough cash-coin-spending-chance to keep up a presentable wardrobe and to make the weekly pilgrimage to the beautyorium. Gown designers, coiffure builders, milliners, cosmetic chemists make the effort easy. You can count good looking girls by the dozens in a half hour's walk. But the one who catches your eye-is the female who has more than good looks. She has good looks plus. It's the plus that counts. You can call it personality, if you like, but that's a dubious term which may mean anything. What it really is, is vitality, energy, the will to be and the will to do. You spot it in a woman's step. In the poise of her head. In the intelligent expression of her eyes.

She lives intensely. That doesn't mean that she throws emotional flops, but that she gets more out of life than the average. She is cheering. She is as a rule a darling, kindly sympathetic, understanding tolerant. She is the salt of the earth, that woman. When she comes through the door, somebody has arrived.

Vitality is a spark that lights a woman's countenance with a radiance which no rouge or cosmetic makeshift can duplicate. Common sense it. It is strength, mental, physical, spiritual. Before it chiffon beauties melt away. They're magazine cover girls.

She's vibrant, and compelling.

Vitality is present when the body works under natural and normal conditions, when every part of the human machine is strong. And that includes the mind that must obey the laws of health and hygiene. No broncho, no sulking. Vitality is given to those who inherit physical wealth. It can be dissipated by unwise living.

Energy, sprightliness, animation are elements of charm because they signify life itself. They contribute toward beauty, they contribute toward happiness and well being. They are forward-going; they take no places. One gets on.

Ill-health and fatigue knock everything flat, as if you are to enjoy life, a vitality, energy, the will to be and the will to do. You spot it in a woman's step. In the poise of her head. In the intelligent expression of her eyes.

She lives intensely. That doesn't mean that she throws emotional flops, but that she gets more out of life than the average. She is cheering. Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

WORDS TO AVOID

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. The other day in your column, in answering another question, you happened to mention something about "certain words that are slovenly used." Will you be so kind as to mention a few that you would include in this list?—

2. And please say something about the use of the word "pants" when we mean "trousers."

3. Is it ever correct to say "between you and I?"

4. When should one speak of one's husband as "Mr. Thompson," when as "Tom," and when as "my husband?" This has always puzzled me, and I would love to have you help me out on it.

5. May one ever refer to the wife of a doctor as "Mrs. Dr. Robinson"? One often hears this.

6. If a minister hasn't the title of "Doctor," how could one address him?

7. How should I address letters to him?

8. Is it correct for a girl of seventeen to use the title of "Miss" on her calling-cards?

ERASING.

1. I'd love to make a list, a long one, of words that find themselves, at least to me, in this category.

But here are a few: Phone, instead of telephone. Gent or gents, instead of gentleman or gentlemen. Photo instead of photograph. Auto instead of automobile. Kids or kiddies instead of children. Hubby, for husband. The wife or The Mrs. instead of my wife. Tux, for Tuxedo, or, better, dinner jacket.

2. This is inexcusable!

3. No. We should say, "between you and me." Between is a preposition, and is followed by the objective case. I is the nominative case.

4. When a married woman is speaking of her husband to servants or to tradesmen, she refers to him as "Mr. Thompson." When she is speaking of him to friends or to people whom she knows fairly well, she refers to him as "Tom." It is indeed not really incorrect for her to refer to him as "Tom" to people who have not met him. Although usually she says "my husband," in some one whom she does not know very well.

As a matter of fact, there isn't so much difference between the last two and the first one.

5. No, this is incorrect. The wife of a doctor is never "Mrs. Dr. Robinson." The title belongs to her husband, not to her.

6. If a minister hasn't his degree in Divinity, he is spoken to or of as Mr. Worthyman."

7. And letters should be addressed to him as

Reverend Thomas Worthyman

or

The Reverend Mr. Worthyman

He should never be addressed or referred to as "The Reverend Worthyman."

8. Yes. It is incorrect to have a visiting card (this term, by the way, is preferable to calling-card) without a title before the name.

Foster the Child's Talents

(By Constance Cameron)

There is a colossal temptation, when we have a child in the home, to utterly possess him, to manipulate him for our own satisfaction rather than for his own good. And the more conscientious we are in our attitude toward him and his future the more easily we fall into the temptation of feeling satisfied when he does something WE have wanted to do—something WE feel should be gratifying to him. Yet in the long run, under thoughtful analysis, it is OURSELVES we are projecting into the child's desires and activities, not the child himself.

Have you observed your child's aptitudes for various types of work and play and figured out the line in which he will be most interested and will excel, or have you merely attempted to gain satisfaction by moulding him into a miniature of what YOU would like to be? It is worth while thinking about.

Do you, as a father, praise son for athletic prowess because as a boy you had to get down to work too early and were denied sports? Maybe son has no ambition to shine at football. Maybe huge muscles give him much less satisfaction than a theme well worked out, well executed.

Their Own Aptitudes

Do you as a mother insist that daughter become an accomplished musician because YOU like music and have denied a musical education?

Give your child a chance to live his own life—and by that I don't mean uncontrolled activities—I mean a chance to develop the talents he HAS, not the ones YOU have and have been unable to nurture and bring into bloom. Cultivate your own if possible, but don't cultivate them through your children.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers).

Price Range Narrow Among Stock Leaders

Toronto, Sept. 28—Trading went through a dull and featureless session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today with volume showing further contraction from that of Tuesday and price movements narrow and irregularly lower.

SAYS TRADE IS PARALYZED

Ex-Premier King Offers Solution of Lower Tariffs

EXETER, Ont., Sept. 28.—(By the Canadian Press)—Declaring the development of Canadian industry and commerce had been "thwarted and to a large measure paralyzed" by the "excessively high tariffs enacted by the present administration," Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, today pledged his party to continue to seek the promotion of trade by the lowering of tariff barriers.

Speaking on behalf of W. H. Golding, Liberal candidate in the South Huron by-election which winds up with polling on Oct. 3, Mr. King strongly criticized what he termed attempts of Government spokesmen to make the Imperial Economic Conference the issue in the contest.

"They say, you," he said, 'to give the government your support on something that you known nothing whatever about; something that is still to be made known and which will not be made known in the country may occasion more in the way of bitter misapprehension and misunderstanding. The policies, pointed out, had been set for three days before the opening of the session and adoption of parliament at which the details of the agreements reached at the Imperial Conference were to be made known.

"The disastrous effects of the policies adopted by the present government have been felt in all parts of Canada and by all classes," Mr. King declared.

NEW YORK STICKS FIRM

R. R. and Steel Shares Make Minor Advances

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.— Stocks crept sluggishly forward today in a quiet trading market which, while it showed an undertone of distinct firmness, was too animated enough to attract wide public interest.

Railroad and Steel Shares, aided by indications of improvement in those industries, assumed the leadership in an advance which carried many issues up to 2 points, and a few up 3. Farm equipment and mail order shares were also well bought.

Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern and Northern Pacific, New York Central and Chesapeake and Ohio formed more than a point.

U. S. Steel rose 2 and gains of equal moment were made by of Bethlehem and Vanadium. Case gained 4 while Harvester and Sears Roebuck were a couple of points higher. Montgomery Ward moved more than a point to a new 1932 high.

Utilities were quietly strong with American Telephone gaining 3 and Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas and Standard and Electric about 2. Motors were firm, influenced by indications of sustained improvement in September retail buying comparable with August. Mack Truck again reached a new high. In specialties United States Rubber, Columbia Carbon, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Byers and Dupont gained 1 to 3.

Mid-week trade reports sounded a cheerful note, telling of modest gains in steel buying and a further rise in electrolytic production scattered segments of car loadings by individual roads Week ended September 24 showed further increases.

Cabinet Personnel

Pending appointment of ministers to succeed the three members of the cabinet who have resigned, the cabinet contains 11 Conservatives headed by Sidney Baldwin, Lord President of the Council; three National Liberals, cut off from the Labor party—headed by the Prime Minister himself, and two Liberals—Sir John Simon and Walter Runciman—who long ago made clear their willingness to support tariffs or any other measures necessary in the economic emergency.

Thus the second National Government was split asunder on the agreements reached at Ottawa. The three Free Traders wanted Mr. Golding's candidature in the South Huron by-election which winds up with polling on Oct. 3 kept strictly criticized what he termed attempts of Government spokesmen to make the Imperial Economic Conference the issue in the contest.

"It is understood Prime Minister MacDonald intends to fill the vacancies forthwith and with a view of trying to preserve if possible the appearance of unity in the Government.

It was another of those dramatic days in quiet Downing Street. The Prime Minister arriving at No. 10 Sir John himself arriving at No. 10 nearly a half an hour before the appointed time. He was soon followed by Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, and the two had short private conference. Then Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council.

Then by tall and stout other members of the cabinet came along each turning on the threshold of the little house to face a battery of camera men. Viscount Snowden was accompanied by Mrs. Snowden who helped him from a taxi and then stalked into the house with a sham. Secretary of State for War, Lord Lloyd George, who led the dissenting Free Traders paused on the threshold for a photograph with someone shouted "good old Sam." At last Stanley Baldwin, Lord Privy Seal came along and was greeted with an extended hand by Sir Herbert Samuel. Then the door closed on the narrow doorway to be met by a battery of cameras.

As the cabinet members left some of the crowds in front of number 10 were more animated as a large crowd had gathered to try and catch some comments on the expressions of the ministers.

Cabinet Reunions

The Cabinet met again this afternoon and afterwards it was announced that the following had submitted their resignations: Isaac Foot, Secretary Mines; Malcolm Stuart, Secretary for the Colonies; the Marquess of Lothian, Under-Secretary for Canada; H. Graham White, Assistant Postmaster-General; Walter Murdoch Mackenzie-Wood, and Harcourt Johnstone, Assistant Whips; Walter Reid Parmers Co-operative Co. Rees, extras, doz. 2c; eggs, firsts, doz. 15c; eggs, second, (candled), doz. 13c; cream, No. 1, f.ob. 21c; butter, No. 1, solids, 21¼-22c; new potatoes, per bag 75c.

FRIGHT IN COURT TONGUE-TIES CHILD

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—The excitement of appearing in a witness box on Thursday during a murder trial as upset Albert Giroux, seven old boy, that his mumbled answers to questions were incomprehensible. Consequently, his testimony could not be considered. Giroux, on the edge of events surrounding the strangulation of his mother, Mrs. Eva McLeod, 25-year-old Indian of Nova Scotia birth, for whose death Philip Kane, colored, is facing a murder charge.

The difficulty was overcome by having the official court stenographer read the lad's deposition given before Judge Martin of the Court of Special Sessions at the preliminary hearing of the case. The highlight of the deposition was the statement by the Giroux child to the effect that "the woman" put the rope around her (the McLeod woman's) neck and then around the pipe." Giroux, is the son of Mrs. McLeod by her first marriage.

Harry Bixdy, K.C., defence counsel, urged the jurors to set aside the evidence of the 7-year-old boy as being unscorroborated and unreliable.

TWO HUNDRED KILLED WHEN STORM BREAKS

Thousands Homeless and Many Injured in Outlying Towns

120 MILE GALE

1000 Buildings Down in Ocean Front of City

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 28 —The island of Puerto Rico today was the scene of desolate ruin wrought by a hurricane in which some 200 lives were lost, over 1,000 persons injured and great property damage.

It was impossible to estimate accurately the number of deaths even today, more than 24 hours after the hurricane first hit the island. Preliminary reports indicated that the death toll might go over 200.

Many thousands of persons were homeless. Reports from Afiardo and Toa Alta indicated no houses were left standing in those places and the same is true of other small towns and the countryside.

The insular government directed all its energies to relieving the situation, but reports indicate the task can not be handled without outside aid.

It was feared that the property damage would be greater than that of the 1928 hurricane when 271 persons were killed. The damage in San Juan was greater than in 1928. The citrus fruit crop has been completely destroyed and it was feared that the coffee crop has suffered heavily.

The hurricane struck the island at the northeast part about 8 o'clock and passed along the entire northern coast at a velocity of over 120 miles an hour. The vortex apparently passed about five miles inland and the height of the storm inland.

The hurricane, born in the leeward island group of the Lower Antilles, roared northwestward across the Virgin Island group, greet damage and causing some loss of life.

Then it struck Puerto Rico on the northern part of the east coast and advanced 15 miles an hour—with a circling motion as high as 125 miles velocity—across the island and just south of San Juan, shortly after midnight.

Battering a wide path through this island, is whirled on to the northeastern coast of Santo Domingo and towards Haiti.

DOUBTS ENTRY BY CANADIAN

Race Chairman Quotes Rules on British Trophy

DETROIT, Sept. 28—W. D. Edmiston, chairman of the Race Committee of the Yachtsmen's Association of America stated today he doubted whether Canada could enter an entry into next year's speedboat races for the Harmsworth Trophy and the world's championship.

Mr. Edenburn quoted rules of the Association that effect competitive boats must be designed by natives or naturalized subjects of the country from which they are entered and must be constructed wholly and in every respect in that country.

Bert Hawker of Gravenhurst, Ont., boat designer who drove Miss Betty Carlaint victory in the Harmsworth in 1930, he said, had established at that time that he was an English man. Hawker was mentioned yesterday in an announcement from Orillia, Ont., as the designer of a boat which an Orillia syndicate was considering entering in the 1933 races.

Construction of an engine of sufficient power to make its boat a contender in the race would cost the Canadian Syndicate about $250,000, Mr. Edenburn estimated.

FORT ARTHUR PORT WILLIAM IDEA IS LOST

Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 28 — Suggestion by His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, that Port Arthur and Port William unite, fell on barren ground yesterday. The suggestion came in an informal conversation prior to a joint Canadian Club luncheon at Port William.

With J. E. Crawford of Port William and F. J. Young, Port Arthur, presidents of the two clubs, His Excellency advanced the union, idea suggested the name Port Arthur, Mr. Young agreed but Mr. Crawford demurred. Earl Bessborough then suggested Port William as a name and Mr. Young disagreed.

Smilingly the Governor-General said he could appreciate the situation and would be reluctantly compelled to abandon the hope his diplomacy could reconcile the conflicting views on municipal union.

KURULACK IN JURY'S HANDS

Fate to be Decided on Wednesday in Western Killing

Yorkton, Sask., Sept. 28 (CP)—Charged with the murder of a police officer, William Kurulak of Canora is on trial here. His fate is expected to rest in the hands of the jury before the day is over and after his case is disposed of his brother, Michael, will be tried for the same offence.

The Kurulak brothers, with Bill Miller, an ex-convict, are alleged to have been the occupants of a motor car who shot and killed Corporal L. V. Hall of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police when he attempted to arrest them at Pears Lake, Sask. They were arrested after the greatest manhunt in the history of Saskatchewan, after a posse of 300 farmers, policemen and villagers had pursued them for five days. Miller was found dead, the victim of a self-inflicted bullet wound after the Kurulaks had been captured.

MOTHER LACKS WILL TO LIVE

Had Prayed Her Son Would Recover Health

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The body of Cornelius Whalen, seven-year-old son of Mrs. Catherine Whalen who is charged with his murder, was sent to his home in East Dorset, Vt., yesterday.

The child's mother, who had prayed her son might recover from a dose of poison which police said she administered, remained in hospital here, critically ill, and doctors said there was little hope for her.

She refused to eat and was being fed by injection. The child's mother is suffering from the same poison as that which killed her son.

WILD GAME REPORT WITHIN FEW DAYS

Toronto, Sept. 28—Report of the special committee appointed by the Ontario government in inquiry into the wild game situation in the province will be made in a few days though it may not be made public until the session of the legislature.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Hon. W. D. Black commenced its work two years ago. They met at a luncheon Wednesday yesterday to draft its report to the cabinet. The contents of the report are being carefully guarded but it is understood recommendation for the use of dogs in deer hunting will be included.

CARDBOARD TAGS FOR POPPIES CONDEMNED

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 28 —Heated discussion is expected to take place today at the convention of the Ontario command of the Canadian Legion when the report of the poppy committee presented yesterday is debated.

The report, laid down by Rev. Archdeacon MacIntosh of Dundas and Major Ralph of Whitby strongly censures the policy of the Toronto Poppy Fund Incorporated in substituting cardboard tags for Vitcraft poppies on Memorial Day.

The system, the reports says, lessens employment for disabled veterans and violates the established custom not only of the Canadian Legion but of the entire British Empire Service League as well.

MIRTH AND MELODY WELL MIXED IN "LOVE ME TONIGHT"

"Sparkling melodies, brilliant dialogue and a whole series of delightful performances danced on the screen of the Belle Theatre this afternoon where Maurice Chevalier's latest picture, "Love Me Tonight," began an engagement of three days.

The new Chevalier film, under Rouben Mamoulian's direction, and with Jeanette MacDonald again in the feminine lead, is one of the best romantic comedies that the French singing actor has made in this country. The story is as fantastic as a comic opera should rightly be, but it is also a good one, chock-full of both romantic and hilariously amusing situations.

Chevalier has the role of a debonaire Paris tailor, who descends upon the chateau of the Vicomte Gilbert de Varese to collect a large bill, and remains to play Prince Charming to the beautiful and lonely Princess Jeanette, cousin of Gilbert. Per Gilbert (Charlie Ruggles) cannot pay his bill and doesn't want his irate uncle, the Duke (C. Aubrey Smith) to learn of it. So he passes Maurice off as the Baron Courtelaine and has him included in the house party at the chateau. Complications ensue, but most of them are gay enough and all of them are punctuated with songs.

The principal love song, "Love Me Tonight," is beautiful, and bids fair to surpass the popularity of "One Hour With You." "Isn't It Romantic" and "Mimi" are catchy melodies, and other comedy songs, such as "A Woman Needs Something Like That" and "The Son-of-a-Gun Is Nothing But a Tailor" serve as amusing parts of the action itself.

"Grand Hotel" Next

Music plays an important part in Mervyn-Golden-Mayer's picturization of the famous Vicki Baum novel and play, "Grand Hotel," which will be shown in the Belle four days, commencing Saturday.

Through a novel method of synchronization, Director Edmund Goulding underlines the action and dialogue in the drama with atmospheric music, composed by himself in collaboration with orchestration experts.

Goulding, who wrote the music for "Love, Thy Magic Spell Is Everywhere" and other numbers, planned the musical score to emphasize the emotional intensity of the scenes and to interpret the varying moods of the action. Particularly effective use of music was made in the love scenes between Greta Garbo and John Barrymore.

The brilliant cast of "Grand Hotel" also includes Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery and Lionel Barrymore in starring roles with Lewis Stone and Jean Hersholt heading the large supporting cast.

Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in "LOVE ME TONIGHT", Now at BELLE Theatre.

SHOWS GUN BATTLE ON MOVING TRAIN

A welcome relief from hum-drum screen mystery dramas is provided through "By Whose Hand?" a fast-moving production, showing at the Capitol Theatre. Its rapid-fire series of events takes place on a wildly racing express train, which of itself is not a hackneyed locale. Furthermore the picture is replete with well-placed dramatic suspense, subtlety, and surprise action. In fact, this reviewer doesn't quite recall such a consistent string of thrills in one film. And they are provided by some really capable actors, such as Ben Lyon, Barbara Weeks and Kenneth Thomson.

The theme hinges on the escape of a "killer" and his intention to even up old underworld scores as well as make a getaway. This alone proves a prolific source of possibilities for clever scenario writing. But many other things unfold, and the numerous episodes that take place show to what extent the story has been made to provide an unusual amount of excitement.

A novel, if grussome, place of concealment is used by Nat Pendleton, who takes the part of Delmar, the hunted man, and many of the threads of the well-developed and logical plot are to be picked up in the baggage car of the train. Mrs. Leonard, a "sorrowing" widow, played with merit by Helene Millard, has had to check her dog in the baggage car. Her visits to her pet are frequent, and it works out that they have plot significance. There is sufficient comedy inserted to relieve the more tense moments and keep the picture from anything like exaggeration.

From the standpoint of camera work, the picture is a distinct triumph. The scenes fairly teem with human interest. Battles for guns in precarious positions on swaying railroad equipment furnish many gripping scenes. The audience does not see the most exciting part of the plot unravel until toward the end, and interest is thus kept at a high pitch until the very last. And it would be just too bad to tell about it beforehand—because the denouement is a complete surprise.

Ben Lyon satisfied as Jimmy Hawley, the star reporter of the Gazette, who is assigned to "cover" the Delmar case, but who lands a bigger "scoop" than he figured on. He also lands Barbara Weeks in a delightful rapid romance. Ethel Kenyon capably portrays Eileen Ayresworth, the girl dope fiend.

William Halligan plays this usual good role of detective, and comedy is supplied from Dixon, as a drunk, and Dolores Rey and Lorin Baker, as bride and groom, respectively.

"By Whose Hand?" plays at the Capitol today (Glassware Gift) and Thursday and is supported by five other features of comedy, interest and novelty.

4 MURDERED, MILITARY PUT IN CONTROL

Political Killings in Cuba May Lead to Reprisals

3 BROTHERS DIE

Political Associates of Slain are Urged to be Calm

HAVANA Sept. 28.—Havana was placed under military rule after an outburst of political violence had resulted in the assassination of Clemente Vazquez Bello, President of the Cuban Senate, and of three prominent members of the Opposition to the administration of President Machado.

In a message to Congress, the President guaranteed that military rule had been invoked "as a preventive measure against reprisals of friends" of the slain men. He urged the associates of the victims remain calm.

The killing of the Oppositionists was described by investigators as an act of retaliation for the slaying of Dr. Vazquez Bello, a strong Machado supporter, who, had he lived, probably would have been the next President of Cuba. A fourth member of the Opposition was gravely wounded.

The Oppositionists slain were three brothers, — Representative Gonzalo Freyre de Andrade; Guillermo Freyre de Andrade, an attorney, and Leopold Freyre de Andrade, an engineer.

Representative Miguel Angel Aguilar, who participated in the unsuccessful revolt against the Machado Government in August, 1931, was shot four times.

Dr. Vazquez Bello was shot as he was driving away from his estate, El Bohio, which adjoins the Country Club. There were ten bullets in his body. He died before his chauffeur, Julio Suarez, who had been wounded, could drive him to the hospital.

Red-Headed Life-Guard

By Mabel Ruth Jackson

"You go on in and swim," urged Lessie, tossing the dark tendrils of hair out of her eyes and looking up at her cousin. "I'll just sit here and watch the people for awhile."

"All right," agreed Hazel, catching Eleanor by the hand, "but don't you be flirting with any of those good-looking fellows. Come on, El," and they raced down to the water.

"What's come over Lee," wondered Eleanor, "she used to be so lively and full of fun?"

"Oh, she's mooning over some boy she has down there in Jordanville. He went away and she does not know where he is."

"Before I'd let any fellow get my goat that way," said Eleanor scornfully.

"Me, too," agreed Hazel, and they plunged into the water.

Left alone, Lessie eased about on her with interested eyes. It was all so new to her, the wide expanse of sand, the shimmering blue water that made her gear ache to be in it, the lookout at it too steadily, and all the groups of people clad mostly in bathing suits themselves on the beach and in the water. How different from going swimming in the river back home. But what fun they must had there, Bob and Jane-Bob with his copper red head and steady grey eyes. Bob was a fine swimmer, too. If he hadn't been there would have been no Jane-Bob to worry about today. If he had only been content with rescuing Jane from the river, but he went out for taking a risky swim and she was too high-spirited to stand for his caution and so they had quarrelled bitterly. Bob had said, "If that's the way you feel, I'd better go away and not see you," and she had retorted airily "Go and I don't care if you never come back!"

Bob had gone to his home, packed up his things and left and Lessie had had neither seen nor heard from him since. Why couldn't he have guessed that she didn't really mean what she said.

She suddenly realized that she wasn't seeing much of the scene about her for she swallowed hard, sighed, blinked her eyes and looked around.

The beach was a shifting mass of color—bathing suits of every shade. Some of the people were playing ball, others, leap-frog. Others lay on the warm sand alone or in groups, or fanning themselves. The diving stand, some distance out, was crowded with figures, some jumping gracefully, others describing awkward arcs into the water. A steamer passed, leaving a wake of churning water, and, blowing a hoarse signal, drew up at a pier not far away. Lessie shut here eyes a moment and listened to the medley of sounds—shriek of merriment from the bathers, the whirr of an aeroplane overhead and a child's voice crying tearfully, "Look Mumsie! Look!! Look!! What I found!"

She stood up and walked to the edge of the water. Her cousins saw her and waved but she had stopped suddenly as she caught sight of the life-guard who was slowly paddling his boat about among the bathers. Surely the set of those broad shoulders was familiar—to her! He'd only take his white hat off. She drew in her breath sharply as her heart began to pound with excitement. Then he turned the boat and she saw his face. It was Bob! She waited breathlessly for the moment when he would recognize her but he was running at something a pretty girl in a yellow and white bathing suit had just called to him. Lessie raged to herself. So! While she was sad and heartbroken, he was amusing himself. But with a return to sanity the told herself that she couldn't expect him to go around wedding tears. Maybe he did still love her, in spite of everything. She would soon find out.

She waded through the shallow water to where he had left his deep enough to swim easily and with a long, clean, powerful stroke she soon reached the limit of the rope that was the dividing line between the bathers and the deep water. Bob's voice, "Hey, you 'Come back! You're not allowed out there! But she paid no attention. She knew he had started after her. She saw recognition flash into his face, a look that told her what she wanted to know more than anything else in the world. But there was no tenderness in his words. "Are you crazy? What do you mean—pulling this kind of a stunt?"

"Oh Bob!" she murmured with a twisted smile, "how natural you sound."

"And how natural you act!" he retorted, giving her shoulder a little shake that, somehow, seemed like a caress, and then they both smiled.

The attentive throng on the beach watched the red-headed life-guard rowing in with one oar, his left arm encircling a girl whose head rested confidently on his broad shoulder.

"Well," observed Eleanor to her sister as the boat drew near the beach, "if it isn't Lessie! I'd say our little country cousin isn't so slow!"

"Newspaper Item," returned Hazel. "Handsome Life-Guard Marries Pretty Girl He Rescued From Drowning."

145 ACRES LAND SOWN TO WHEAT

London, Ont., Sept. 27—Wheat prices may be discouraging to most farmers, but Samuel Oakes, former Mayor of Strathroy, this week is the owner of the largest field in Ontario exclusively sown to wheat. Using a tractor and two teams he is sowing 145 acres of land untouch-ed by fence or hedge on his farm on the ninth concession of Caradoc—a field reminiscent of the rolling prairies.

Because of the trouble between the Irish Free State and Great Britain, Free State horse owners did not exhibit at the Helen's Bay, Northern Island, horse show this year.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

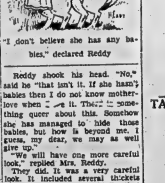
Reddy and Mrs. Reddy Give Up

A mother's love knows no retreat, And always it is hard to beat.
—Old Mother Nature.

Once Reddy Fox sets out to do a thing he does not like to give up. This is especially true when he is after something to eat. He is smart and knows it. It is the same way with Mrs. Reddy. It is hard for them to believe that any one can be smarter.

So when they went out to find the babies of Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer they wouldn't admit even to themselves that was possible for Mrs. Lightfoot to be smarter than they. From her actions they were certain that those fawns were hidden in a certain thicket. Whenever they approached it she drove them away in great rage. Furthermore, they never succeeded in enticing her very far from that thicket although they tried and tried. Yet though they had searched through and through that thicket they hadn't found those fawns.

"We will have to try another plan," said Mrs. Reddy. "We will keep on hiding and watch her suspect that we are about. She must go to them several times a day to feed them and by watching we can find just what place she goes to most often and there we will find the babies."



So Reddy and Mrs. Reddy kept out of Mrs. Lightfoot's sight and where she did not get their scent but where they could keep watch of her. She browsed over a considerable space, sometimes in one thicket and sometimes in another thicket. But when she laid down it was most often in the thicket from which she had so fiercely chased them. And it was most often in a certain part of that thicket. So they were sure that there was where the babies were hidden.

They waited until Mrs. Lightfoot went down to the nearest pool in the Laughing Brook to drink and then once more searched that thicket. They found no babies. They found the bed of Mrs. Lightfoot, but that was all.

"I don't believe she has any babies," declared Mrs. Reddy.

"But if she hasn't why should she care if we enter this thicket? Why should she drive us away in such a rage?" demanded Reddy.

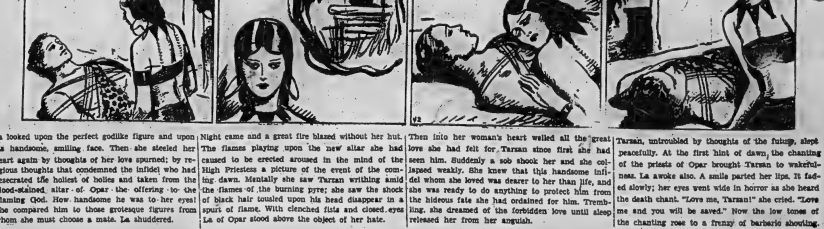
"I don't know," replied Mrs. Reddy. "Perhaps she did have some babies and something has happened to them and she has not recovered her grief yet."

"I don't believe she has any babies," declared Reddy

Reddy shook his head. "No," said he "that isn't it. If she hasn't babies then it is not love motherlove when I see it. There is something queer about this. Somehow she has managed to hide those babies, but how is beyond me. I guess, my dear, we may as well give up."

"We will have one more careful look," replied Mrs. Reddy.

They did. It was a very careful look. It included several tho-rough in that vicinity, but chiefly that one in which Mrs. Lightfoot spent so much time and from which she had so fiercely driven them. The thicket in which the fawns were hidden was the farthest from the one where Mrs. Lightfoot spent most of her time and was looked through very hurriedly. Reddy didn't expect to find the babies there and he wasn't disappointed.



So at last the search was given up. Mrs. Reddy had a narrow escape from he hoofs of Mrs. Lightfoot and on this account was the more willing to give up. Only Deer might make a wonderful dinner but there were other dinners easier to get and without danger; she would be quite satisfied with these. So, for that matter, would Reddy Fox. The chief reason for which he hated to give up was that it was an admission that Mrs. Lightfoot had proved herself too smart for two of the smartest folks in all the Green Forest. Pride was touched.

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 42

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

La looked upon the perfect godlike figure and upon his handsome, smiling face. Then she steeled her heart again by thoughts of her love spurned; by religious thoughts that condemned the infidel who had desecrated life holiest of holies and taken from the blood-stained altar of Opar the offering to the Flaming God. How handsome he was to her eyes! She compared him to those grotesque figures from whom she must choose a mate. La shuddered.

Night came and a great fire blazed without her hut. The flames playing upon the new altar she had caused to be erected aroused in the mind of the High Priestess a picture of the event of the coming dawn. Mentally she saw Tarzan writhing amid the flames of the burning pyre; she saw the shock of black hair tousled upon his head disappear in a spurt of flame. With clenched fists and closed eyes La of Opar stood above the object of her hate.

Then into her woman's heart welled all the love she had felt for Tarzan since first she had seen him. Suddenly a sob shook her and she collapsed weakly. She knew that this handsome infidel whom she loved was dearer to her than life, and she was ready to do anything to protect him from the horrors fate she had ordained for him. Trembling, she dreamed of the forbidden love until sleep released her from her anguish.

Tarzan, untroubled by thoughts of the fulugh, slept peacefully. At the first hint of dawn, the chanting of the priests of Opar brought Tarzan to wakefulness. La awoke also. A smile parted her lips. It faded slowly; her eyes went wide in horror as she heard the death chant. "Love me, Tarzan!" she cried. "Love me and you will be saved." Now the low tones of the chanting rose to a frenzy of barbaric shouting.

NUMBER OF CHURCH BOARDS TO BE REDUCED

Number of United Church Boards Cut for Economy No Reductions in Salaries

Drastic Change in Church Financing Has Been Recommended

STAFF CUTS

Three Vacancies in Colleges Will Not Now Be Filled

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 30.—(CP)—Drastic changes in church financing are recommended in the report of the economy committee of the United Church of Canada which will shortly come up for consideration by the General Council now in session.

Considerable debate is expected on the report of the committee which include recommendations for cutting executive boards, and abolishing certain posts. Studying the question of finance for the past year, the committee, which includes Hon. W. W. Lowell, K.C., and A. S. Anderson, Toronto financier, recommends reducing the number of administrative boards from 34 to four.

This reduction in number of administrative boards will be accomplished, the report suggests, by merging Home Mission and Social Service with Home Missions; and combining religious education with education.

If the recommendations are carried out, the report says, the total number and status of officers in each recognized department should be established by the General Council which should also order suitable reductions in staffs.

Criticism of Staffs

So far as salaries are concerned, the report suggests they have already been cut to the minimum. The report also declares much of the criticism of large staffs and the numbers of theological colleges is due to misapprehension and recommends that three vacancies at Emmanuel, Montreal, and one at Knox, Toronto, should not be filled. Sir Robert Falconer is now on a Canadian resort dealing with colleges.

Hamilton, Sept. 30.—Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore of Toronto was elected Moderator of the United Church of Canada at the opening business session of the General Council held last night in First United Church.

Rev. Dr. Moore was elected on the first ballot, defeating Rev. Dr. Richard Roberts and Rev. Dr. W. L. Armstrong both of Toronto. The vote was not announced.

Rev. Principal George Roberts of Sherbourne Street Church, Toronto, was nominated by Rev. C. W. Bishop, Albert College, Belleville, and Rev. Dr. W. L. Armstrong of Trinity Church, Toronto. He was opposed by Rev. Dr. W. A. McTaggart, St. Columbus Church, Toronto.

The moderator-elect was nominated by Rev. E. Leslie Pidgeon, Montreal.

Former Methodists

Secretary to the General Council of the church since the Union, Rev. Dr. Moore was for many years prominently in public affairs of the Methodist Church.

A native of Acton, Ont., he began his career as a printer and publisher after "turning to the ministry, he was ordained in 1884 after completing his studies at Wesleyan Theology, Montreal.

ELECTRICIANS BADLY BURNED

Explosion Sets Fire to Switch Board in Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Two men were seriously injured today by an explosion which set fire to the electric switchboard at the John Street pumping station of the Toronto Waterworks Department.

The men, Daniel Glee, 36, and George McCann, 45, both electricians, were rushed to hospital where they were said to be fighting hard about their heads and faces. Both, it was feared, would recover.

A small fire which followed the explosion was quickly extinguished. Cause of the explosion was not determined.

FRAUD CHARGE LAID

London, Ont., Sept. 29 — Samuel Brenner, 51 of Toronto, was remanded by police court today on a charge of false pretences arising from a report sale of photographic enlargements.

HAIL, SNOW AND RAIN IN AFTERNOON FALL

Combined Fall

Snow, rain and hail, the first of the season, combined Thursday afternoon in a short downfall at 2.30 o'clock, presaging a wintry end to the fall of rain, which looked exceedingly promising, should it prove forecast clouds which gathered from the south. With the rain came colder weather.

Thursday Coldest of Mornings of This Season

BUTTY-IVY-IV. Summer has gone.

Thursday morning's frosty blanked corn stands in serried rows on bare fields; cosies whistle in the back lots, cabbages have gone to cover for the season.

There is considerable evidence these mornings and evenings that old man winter is just around the corner. Football season and sop-coat time, now prevails, seems to be a cue for colder weather, with only the pleasantries slight relaxe for Indian summer to look forward to.

Wednesday evening was one of the coolest evenings yet this year. The thermometer dropped to a low 37 early in the evening, remained there for a period, and then took another three point dip just before midnight. Heavy frost was again felt in some sections. Only when the sun came out, however, did it begin to get comfortable again. Then rain in the morning, Thursday, made things more gloomy.

It is thought by many that this will be a cold winter. They point to heavily laden choke-cherry trees this fall, and the fur of colonial rabbits, "cold," they murmur. Other factors point also to unsophisticated methods of prognostication. "The muskrats haven't even begun to build yet," they claim. But, until who has already gained considerable reputation, makes his official forecast in a day or so, nobody knows.

ASSERT RIGHT OF INDIVIDUAL BIRTH CONTROL

Church Hears Report Upon Contraception

CIVIL MARRIAGE

Church and Divorce and Re-marriage Problem

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—Every Christian married person has the right to determine to the limit of all the facts and obligations involved how far precautions against reproduction shall be employed in his or, her own life," the United Church Board of Evangelism and Social Service declared in a special report on the "meaning and responsibilities of Christian marriage" presented to the General Council of the Church in session here.

The report says "it is clear that the time has not yet arrived when one can declare positively what will be the ultimate effect of the practice of contraception upon the human organism with its intimate interplay between physical and psychological factors. It is therefore clear that no contraceptive method should be employed without competent medical advice and even then only subject to the obligation to exercise self-control in every phase of life".

"The view that procreation may be evaded by total abstinence from physical union seems to be out of harmony with St. Paul's declaration against the adoption of such a course except by mutual consent and then only as a temporary measure," says the report.

Remarriage After Divorce

Discussing questions of divorce, the report advises that the church should go slowly in asking the State to abolish remarriage after dissolution of the marriage tie.

"Divorce in any case is emergency treatment never a cure." Only spiritual healing can accept it in the record as part of normal life and Christian culture," the report proceeds.

"But every true church demands that the State forbid any subsequent union, we must consider the possible consequences. It is quite clear that, in most cases those who have married again after a divorce will not be deterred by the refusal of legal sanction, nor will the refusal affect the physical, much less the inward and spiritual fact."

BECOMES CANON OF ST. GEORGE'S

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 29—Announcement was made today by the Lord Bishop of Ontario, Rt. Rev. James Lyons, that he has appointed Rural Dean L. E. Davis, rector of Christ Church, Deseronto, to be Canon of St. George's Cathedral. Canon Davis will succeed Venerable Archdeacon Beamish, who recently was recently appointed Archdeacon of Ontario.

Prize Elephant He Didn't Want Dies As Offer to Buy is Made

Bridgewater, N.S., Sept. 29.—Alonzo is dead. A telegram conveying that news lifted a big weight off the mind of David McKean, who had been advised by a Toronto firm that his good salesmanship had won him the title of elephant.

McKean had been worried. The elephant was to have been shipped to him without delay. He didn't know if anything about elephants—except that they were big animals with big appetite and requiring big quarters.

Then a telegram had been sent by the firm to satisfy an account with a circus that went broke in Toronto so McKean believed it was coming to him.

Wednesday he was relieved when a telegram informed him the animal, Alonzo, was at the Exhibition at Horray! But another telegram stated the sale had been arranged by Shucks! Still another telegram—Alonzo dead. Well, Well!

Just to make him feel bad again, another telegram came in from Sydney later in the day. Somebody had killed a prize elephant, Alonzo.

Incidentally, the firm had assured McKean that he will receive another elephant, although not quite so big.

Mosquitoes, Snakes and Insects Join Bolivians Against Paraguay

Buenos Aires, Sept. 29—Heavy rains in Gran Chaco trapped Paraguayan troops in a quagmire before the beleaguered Fort Boqueron and brought into action the worst reinforcements the enemy played on mosquitoes, snakes and poisonous insects.

Downpours of the last week, a prelude to the tropical rainy season, have forced the attacking Paraguayans into what would otherwise be reckless close-in troop attacks upon the lines of Bolivian defenders, military observers believe. They were subjected to a heavy fire from hundreds of Bolivian machine guns.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENTS ON MINISTERIAL CRISIS

London, Sept. 29 (C.P. Cable) — "An untimely secession" declares The Times today regarding the news of the resignation of Free Trade members of the National Government. The message says Sir Herbert Samuel in the government is "easily reparable."

Without questioning the sincerity of the seceding ministers The Times says that fundamentally the resignations are unnecessary. "If the unity of all remained in office the Liberal party would split beyond repair. The government would lose its cohesion, the newspaper adds, without losing its claims to be a National mandate.

Analyzing the reasons for the minister's resignations The Times finds difficulty in understanding why patriotic, courageous men should have existed the fiscal policy into a means for reasserting party movement when British policy towards all other problems is in the informative, creative and most decisive stage. The Liberal Leader and his colleagues have read into the Ottawa agreements imaginary dangers which their co-ministers have been unable to detect," the newspaper continues. "The proposal that the legislation arising from the Ottawa agreements should be delayed is clearly impracticable. It would mean that many of the those agreements with foreign countries for which the present ministers are so anxious would also be largely nullified."

Says Cabinet Stronger

The Daily Telegraph expresses the opinion the cabinet is now stronger and the standing of the seceding ministers more likely to suffer in the general estimation "The Liberal ministers' scruples were misplaced They would have remained in the cabinet if they had imposed reasonable condition for the postponement of the Ottawa legislation had been conceded. Their action therefore was decided not on a principle of policy which they accepted but on a matter of degree in the application of that policy".

The Morning Post provides the only genuine Free Trader in politics standing in "unashamed isolation". The Morning—Post suspects the true reason for resignation is not to resurrect Free Trade but to revive the Liberal party. The newspaper says it would have been more impressed with "the virtuous indignation" if it had made either a good deal sooner or a little later.

"We are not yet acquainted with the applications of the Ottawa agreements" the newspaper continues, "but they are the best chance to lower tariffs within than to raise them without."

The Daily Express says there is no reason to regret the ministers' departure, which affords the government a splendid opportunity of reconstruction though the "price for which they were elected." The Daily Mail regards the secession as being hopelessly handicapping the Liberals in any attempt to further the policies they believed necessary.

Lord Snowden is reminded by the Daily Herald that he "has a responsible for the creation of the present conservative majority" and therefore cannot escape "a full share of responsibility for the errors on which he now pours scorn."

DOCTORS MEET IN BELLEVILLE 75 PRESENT

Canadian Doctors Best Trained Says Dr. Holbrook

DRY CLINIC

Doctors Urged to Improve Service For Mankind

Over 75 medical physicians and surgeons met in Belleville on Thursday to attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Medical Association, district No. 8. Medical doctors were from all parts of district No. 6 which includes the territory from Dundas to Napanee and south into Prince Edward County.

Dr. H. Stobie of Belleville is councillor for this district and the convention was held in this city. He was ably assisted in arranging the convention by the various local medical men belonging to the Association.

The morning meeting was held at the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. A. T. Bazin of Montreal spoke on "Dry Surgical Clinic." Luncheon was held at the Quinte Hotel at which Dr. Rowley, secretary of the Ontario Medical Association, had the guest address on "The Business of the Professional."

Improving Service

Dr. J. H. Holbrook, President of the Association of Hamilton, was the chief speaker of the day and he chose as his subject, "The Responsibility of the Medical Association to the General Public." This speaker said the most outstanding during the past twelve years there had been over $60,000.00 spent in post-graduate courses by a group members of the Ontario Medical Association which is recognized as one of the strongest medical associations in the world. "We also have the best trained doctors of any country," said the speaker, when referring to the entire membership of the Ontario Association. He urged all doctors to try and improve their service to the public as he related to them that their profession was considered one of the most democratic in existence. Per Hohrbook then went back to the early days of the association and spoke highly of those who were pioneers in such a movement towards the serving of mankind.

Dr. J. H. Rodger of Hamilton gave a short address on "Goitre Clinic" which he will be given a talk on "Jaundice and Cirrhosis" by Dr. H. K. Detweiler of Toronto. Dr. W. Berry of Toronto gave an illustrated lecture on "Genito-Urinary." A banquet was held when the members of the association were entertained by the ladies' auxiliary at the Bay of Quinte Country Club.

Birth Under Happy Fishing Star Or Chance Explains Big Catch

Mr. R. Treenear and Mr. H. Wallace, salesmen for a Hamilton concern, stopping at a downtown hotel for the day while awaiting further orders from head office, are convinced of the old saying that there are more fish in the bay than ever were caught. In this case it was Quinte, and Lake Quinte.

With lots of time on their hands Wednesday afternoon and a power boat from a livery, arranged for some fishing tackle and proceeded down past Massassaga Point. After some still fishing, during which time they landed some creditable fish the two men indulged in a little trolling. There large bunge were landed not far from the Point in less than an hour. The largest weighed ten pounds. Local fishermen who know every inch of the district declare the catch could have equalled that catch in a month.

BRAVE BANDITS FLEE AT SIGHT OF RIFLE

HALIFAX, Sept. 29. — Mrs. James Morash has no patience with these modern bandits.

Two of them, roughly dressed, entered the back door of her home at Lower Sedford and asked for bread.

She told them the only bread in the house was heading in the oven.

Then one man wrinkled his face in a villainous leer, drew a revolver and demanded money.

Mrs. Morash turned toward the door, took down a rifle....but the visitors had fled.

They are still running. At least the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had not caught up with them.

DOG MISJUDGES SPEED OF AUTO

A frolicsome apparently well-bred collie pup who had successfully played tag with the wheels of passing motorcars on the lower bridge for some time Wednesday evening, just previous to 7 o'clock, misjudged his distance with the approach of a large sedan and ended up in a small heap in the centre of the road when he became entangled in the wheels of the speeding car. The large machine did not stop but left the pup behind in a huddled heap yelping in pain. A following car stopped, the driver alighted, lifted the injured pup into the rear of the machine, and with the staccato yelps of the animal still evident drove swiftly off.

GUN BURSTS IN HUNTER'S HAND

Escaping serious injuries when a gun burst in his hands, while duck hunting near Trenton early Wednesday morning, Mr. William Sutherland, Toronto, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. Ward, near Bon Echo, received only slight cuts and scratches to show for his experience.

At the first shot he had fired from the one barrel of the double-barrelled weapon he carried, the breech burst, scattering parts of the mechanism in the face, several of which ripped his cap and one sleeve of his coat. Powder burns from the back-flash of the shell when the wrench flew open were also received in the lower part of his face. The gun, an old one, was said to have been weakened previously by the use of heavy ball cartridges during the deer season. Traces of mud in the barrel of the weapon may also be held accountable for the explosion.

PEACH TREE HERE HAS HEAVY CROP

Growing from a pit and now at the age of three years a peach tree in the garden of Mr. Arthur Gael, Bridge Street West, has been the envy of its neighbors. From it Mr. Gael has taken five eleven-quart baskets as well as three six-quart baskets. The peaches are of the Crawford type, are large and ripe. They were picked last night. This is the first season the tree has borne fruit and Mr. Gael is naturally proud of the crop which he has been able to pick from it's branches. So heavy was the load that some weeks ago he had to strengthen the branches lest they break with the season's burden.

NOT WINTER YET WORD FROM DOCKS

This year has seen a great revival in boating in the district. Sail boats generally have enjoyed greater popularity than ever.

CITY MARKET WELL ATTENDED

Despite the drizzling rain which fell and the rather piercing cold wind which prevailed Thursday's mid-week farmers' market was fairly well attended by the vendors of farm commodities. The absence of purchasers mitigated the farmer's trading, however. Green corn was still in evidence, selling at 10c per dozen ears. Other seasonable vegetables such as beets, carrots, turnips and onions were also offered in the scant number of buying citizens present. Potatoes sold for 15c a peck while tomatoes brought 30c a bushel. In the fruit line plenty of fine looking melons were offered to the public at the season's prevailing prices. Snow Apples sold for 75c a bushel while St. Lawrence apples brought 60c a bushel. Plenty of other fine looking cooking apples sold at a lesser figure. Pears brought 25c and 30c a peck.

HARD COAL PRICES TO REMAIN UNCHANGED

Coal Sales up

Despite the fact that there have been two increases in price per ton at the mines since the season commenced, the majority of local dealers affirm that prices in hard coal, as stated by them some week ago, will not advance until about Nov. 1, although a few of them have hinted of a possibility of an advance before then.

So far there has been a good demand for this commodity locally by householders who are now ordering empty bins filled, although peak orders are not expected for a few weeks yet. Generally the first heavy frost on the ground results in much hurried telephoning, clanging and clattering of shovels, and the tinny rumble of the black diamonds down the chute from the loaded wagon, echoes. Huge piles in local yards wait the first attack.

Urges Citizens To Raise Fund To Finance Trip

On Saturday the Belleville Intermediate hockey team which leaves so far made such a splendid showing are scheduled to appear in Barrie to complete the home-and-home. At present the team is seriously handicapped by financial worries. To such an extent is this so that it appears doubtful if enough money can be raised by the team to pay their expenses to Barrie and return unless more can be secured by local subscription. To this end an appeal has been made by the team to Mayor Geo. O. Tice asking for a grant from the city council to supply the necessary funds. The team will be in turn requested all residents of the city who are desirous of seeing their home team appear in the final playoffs to contribute what little they can for the support of the local boys. Any contributions which may be made, large or small, will be received thankfully at Bill Cook's cigar store on Front Street down town store and will be handed over to the team. The money will be accepted up to Saturday noon.

POLICE COURT

Solomon Josepha, who appeared before Magistrate Mikel on a charge of removing goods from a local premises with friends to defraud his creditors, again appeared in the police court Thursday morning. The case was again enlarged until Friday next. A number of motorists paid the minimum fine for breach of the highway traffic act. Things were rather quiet in police circles during the past twenty-four hours, there being no arrests made.

One German highway is guarded by a wooden figure of a policeman, with red eyes that glare brightly at night, and one hand pointing to a speed limit sign.

Modern development of nurse training dates from the time of Florence Nightingale, who founded the first nursing school, in London.

HEBREW NEW YEAR BEGINS

Ram's Horn Will Be Sounded at Local Synagogue

Hebrews throughout the district will gather to celebrate "Rosh-Hashanna," Jewish New Year, which will begin at sunset, Friday, September 30th and end at sunset, Sunday, October 2.

For Christians throughout the world the year will be 5692, but for Hebrews, the recognized year will be 5693.

The observance of this event will commence with impressive services Friday evening in the Synagogue on Pinnacle Street, under the direction of Rabbi Ben Gerstel, assisted by Mr. Tobias, of Montreal and Mr. Kalen of Toronto. Services which will be held daily and nightly will be concluded only at sundown, on Sunday.

Being orthodox, Belleville Jews will have no musical accompaniment to aid them in their services which will consist of age-old chants of old Hebrew origin. Chanter Gerstel will lead this part of the ceremony. Reformed, or unorthodox, Jews only, depend on pipe organs or other musical effects to accompany them. Sometimes even English is used. Local services will be purely Hebrew.

During present New Year services at the local Synagogue the ram's horn will be sounded as was the custom in the temple of old. Friday, the first day of service, will of the most sacred day of Israel's calendar.

Though services will be primarily intended for local Hebrews, an invitation is extended to all others who may care to avail themselves of the opportunity to attend services at the Synagogue during devotions.

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street.

W. H. MORTON, Publisher.

THE EYE OF SCIENCE

An invisible speed trap has been invented, an electric eye which peers out of the roadway to clock speeding motorists and notify police. The little mechanism is working hard in a stretch of the Boston Road with adequate results. Two photocells are secreted in the roadway and when a car passes over these in succession, bells ring in a distant police booth indicating the elapsed time between ponts. On some roads another device is used to control traffic, loudspeakers send out instructions from police cops to cars a quarter of a mile away.

Next invention will probably be an automatic court which will fine the offender on the highway without loss of time.

An invention much wanted would be a block system which would prevent cars striking one another.

PEACH TREES

Will it be possible at some time to produce peaches in this section on a commercial basis? Will science become again the handmaid and produce a tree which will stand the ravages of winter?

Now there are peach trees old and young in this city. The latest crop to be recorded is that produced by a tree owned by Mr. Arthur Gael, West Bridge Street, who has picked about seventy-five quarts of peaches this autumn from a three year old tree which grew from a pit which had been dropped. The season was not too short to ripen these fruit for they are delicious and are large. Mr. Gael has shown that peaches can be produced here.

It is said that the chief obstacle to the peach development here is the severity of the winters. As noted before perhaps science will help out by producing a more sturdy tree.

NATURAL DISASTERS

The Porto Rican tragedy recalls the many natural disasters which have befallen the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. There where houses are of less durable construction than those of the north and the farther south, the elements strike with unusual vehemence and death and ruin are the result. Hurricane and tempest seem in harmony with the mood of the Spanish adventurers who made that section of the world famed in history with their thirst for blood and their craving for gold treasure.

At about the same time as the gale was driving at two miles a minute across the Caribbean, there were groans of earth about the shoreline of the Gulf of Salonliki and in the tremors buildings fell islands disappeared and many lives were lost in this classical area.

The location of these natural disturbances are now fairly well known for they do strike in the same place because nature is unchanged.

STINTING

The Toronto Star has a wise saying which is worthy of repetition "People who have their 1928 incomes are pinching like the rest." It adds "this reducing of expenses, this refraining from buying anything that can be done without, retards the return of business activity." That is true and yet little or nothing can make head against this mass attitude while people feel that way, because people are people. Yet they will change in time. They may not see the change coming, they may tire of pinching as they tire of too much of a good thing. But the tragedy of it is that their very cautiousness lays an additional burden on finance and the less fortunate. Men are men and many of them like to be able to say like the comic character "I have had losses" and take delight in the boast and though surrounded with plenty, find pleasure in stinting themselves and in finding how far the personal budget can be cut down.

COMMENT

The United States weather bureau has placed the population at stake as it predicts another mild winter unless there is an unprecedentedly sharp drop in temperature. Some folks have been reading signs in the fur of animals and the rate of the fall of the leaves, in an effort to get at the [illegible] of the weather.

A noted figure has gone, the famous Sir Percy Girouard is dead. Sir Percy made the name of Canada known throughout the empire for his work in transportation. His imperial contribution was a large one which Britain appreciated.

The cow-milking interlude at the recent carnival under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club was a master-stroke to arouse interest. Hundreds upon hundreds took sport out of it but those who milked the bossies made a real business of their undertaking to carry off the prizes.

VICTOR
By Aline Michaelis

Who is victor? Can we tell
If a man does ill or well
By the outward circumstance
In this life of change and chance?
Who is victor; he who goes
Proud in conquest over foes,
Ruthless, no desires denied,
Thrusting lesser lives aside?

Who is victor? He who gains
Peace the worldly heart disdains.
He who turns away from strife
To a fuller, fairer life.
He who conquers self and gives
Truth to every soul that lives,
He is victor. Only he Treads the hills of victory!

FUNERAL SERVICES of Sir Gilbert Parker in St. Thomas' Anglican Church Tuesday afternoon will not soon be forgotten by the many who filled that fine old church to the doors. The beautiful and impressive Anglican service for the Burial of the Dead was never more impressively rendered and while historic old St. Thomas Church has been the scene of many impressive services never has there been one before in which such a variety of interest and sentiment centred. The fact that a Prime Minister of Canada, Rt. Hon. Richard B. Bennett, was present paying tribute to the memory of an honored friend and great Canadian, together with other representatives of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, lent additional interest to a very solemn and interesting occasion. The great oak casket before the altar contained all that was mortal of one who painted word pictures of a Canada filled with romance and noble hearted men and women, a Canada not of the "Lady of the Snows" but of the dignity and graciousness of the Seigneurs of Quebec, the great-heartedness and simple ways of the Habitant, and the sturdy, robust honesty and progressiveness of all true Canadians. Fitting it was then that this lad who came out of the village of Camden East not so many years ago, took his early religious instruction in this very church, afterwards qualifying for the pulpit, but leaving the cassock for the pen to tell the Mother Country and all the world the story of a Canada they had never dreamed of, should have come back home.

Thus the lad from Camden East fulfilled his destiny, giving service of the highest order to the Empire and pleasure to many thousand readers of his books. His was "The Seats of the Mighty" to which he climbed with slow but certain steps on a ladder of books. One of the "Seats of the Mighty" for the lad from Camden East was the British Parliament and he sat there as a member of that great Mother of Parliaments. Then a grateful King recognized his services to Canada and the Empire and he was knighted, later being made a baronet. Honors heaped upon honors for this lad from the humble little village in Addington County, Ontario—and after that, the curtain. Then the lad came home, came home to old St. Thomas Church, to lie before the altar, near the great stained glass window where a group of angels represent the peace of that heavenly home which he knew they return, placed there by Sir Gilbert in loving memory of his departed wife.

Then the last journey over the hill to the quiet and peace of the mausoleum, erected by himself against this day, where his body will lie beside that of his wife, in the calm and quiet of Belleville cemetery, their requiem being the soft winds that murmur through the branches of the trees bordering Quinte waters—serene in the knowledge that the world was better for their brief sojourn here.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE.

MANY SONG HITS IN CHEVALIER'S "LOVE ME TONIGHT"

To Maurice Chevalier goes much of the credit for keeping romantic comedy alive in motion pictures. Unique among the stars, he continues to make singing pictures and to make them successfully. His new Chevalier film is like a glass of champagne — sparkling, fruity, lively—and each is from a newly opened bottle!

The star's latest, "Love Me Tonight" which opened last night before large audiences at the Belle Theatre, is another piece of romantic froth, utterly delightful from start to finish. Again beautiful Jeanette MacDonald is featured opposite Chevalier; again an unusually fine supporting cast has been assembled for the two singing leads; again the book sparkles with amusing lines, the score with lilting melodies. But there the likeness between "Love Me Tonight" and previous Chevalier films ends, for the current picture is distinguished as an individual achievement, and is, if anything, a little more subtly and fantastically amusing than its predecessors.

The hit songs—"Love Me Tonight" "Isn't It Romantic," "Mimi", "The Son-of-a-Gun Is Nothing But a Tailor" seem to be unusually catchy and melodious. Yesterday's audiences left the theatre whistling. As a matter of fact, it looks as if the songs have come to stay for some time, so frequently are they being heard over the radio or played by local dance orchestras.

Chevalier, of course, is charming as the Prince Charming who comes to the Princess Jeanette in the guise of a tailor, and Miss MacDonald is exceptionally lovely. The work of the other members of the cast is no less brilliant than that of the stars, and the whole film has been drawn together and electrified by the expert directorial hand of Rouben Mamoulian, noted theatre Guild and motion picture director.

If you would like to drop all cares for two hours of sheer enjoyment the Belle Theatre tonight or Friday matinee or evening is the place to do it!

Other featurettes with the above attraction include, Metrotone News, a splendid musical cartoon entitled "A-Hunting We Will Go," with two of the screen's most original cartoon characters, Bimbo and Koko, also another of those popular series "Screen Souvenirs" that includes in its issue a very amusing and clever drama of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" produced thirty years ago for the first time in motion pictures by the late Thomas A. Edison.

SNOWDEN GOES INTO POLITICAL WILDERNESS

London, Sept. 29.—Viscount Snowden of Ickornshaw, in severing his connection with the National Government, goes into the political wilderness, George Lansbury, parliamentary leader of the Labor party and Opposition leader in the House of Commons, indicated that in the event the former Labor Chancellor of the Exchequer endeavored to return to the party he would not be welcome.

"This has been a Tory Government from the beginning," he said, "and the man responsible for its existence, if there is one man more responsible than another, is Philip Snowden," said Mr. Lansbury.

The famed Diogenes the Cynic, remembered for his hunt for an honest man, was the son of a banker who was convicted of debasing coin.

PRESENTATION

Mrs. E. C. Moynes was hostess to the choir of Holloway Street United Church on Tuesday evening, when about forty guests gathered at her home for a surprise party in honour of Mr. Moynes' birthday. Mr. Moynes is choir leader and is held in great affection by fellow members of the organization. An interesting evening's entertainment was enjoyed under the direction of Miss Hazel Smith and Miss Irene Woodley, who had planned a very original programme. During the evening Rev. Harold B. Neal, pastor of the church, in a gracious address spoke of the splendid qualities of Mr. Moynes as a choir leader and as a friend while Mrs. S. P. Hagerman on behalf of the choir presented him with a new membership. Mr. Moynes in a few well chosen words thanked his friends for their kind remembrance. A delicious lunch was served. "Auld Mott" on behalf of those present moved a vote of thanks which was warmly seconded by Mrs. McKee. As the party came to a close all joined in singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The capital of the 88 banks in the United States in 1811 was about $42,500,000.

EAT TO GROW BEAUTIFUL

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

Famous Authority on Love and Marriage.

When was the dean of American painters talks about beautiful women, he has no stock, look and lingo: The painter in question is, of course, no other than George, De Leka, sole survivor of that famous trinity of master brushes, Leka, Hensel and Sellers, who have made art history in this country.

Mr. Leka during the height of Roman glory, Africa's west coast, slaves as important, educational, civic became a seat of learning and Ptolemy made his observatory and astronomy while Carthage gave birth to St. Augustine, who made it a Christian stronghold.

After the fall of Rome, Northern Africa fell to the state of barbarism. Years after the discovery of America the slave trade in human gold was discovered in African mines and adventurers from Holland, France and England appeared. In 1890 David Livingstone made his first of his Missionary journeys and sowed the tiny seed which has developed into such a great tree.

Miss Leona Riggs sang two appropriate solos "Dixie's Land," composed by the son of a slave, and "The Old Arky Mover."

Mrs. J. W. Cook summarized the work which is being done in Africa. In May 1930, was celebrated the Jubilee at Anglo and five hundred and forty boys and girls were performers in the cantata "Queen Esther" and overflowing part of when they moved up under the lighted cross and sang the "Hallelujah Chorus". At Camondongo there are day schools, village schools, Girls' Boarding School, infirmary for women, Girls' Bible and Vocational School. At Quessamba there are day and village schools, Girls' Boarding School and compound Kindergarten and Hospital. At Dondi, Day School and Girls' Boarding School, Village school and language study, mens school, Kindergarten and Household Economics.

Bible women have been a great help to the missionaries.

There was a splendid response to the call of the women for the World's Day of Prayer. There came from all over the country and more than five hundred women, coming from outlying districts, some carrying babies and with baskets of food on their heads. This a lesson for our own women.

After the program Mrs. Archibald conducted the business meeting, which was opened by singing Hymn 251. The secretary and treasurer read encouraging reports and the stranger's secretary reported making nine calls on strangers and two on the sick.

Mrs. Ferguson was appointed delegate to the Sectional Rally to be held in the Stone Church.

The meeting closed with Hymn 587 and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

Horses, like elephants and many other animals, have the power of sleeping while standing up.

young men were quoting the lines that went with the picture, about "A rag, and a bone, and a hank of hair."

Those lines were supposed to suggest something absolutely diabolical in the way of fascination, and it was manifestly impossible to quote them to young ladies with hour-glass figures, who tipped the scales at a hundred and sixty or more, about.

So women of all types began dieting and living on calories. Many of them, intended by nature to be round, starved themselves as they could pass for "rags, bones and hanks of hair." Even when the hanks went out completely, they continued to scale themselves down till, as Mr. Leka has said, there was nothing left but dreamakers' specifications.

The super-skinny model may be really beautiful, unless your taste ran to a well articulated skeleton, and you had an abnormal interest in bones. But bones were in, and the daughters of the rich were often hungrier than the hobo on the park bench.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who had started the craze, was getting middle aged. The last time I saw the lady who had inspired the line and bone hallucination she was distinctly fat.

African Mission Theme of Paper John St. W.M.S.

Meeting Held by Auxiliary in Lecture Room of Church

The regular monthly meeting of the John Street Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the lecture room on Wednesday afternoon, September 28th, at 3 p.m. Group leader Mrs. Robert Hall was in charge of the meeting. The devotional opened by singing Psalm 71.

Miss Florence Sharpe gave a well prepared paper on the Devotional subject, which was "Love Affection or Jesus." Rev. Mr. Hall led in prayer.

Mrs. Hall's paper on the subject for study, "Our African Mission" was most interesting.

Africa, which is over three thousand square miles long from North America, has ruthingly been named the "Dark Continent." Its total population of over one hundred and forty millions, and is 9-10 of it pagan or Christian. The country falls naturally into two parts, the Sahara desert being the dividing line. North of this, along the shores of the Mediterranean are the so-called white race. South are the dark skinned negroes and in North Africa trihes were drawn the slaves which europe, America and Asia drew most of very small as well as very large people are found in Africa. At the dawn of history Egypt was the home of the world's foremost civilization—Nineveh, Tyre, the glories of Roman glory, Africa's west coast, slaves as important, educational, civic became a seat of learning and Ptolemy made his observatory and astronomy while Carthage gave birth to St. Augustine, who made it a Christian stronghold.

After the fall of Rome, Northern Africa fell to the state of barbarism. MOTHER-IN-LAW Nags Young Bride

Young Alice Robinson had been married seven months—at first all went well, then trouble started. Her husband's name in one night to supper and, in the innocent way mothers-in-law have, made a critical remark about the table-cloth. Perhaps it wasn't just as white and gleaming as it might have been, but Alice had worked hard over that tablecloth just last washday and felt very hurt in consequence.

But Wise Mother Prevents Trouble

Next day Alice asked her own mother to come over and see her and tearfully explained her trouble. "I tried so hard to have everything looking nice—and then she said something about the cloth." Her mother looked at the tablecloth with a discerning eye. "Alice, my child, you may be trying hard, but I think you can find an easier way to get things clean. I'll tell you what I do.

"First, I use a good soap. I'd advise you to use the brand I always buy—Pearl White Napha. You'll find it a good practical laundry soap and a lot more economical than most. Soap your clothes and put them to soak overnight in cold water. You will find that, as the water temperature rises to the heat of the room, more dirt is loosened than would be if the water were cooling. In the morning, rinse your clothes thoroughly in warm water and you'll never have any more troubles with your wash."

Thousands of women have now learned this valuable laundry secret. Get the Pearl habit yourself—Pearl means efficient work in less time and at less cost. That's something to remember these days.

Over 3000 cakes of Pearl Soap are used by Canadian home wives every hour

MANAGER HOLMES ANNOUNCES SOME NOTABLE BOOKINGS

No matter what favors may be bestowed upon the lady patrons to the Capitol Theatre, the matter cause of the constant stream of large crowds to the popular downtown movie house is not prejudice.

For some months past, Manager Holmes reports the Capitol to have gained a steady increase in popularity, and the fact that the same big theatre not only offers a better programme than many theatres in Toronto, but at prices which is far in excess. This is a happy state of affairs, a state of affairs which is due in no small measure to the policy adopted by the Capitol, "Give the Public a Square Deal!"

Coming Attractions

The early part of October is a veritable harvest of excellent screen attractions at the Capitol.

The immediate bookings include: Stranger in Town," a brand new picture starring "Chic" Sale, David Manners and Ann Dvorak (pronounced Vojlac"), the latest screen find; "The Man They Couldn't Arrest," a British film mystery of the calibre we are now commencing to associate with pictures from England; "The Hour of the Dragon," Richard Dix's latest drama; "Bachelor's Affairs," with Adolphe Menjou, and "The Bird of Paradise," the most talked of picture of the year starring Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea.

With such pictures to offer Belleville's discriminative public, the "happy state of affairs" at the Capitol is bound to continue.

By public demand "Hell's Angels" returns to the Capitol on Friday and Saturday along with dark laughs in "Passport to Paradise," a thrilling comedy drama and a mystery skip. The complete performances commence at 2.45, 7.00 and 8.30.

Ben Lyon and Barbara Weeks in By Whose Hand?" mystified, thrilled and pleased the large audience last night.

Do not fail to see this railroad mystery tonight at 7.15 and 9.00.

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

IN DEPTHS OF DESPAIR

MRS. MARY JONES lives in New England. Every month was a nightmare to her. Her letter says, "I suffered periodical pains through my head, backache and female weakness."

She tried everything. Visited clinics. Nothing helped her. Finally she gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial: "I scarcely hoping it would succeed where more expensive drugs had failed."

But she was surprised. Through its tonic action, it built up her health as it lessened her pain. She says, "My backache is completely relieved."

ABOLITION OF EXCISE TAX IS KING POLICY

Fixed Preferences on British Goods Are Urged

C. N. R. STATUS

Seaforth, Ont., Sept. 29—Appealing for preservation of and adherence to the traditional policies of the Liberal Party, "with a dead ear for talk on 'non-partisanship,'" Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, last night in Seaforth before a large gathering here last night. The meeting, in a local rink, was held in support of William H. Golding, ex-Mayor of Seaforth, Liberal candidate in the by-election Huron by-election, which will be decided at the polls next Monday.

Condemning alleged attempts of the Conservative Party to fight the election on the issue of the Imperial Conference, Mr. King declared it was "an insult to the intelligence of the people" to ask them for endorsation of a document of whose contents they were ignorant.

The Liberal Chieftain defended the record of his government when in office, reiterated his faith and belief in the future of National Railways as a great national asset, and decried the "programme of destruction and falsehood" of this nationally owned utility.

He declared that all the evidence indicated the Canadian National had been in a similar condition when the Liberal Government came into power in 1921, and that it had been handed over to the succeeding Government in 1930 "a highly efficient national system." It had been kept absolutely free from political control during that period, and the same could no, he said since 1930, be declared.

Time at Hand

The Liberal leader declared that if the government had any disposition to lower tariffs, "or improve its conditions generally," as had been stated by supporters of the Conservative candidate, the time was now, and that they should never have been raised, would be the Liberal policy to reduce tariffs to the level demanded by the Dunning Budget which was submitted to the people in 1930.

The Liberal party stood for reduction of internal rates, establishment of a central reference court in Canada, 50 per cent. minimum preference on British goods, preferential entry through Canadian ports, abolition of the 3 per cent. excise tax, a National Commission on unemployment, revision of the standing rules to produce the alternate vote in single member constituencies and proportional representation in the two-member ridings, declared Mr. King.

GREET RECTOR ST. GEORGE'S

Trenton Parish Church Decorated For Event

Trenton, Sept. 29 (Special) — A reception was held in honor of the Rev. F. A. Smith, new Rector of St. George's Anglican Church, and Mrs. Smith. A good attendance of about 130 was present. Mrs. Percy Dawes, Rector's Warden, was in the church parlors. The musical program was supplied by Mrs. Spence of Belleville who rendered a solo, Mrs. Wood, Mr. V. Little and Mrs. M. P. Taylor assisting. Refreshments were served by Mrs. H. White and Miss Dorothy Greentall, the Misses Bulling and Mrs. Weir assisting. Mrs. Collins gave a delightful selection and accompanist was Miss Dorothy Galna. The choir also rendered some songs. The church was beautifully decorated by the Guild and the refreshments were served by St. George's Men's Club.

Mr. R. James made a few remarks on the welcoming address and welcomed the rector, Rev. Mr. Smith briefly addressed the congregation. The meeting was concluded about 11 o'clock.

The Trenton Cold Storage plant is now operating at full capacity, employing about 27 hands. The plant is maintaining a night shift.

Mr. Oscar Hall, fish and game supervisor of the Ottawa staff, is in town today receiving applications for tanners.

Two minors from Frankford were arrested on September 21st for the theft of $20 from an old lady of that village. They were given two years' suspended sentence. Most of the money was recovered.

Germany now has 27 political parties; Greece requires all its cancard goods for war the sale of parking and Russia pays a regular allowance to nearly all its university students.

FINANCIAL NEWS

LETHARGIC TONE ON MART

Price Declines Run From One to Three Dollars

New York, N.Y., Sept. 29 — The stock market this morning lost ground although there were minor stills which from time to time were accompanied with price declines of 1 to about 3 points. Trading appeared to be about three-quarters professional.

Bullish forces made an early effort to bid up prices, and succeeded in lifting the railroad equipment, utility and farm implement shares from fractions to more than a point. This gain failed to hold, however, and some of the recently speculative favorites were offered rather freely. Allied Chemical and Dupont were down two points at the most while General Motors, Chrysler, Curtiss Wright, Santa Fe, New York Central, Case and American Tobacco declined a point or more before steadying.

LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept 29. — Trading on the Toronto Livestock market was slow today with prices generally unchanged. No cattle market, calves weak, hogs steady and sheep and lambs slow.

Receipts were cattle 30; calves 50; hogs 50; sheep 0.

Left-overs were 1,100 head. There was no demand for cattle. Sales this morning with no sales being made up to 11.00 a.m.

Calves closed weak at around $1 for top.

Hogs unchanged at $4.50 f.o.b. for bacon at 4.75 off truck and at 5.00 off cars.

Four hundred stale lambs left from Wednesday were sold at $5.00 per cwt. for good ewes and wethers and at $3.50-4.00 for culls and bucks. Sheep sold at a top of $3.00 per cwt.

Lake Winnipeg with an area of 9,398 square miles, is the largest body of fresh water in Manitoba.

MINING LIST TURNS LOWER

Price Changes Within Very Narrow Range

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Trend turned irregularly lower on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market around noon today but interest remained light and price changes were confined to a narrow range.

International Nickel dipped 25 to $18.75 and Montreal 10 to $8.50. Falconbridge slipped 5 to 32.05 but other Lindsleys were firm. Edmonton was off a couple at $1.36 in a few sales.

Golds strengthened on the opening but developed an easier tendency during the second hour. Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves lost early leads to stand unchanged at $2.35 and $2.28 respectively, and Dome was down 10 at $12.90.

Central Patricia was active and a couple higher at 12 in the penny section. Brett-Trethewey and Smith Keora showed fractional recessions at 20 and 5, respectively. Oils were unchanged.

No Improvement

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange in the forenoon today failed to show much improvement over that of previous sessions. Stocks milled around in scattered trading and narrow price movements, and if the breadth of trading indicated any trend it was slightly lower.

Scattered issues were all off practically, with International Nickel down 3-8; Ford of Canada 3-4; Brazilian Traction 1-4, and C.P.R. 1-4. Consolidated Smelters was weak and off 2 points.

Oils and utilities were sluggish and sold off fractions. Bank stocks came out well but volume here was also at a minimum. Commerce gained a point while Dominion, Imperial and Nova Scotia sold off 1. Bell and Toronto were up 1 1-4, Huron and Erie dropped 3 and Toronto Mortgage 2.

Steel of Canada was off 1.

Palmer Hits Single With Score Tied, Bases Loaded And 2 Down to Win Game

Chilly Atmosphere Slows up Speed of Play

PLAYERS SUFFER

Campbell in Good Form With Curve Ball During Afternoon

"Stubby" Palmer's single, scoring Art. Secrey, who was perched on third base, gave the Belleville Victorias a ninth inning victory over the North Bay Pirates by the score of 7 to 6 at the Fair Grounds, Wednesday afternoon. By virtue of their win the Victorias pull up even with the Pirates in the Interclub title "E" series of the O.B.J.A. semi-finals, the winners of which will meet the Bonbrights-Interlake medalists in the Provincial finals.

When Palmer strutted to bat the score was all set for a "zilling" as the bases were loaded and two were out. Secrey was on third after getting a life on Boulay's error, he went to second while Darrah walked and got around to third on Plaggie's four ball. Both Ross and Kerr had previously aided out. After slapping a curve ball past the pitcher, the Pirates' curve ball artist, who was on the hilltop for the victors, tried to slip a fast one down the groove and "Stubby" leaned back on the bases and baffled the "horsehide" high up and far away into deep centre field for what would ordinarily have been a double, if not a three base hit, for scores the winning run. When Secrey crossed the plate with the winning counter fans and players alike gathered around to congratulate both he and Palmer the pitcher.

Weather Cool

Due to the frigid weather which prevailed the game of baseball was not as fast as has been seen previously this season. LITTLE WORLD TEAMS TIED

Third Day Brings Rest to Newark and Minneapolis Aces

(By E. Gregwy Hewlett, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newark, N. J., Sept. 29.—The Newark Bears and Minneapolis Millers, champions of the International League and American Association, respectively, had a day of rest today after their two games of Little World Series competition that gave neither team a shade of advantage.

After losing the opener by a one-sided score, the Millers landed on Newark pitching for 13 hits to win game 2 to 2, under lights last night before 18,000 fans, but today had ample opportunity to make careful plans for the seventh and final battle at Rupert Stadium tomorrow.

Seemingly at a disadvantage as Manager Ray Schalk called veteran hurlers in the opener against Don Brennan, ace of the Bears, Thursday last night shoved the gray-topped Dizzy Dean, 19-year-old Manager of League southpaw, into the mound breach. And Petty, who had his first start of the year, starting part of the 1930 season, was good enough to hold the Millers to seven hits and fuddle the young Bruins completely.

There was no question about who was the hero last night. Given only seven-hit support by his mates, Petty pitched a masterful game the whole show. He caused 11 Newark batters to ground out, fanned seven outs, walked not a man, and granted only five hits.

Harry Holaclaw, the choice of Manager Al Mamaux to start last night, was mourned for Newark's Petty—until he weakened in the fifth.

Pete Jablonowski is expected to be the mound mentor for Newark in the third game tomorrow, with Dutch Henry, another left-hander, opposing. After the game, the teams move to Minneapolis to finish the series.

LOAD OF COAL, NOT COAL LODE, FOUND

Cochrane, Sept. 29.—A small load of coal, buried in a cave-in of earth for a number of years, was discovered for a report of a "find" of black diamonds at Cochrane, and for investigation by the T. and N. O. Commission's mining engineer to proceed to the scene, only to have the orders changed when fuller enquiry revealed the true facts of the "discovery."

Star Hitting of Babe Ruth And Gehrig Unsettles Cubs And Make for Yankee Win

Yanks Take Advantage of Every Lapse in Cub Defense

41,000 ATTEND

The Score of 12-6 Gives Amer. League Champs. a Real Start

(By Edward J. Neil)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 29—Thanks to an old established act, as depend-able for drama, thrills, and the suspense of virtue as was "East Lynne" back in the gas-lit days, the Yankees were booming again along the victory trail today, possessors of their ninth straight world series triumph.

Just when the skies were darkest in more ways than one, when it seemed as though Guy Bush was well on the way to breaking up an act that's been through it before post-season championship struggles of 1926, 1927 and 1928, the team of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig came in their might, smote the transgressors hip and thigh, and restored the morale of the Chicago Cubs in the opening game of the world series.

At the end of a stormy day, next to the poorest in the matter of attendance a Yankee world series ever has known a day that started in a rain storm and ended in a blinding sunshine. The score, stood 12 to 6 in favor of the American League champions. But the final score failed to portray the gaudy return to world series play of the heroes of 1927 and 1928, when the Yankees won four straight from the Pirates and Cardinals in eight successive games.

First Run by Ruth.

It was Ruth, just recovered from a mild attack of appendicitis, who marched to bat in the first inning with the Cubs leading 2 to 0, and Root, Combs, the first Yankee runner then had scored on base, resting on second through the meritless offices of a walk and an infield out.

The Babe smashed a long single to right and the grey haired Kenesaw moonshiner, Grover Cleveland Gehrig tramped to the plate. The count reached three and two. He held him for a called third strike "screw" ball on the outside corner and then let a fast one bite into the deep reaches of the right field stands. Two runs, two hits and two errors had been added to the Yankee total.

That home run smash unsettled Ruth, ting gift of the Cub curvers, and that had pranced into battle, cocky and confident, for a quick one run lead off Burley Charley Ruffing and that of the Yankee mound mainstay pitchers. Bush lost his control and his stuff. His mates faltered behind him, and in the space of an hour to its inevitable conclusion, a 6-6 ding-dong duel of duel, the two friends busting for the fun of it. Ruth and Gehrig's heroic work done, faded into the background of the general proceedings.

Only 41,450 spectators, far under the record for world series attendance set at 63,000 by the Yankees in 1926, braved a chilly rainy afternoon and the conflicting showers that delayed the start of the opening game of the series, but the the highly favored Yankees teas away to an impressive start.

TOO FAT TO LACE HIS SHOES

Sends His Weight Tickets

TO SHOW 50 LBS. HAS GONE NOW

It was quite by chance that this man found the way to reduce his enormous load of excess fat. He had pains in his legs and took Kruschen as a remedy. The soon found he was losing fat as well as pain.

"The reason that I first purchased Kruschen Salts," he writes, "was because both my legs used to swell after I had been on my feet each day, and were very painful from the ankles up to the knee. I am pleased to say that they are getting better every day, I also weighed about 320 lbs., and I had trouble to lace my own shoes. Now, as you can see by the enclosed weight tickets, I have got down to 260 lbs. I have only taken Kruschen Salts in my tea, and have hardly studied what I have eaten. My age is 57 years, and my height 5-ft. 7-in."—E.S.

Two months later he says :— "Since I last wrote you I have taken Cops. I am now down to 240 lbs. I can hardly realise what great benefit I have received from Kruschen Salts. My legs do not swell at all, and I feel better in health, and can move about as well as ever I did. To think that I have lost 80 lbs. in seven months—and all for so little cost—it is wonderful. 7 USES

DISREGARDING the above order entirely, write down these seven uses in what you think is the order of their popularity in the average home. Study the uses and figure out for yourself what is likely to be the popular order.

Send your entry to us (see conditions below) to be included in our $2,500.00 Prize Competition. The use you put first will be given a score of 7 points; the use you put second will be given 6 points; the use you put third will be given 5 points; the use you put fourth will be given 4 points; your fifth choice will be given 3 points; your sixth choice will receive 2 points and your seventh or last choice, 1 point.

Each and every entry received will be treated in exactly the same way. When the Competition closes (which will be November 15th, 1932) the totals from all entries will be added up and the use securing the highest number of points will be adjudged the most popular one. The use scoring the second highest number of points will be adjudged the second most popular use. The use securing the third highest number of points will receive third place and so on down the line.

The $2,500.00 in cash prizes will be awarded to those who have listed all seven uses in the order nearest to the order determined by popular vote.

How to Enter the Contest

Simply remove the label from a tin of Fry's Breakfast Cocoa (either a one-pound or half-pound size) and write on the back of it the seven uses in the order of your choice and number them accordingly. Below that write your name and address plainly in printed characters. Then mail your entry to Dept. C, J. S. FRY & SONS (Canada) Limited, 2025 Masson Street, Montreal.

You may send in as many different entries as you wish but each entry must be on a separate Fry's Breakfast Cocoa label.

Rules of Contest

The first prize, $500 in cash, will be awarded to the person listing all seven uses in the order found to be the winning order. Or, in the event that no one lists all seven uses correctly, the money will be paid to the person who lists the greatest number of uses correctly.

If two persons list all seven uses correctly, the first and second prizes will be pooled and divided evenly. If three or more list them correctly, the grand prizes will be pooled and divided amongst the winners. Otherwise, the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh Prizes will be awarded to the persons coming nearest to the correct order after the First Prize winner.

The 50 prizes of $5.00 each will be awarded to the 50 persons coming next nearest to being correct after the grand prizes have been awarded. The 200 prizes of $2.00 each will be awarded in a similar way, to the persons whose entries next nearest correct.

This Competition is open only to residents of Canada, Employees of the FRY Company are barred.

The contest will close November 15th and no entries will be considered if postmarked after that date. Prize Winners will be announced in this paper on December 15th and cheques will be mailed at once.

Everyone Has an Equal Chance

No individual can possibly figure out in advance just what the final order of the seven uses will be. This can only be determined by popular vote. Thus your chance of winning a prize is just as good as any.

This Thing Called Love

By N. Florence Leech

John Williams sat lonely on a tapestry-covered chair in the foyer of Miller's Hotel, waiting for Grace. He felt nervous, somewhat puzzled for Grace had asked him not this cold spring afternoon, he intended to ask her to be his wife.

John had played around with half a dozen girls since he met Grace eighteen months ago, but he always returned to her; and suddenly he realized that his desire to be with her, his thinking of her by day and dreaming of her by night, must be what the crooners call I—love. He grinned foolishly, then started as he heard his name.

"Hello!" it was Lola Eaton sat down in the chair next to his. "Waiting for your date?"

"Oh, Lola," he answered; "Yes, I'm waiting for Grace. She's late."

"I'm hunching with Trudy," Lola informed him. "I'm glad I'm early," her dark eyes smothered the boy at her side.

John stirred uneasily. There was something disturbing about Lola. She walked and talked as though in a play. And she looked like a boy, too—like she was in the air and got her man. He wondered modestly how much she really liked him. Of course it didn't matter now that he was going to marry Grace, but they were frankly crazy about him.

Lola was quiet suddenly, and he listened to the cadence of her soft, rich voice pacing him. "I'm glad I'm to be married soon." She broke off suddenly and laughed. "There's Dusky," she said.

"Dusky?" His eyes followed her gaze, and he saw Grace standing just inside the wide doors. Now why he was glad that he wasn't married as he scrambled to his feet. He didn't understand the fact but being conscious of a purpose; but prompted by Lola's faintly amused comment, he regarded her with a heart critically. The small smart hat looked droll on her, because her brown hair hung below it in Six Hopkins bobs, and her cheeks were unbelievably coal, fell forward like awkward wings, and she unbelievably bow-legged. At that instant she saw him, and a smile, decidedly broad and eager, brightened her face.

Their luncheon proceeded cheerfully enough, but the glamour of the day had faded. Doubt had overtaken John's mind, and he pondered John's mind, and he pondered John's mind, and he pondered

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou Brookman

CHAPTER 1.

The green roadster cutting its way, sleek and ribbon-like, down the Boulevard came to an abrupt, jolting stop at the intersection with Twenty-fourth street.

Cherry Dixon's chin rose to meet the sweep of the cold wind. Flottering ends of a coral scarf escaped from her throat to do a mad dance over one shoulder. It was one of those days in early April when brilliant sunshine showered down on the world without warming it. The pale gold radiance seemed almost to mock the air more biting. But it was spring sunshine, spring air and the combination was irresistible.

Cherry crooked her wrist for a quick glance at a watch dial. Only 1:10 now. She was not due for 30 minutes. There was plenty of time—oh plenty! to reach the Wellington for her 1:30 engagement. She had known all along that she was time enough. Little danger that today of all days she would be late!

Another halt for traffic lights and then on again. Cherry's impatience was gone. What a day it was to be 19, to know the things that was as becoming as it was new, to be on her way to meet an exciting young man and to know—at least to know almost—that he cared as much about the meeting as she did!

Warm color that could not have been accounted for by the April wind crept into Cherry Dixon's cheeks. A chance observer, feminine, would have been almost sure to think "Lucky girl!" at sight of Cherry, so pretty, so youthful, at the wheel of her expensive roadster. A chance observer, masculine, would have been almost sure to think, "Lucky beak to know a girl like that!"

Well, Cherry thought that she was lucky. For none of the reasons chance observers might have cited however.

It had been the greatest luck in the world, surely, that for the second time in a week she was to see Dan Phillips. Oh, it had been simple to manage, telling Mother about the Guild committee meeting and to drive into town alone. There had been a committee meeting—until Gretchen postponed it. For that matter, what other girl of 19 would have to explain where she was going and with whom if the notion to take a drive at midday happened to strike her?

The roadster reached the viaduct and was swept into the slow stream of east-bound travel.

Street—Wellington's busiest thoroughfare, boasting three buildings 20 stories high—the flash of green was almost lost in the crush of taxicabs, trucks, limousines and small wheezing vehicles.

There was no time now to try to justify her reception, no time for day dreams. The shrill, authoritative blast of an officer's whistle sent the swarming mass ahead. The girl, in the green car managed expertly to keep abreast of the current. Three blocks more and the roadster swerved to the curb before the Hotel Wellington.

Cherry stepped out, surrendered the car to a doorman and entered the gray stone building. She crossed the lobby and mounted the broad stairway leading to the mezzanine.

Maude Cassidy, whose glowing Italian curls and blue eyes made the cigar stand a highly decorative corner of the lobby, tapped the arm of her friend, Jos. Kampschmidt, who was leaning over the glass surface of the counter.

"Wait—look what blew in!" Maude whispered in a tone that belied her indifferent gaze.

Kampschmidt concentrated on the slim figure ascending the stairway. "Some baby!" he said casually. "Who is she?"

"Some baby's right!" Maude commented. "What I wouldn't give for the dough her old man's got! Cherry Dixon—that's her name. Lives out in Sherwood Heights in one of those swell houses with a yard around it as big as a farm. I've seen her picture on the society pages. Most of the time she's away in Europe or at some swell school or something. Gosh—some people have all the luck!"

"How about me, Maxie? Do I get a break this day or no, you going to another of your sixteenth cousin's weddings?"

Maxie grinned. "You can call me," she said. "About eight o'clock. There's a new orchestra at the Crystal Ballroom."

Whereupon Miss Cassidy and her friend forgot their interest in Cherry Dixon for more personal subjects.

It was 20 minutes after Cherry Dixon's arrival that a tall young man strode into the Wellington lobby. He wore a gray suit and carried a topcoat. His gray felt was pushed at an angle just slightly rakish. Broad shoulders, rather angular. Not a handsome young man—but an attractive one.

In a dozen strides he had reached the stairway. Someone sang out, "Hi! Phillips!" Just before he rounded the bend of the stairs. The young man turned, waved in salute and continued on his way.

The mezzanine floor of the Hotel Wellington was a rather narrow gallery running the length of the Twelfth street side of the building. It was thickly carpeted and furnished in shades of wood green, bronze and ivory. Groups of over-stuffed chairs, benches and four high-backed lounges were arranged near the iron rail, telling in overlooking the first floor. Small desks and chairs stood beside the wall. The lighting was a dim beam—for the windows shut out the daylight and only small desk lamps supplemented it.

The young man in gray gained the top step and looked about. None of the persons in sight seemed to interest him. There was a stout man in dark-rimmed spectacles writing at the nearest desk. Farther on two matrons, engaged in conversation, one of them gesticulating emphatically. At the extreme end of the gallery a small boy was bobbing about after a mechanical toy.

The young man stepped forward uncertainly. All at once he caught sight of a large shoulder nearly hidden by the sides of a wing-backed chair. He made for that chair.

"So there you are!"

"Oh, Dan—"

"Cherry!"

Brown eyes laughed up at gray ones. The girl was prettier when she smiled. The green velour of the chair was a perfect background for her coloring. The small, rather oval face was creamy ivory except where tinges or rose burned through on each cheek. Curling lashes made the dark eyes darker. Her lips were crimson, possibly explained by the silver vanity case she held. Nature had designed those lips a trifle wide but the effect was charming.

Any expert would have said, too, that Cherry Dixon's nose was a fraction short of classic standards. Somehow the defect increased instead of detracted from the piquant beauty.

The tilted brim of her close fitting hat revealed a crescent-shape of dark hair over one temple. Except for the brown hat and coral scarf Cherry was entirely in beige—beige suit and sweater, beige pumps and cobweb hose, gloves and even a purse of the same shade. The tone suited her perfectly.

Dan Phillips pulled the nearest chair nearer and swung into it.

"A thousand pardons if I'm late!" he said. "I had three clocks and a watch and I set 'em all—"

"But you're not late. You're five minutes ahead of time. See? Cherry pointed to the tiny oblong dial on the platinum band, recorded 25 minutes past one. "I—I came in early for some errands and finished them sooner than I expected," she added hastily. "What I really am Miss Cherry Dixon that day, but surely she must know from your guessing at her eagerness.

"Then it's all right. Of course the three clocks each keep different time and of course I'm not late, me, Miss Dixon, but I've got to stop right here and tell you that of all God's fairest creatures you are the prettiest, the most utterly devastating—"

"Please, Mr. Phillips!" The cheeks were crimson but the girl's eyes were laughing.

"Mr. Phillips? I thought it was going to be 'Dan' from now on?"

"Well then, Dan stop it. You're making me blush!"

"If I ever heard blasphemy—" Covering and cuttlefish! Why, my dear young woman, I'd as soon cut off my right arm. What I really meant to say was that the prettiest girl in the world is looking prettier than she has any right to look. What's going to come of this, I'd like to know? Oh, you know. These old eyes won't stand it. You can't keep getting more beautiful every time I see you!"

Cherry rose to meet the teasing. She said demurely, 'Sorry sir, You can always look away, you know."

"But, that's just what I can't do—and don't want to do. Say, are you as hungry as I am?"

The abrupt change of subject made the girl laugh. "Perhaps," she said. "Positively perishing!"

"Then let's find food!" Phillips snapped two fingers together with a resounding crack and was on his feet. Cherry arose and for an instant they stood there, the girl's head only a little above the youth's shoulder. Her eyes were shining in light of happiness. The young man's face sobered. He touched her arm lightly together they moved toward the stairs.

Five minutes later they faced each other across a narrow table in the hotel's luxe and blue dining room. Phillips had finished giving the order.

"And how did you improve the shining morning hours?" he asked.

"Oh, a couple of things. Mother's having a small tea next week and I helped with the invitations. Then some dresses came and when I got home until after one o'clock. I tried them on they were all wrong and I had to telephone about sending them back and arrange for refitting. After that Sarah gave me a shampoo and a manicure and—it's 'ge— oh, yes, I called Aunt Mary to see if she wanted some concert tickets and she talked half an hour. She always does. That's all, I guess."

"The life of the idle rich!" Dan Phillips sighed with mock sympathy. "Lord—you must be frazzled."

"How about yourself? What kind of a busy bee have you been?"

"Shall I tell you?" Phillips leaned forward, grinning. "Rolled out of bed at exactly 12 o'clock—according to my four time-pieces. I looked in them all, added what the minute hands said, subtracted the hour multiplied, took the square root and then called the operator down stairs. She told me it was 12 o'clock. The first thing I knew—"

"That's the latest kind of morning I ever heard of."

"True enough," Phillips agreed. "But listen, child. Old Uncle Daniel was out until 2.30 this a.m. looking for that kidnapped woman. Did I find her? Did I not? Was I stolen? Oh—did you find him?"

"No, unfortunately! Just as I was leaving the office last night a phone rip came in and Bates told me to hop on it. Woman telephoned the kid had been seen out near Somerset. I went out with a couple of detectives. Covered every square foot of the damned place. Don't suppose you've ever been to Somerset? Lucky for you, child! Anyhow it was just another evening wasted and the esteemed Wellington News none the better for it. We didn't get back into town until after one o'clock."

"And they haven't found the little boy?"

"Not according to the noon edition. Personally, I don't think they ever will."

"Oh, but I hope they do! I was so sorry for that poor mother when I read about it. The way she'd been planning her birthday party and the new tricycle she'd bought. Simply dreadful!"

"Sure, it's hard on the parents. Nice people, too. But it's been a week and there hasn't been a single clew that led anywhere."

The waiter set glass-doomed platters before them. Sweet-bread patty and asparagus for Cherry. A roast and vegetables for Dan.

"Coffee now, sir?" the waiter asked.

They decided to have the coffee later. The girl broke a bit of Melba toast and buttered it.

"When you talk about the places you go and people you see," she said, "I'm so envious. It must be wonderful to be at the centre of things, always right there when something exciting is happening! It must be thrilling."

"Some times," Phillips agreed. "Most of the time though it's just pounding sidewalks or sitting around waiting for something to happen. I've had a friend, a real story except the Ladies case for a week. You get to feel so ill."

"But the thrill of seeing your name in the by-line of a column—and on the front page, too! That must be wonderful!"

Phillips smiled. "It was," he said, "four years ago. The day I got my first by-line you'd have thought someone had just handed me a fortune-bank. It was—it was in Kansas City—Kansas, not Missouri. As I remember, it wasn't a bad story I'd written either."

CALLS MUCH CHURCH BUILDING SOP TO PRIDE

Too Much Money Spent on Churches Dr. W. Gifford Says is Energy Wasted

Complains Money Spent Therein Instead of in Missions

WRONG DIRECTION

Intensive Erection of Churches is Condemned

HAMILTON, Sept. 30.— At the General Council of the United Church today, Rev. Dr. W. A. Gifford of Montreal, caused considerable stir in the Assembly when he declared that too much money was spent in church buildings. In his city, he asserted $200,000 had been invested in buildings when this sum could have been saved and devoted to missionary work. "The devotion of our people in building churches is wonderful but it is misdirected," said Professor Gifford. He described intensive erection of churches as "putting money into bricks and mortar as sops to our own pride".

INAGGRESSIVE PRICE MARKET

Wobbly Tone in New York Action Listless

New York, Sept. 30.—The Stock Market wobbled uncertainly today but trading was still quiet.

A definite air of confidence fell on Public Utility, Railroad and Chemical Company issues which figured in fairly active recent speculation but the advances failed to appear from time to time, but they were half-hearted and failed to hold. Rails, however, was not aggressive and the market appeared to drift into a waiting mood rather than actual pressure. Loses of 1 to points covered in American Waterworks, American Telephone, North American, Consolidated Oil, Public Service of New Jersey and American Power and Light. Detroit Edison was down 2. Declines of 1-2 or 2 also appeared in Santa Fe, Eastman, Union Pacific and others.

Motors, oil and copper stocks showed good resistance, although they were carried down fractionally in the rest of the market.

National Biscuit, Corn Products, American Tobacco B., Johns Manville, American Can, Westinghouse and Westvaco were off by moderate selling of farm equipment shares. Case was down 2 and Harvester about a point.

TIME FLIES FROM CRIME TO PRISON

Justice Works Just as Quickly Today

London, Ont., Sept. 30.—Take the case of David Mason, 62, as an example of how quickly justice can move.

Mason was arrested today charged with selling liquor in the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

Exactly 60 minutes after he had been lodged in a police station cell he pleaded guilty to the possession of wine without a permit and was fined $100 with the option of three months in jail.

KING'S ESTATE RENTS ARE DOWN

London, Sept. 30 (C.P. Cable) — The King has reduced by 20 per cent. the rents for allotments of the Sandringham estate. One year ago the King took over the adjoining farm when 20 per cent. reduction was forthcoming and it will now be used by 60 working men who will hold the allotments by tenancies let by the King personally at $4 an acre.

MUST SETTLE ARMS PROBLEM

Germany Will Only Then Participate in Conference

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Von Neurath returning from Geneva today said he left the statesmen there in no doubt that Germany will not participate in the disarmament Conference until the matter of equality of arms is settled beyond dispute.

From Italian delegate he gathered that the Government at Rome shows great understanding for the German equality demand, he said.

Mr. Henderson (Chairman of the Conference) is making great efforts to bring about an understanding," said the Foreign Minister. "But I doubt whether he will succeed."

NEVER HEARD HUSBAND WENT OVER NIAGARA

Wife Suing For Divorce Says He Started Out 2 Years Ago

NO NEWS OF HIM

Judge Gives Wife Decree Against Husband For Desertion

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30.— Two years is a long time when the news comes from Niagara Falls in a barrel, Mrs. Beatrice Donnelly charged in a bill for divorce that her husband, Owen, left home two years ago last April, saying he was going over the falls in a barrel. The court granted the request for reports of the exploit, but none came.

She waited two years before filing the suit. Yesterday Judge Charles A. Williams gave her a decree. The charge was desertion.

PREMIER'S EYE ON BACKDOOR

Manchester Guardian's View of Cabinet Change

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable)—"The last shreds of credit still clinging to the framework of the National Government have been torn from it by the Manchester Guardian of the fate of Free Trade Protagonists," declares Ida Macdonald, Guardian leading Liberal Organ, in editorial comment on the recent cabinet changes and members of the ministry.

The Conservative majority of the Government has deliberately chosen the path of Nationalist Imperialism instead of that of leadership in the world recovery, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's silence on the tariffs and Ottawa agreements suggests he still keeps his eye on the backdoor. The coming weeks will determine all details, however, and others besides the Prime Minister will have to decide where they stand," the Guardian declared.

"The Ottawa agreements are an insult to the world on the eve of the World Economic Conference to turn its back on Economic Nationalism which since the war has brought such ruinous trending trade," writes Mr. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Dominion Secretary, in equally forthrightly organ.

The London Star Liberal newspaper, says the Liberals are being as Patriotic leaving the "National" Government as they were in entering it. There should not be a breach of unity created by the suspicion of disloyalty.

UNNAMED MEN HELD FOR ASSASSINATIONS

Names of Quartette Not Disclosed by the Police

Havana, Sept. 30 (AP)—Four unnamed men were held by police today for questioning concerning the slaying of Dr. Clemente Vasquez Bermudez, Cuban Liberal leader, late, early this week. R. Octavio Zubizarreta, Cuban Secret Service chief, who announced last night the arrests had been made said the men would be charged of having assassinated the prominent Liberal leader, who was shot down by a spray of bullets from an automobile which entered and left the Vasquez home.

Information that led to the arrests, it was understood, would have been given police by Luis Arteaga, Cuban Foreign Belt, Havana Register of Deeds.

The Acebo Cup, for which noted European auto drivers raced at Pershing Field, recently, was stolen just before the contest.

CHURCH COUNCIL CHEERS NEWS CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY GIVES U. C. MINISTER DEGREE

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP)—Announcement to the General Council of the United Church today that Dr. Lorne Pierce, United Church Minister, had been tendered the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature by Laval University, Montreal, was greeted with great applause by the assembled clergy and laymen.

Rev. D. M. Solandt of Toronto, who made the announcement, said Dr. Pierce had received the degree as an expression of appreciation of his attitude toward French-Canada. He was the second Protestant so honored in the history of Laval.

Church Colleges Not to Close Conference Board Decides

No Reduction in Staff of Queens and Two Others

GUARD EXPENSES

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 30— The proposal of retrenchment in church expenditures, considered before the United Church Commissioners assembled here for their fifth quarterly meeting, reached the floor of the council for the first time today when the annual committee on economy brought down its report.

The committee, headed by A. E. Ames, Toronto, recognized that activities of church officers had been already cut to an "irreducible minimum" and found a way to effect retrenchment in a general curtailment of administration costs that would mean reducing the number of general church boards from six to four and dispensing with the services of many board members, superintendents and clerical secretaries.

The suggestion that some of the church colleges should be closed was not accepted by the theological college's section of the committee and this decision will forestall the controversy that has stirred the integrity of the colleges. But while the committee says that the colleges should carry on, it advises the strictest economy in expenditures and the reference to general council of any college's plan involving the appointment of professorial chairs, appointment of any staff members and fixing of any salary scale.

Caution Is Urged

Dealing with the particular colleges, the committee recommends that there should be no reduction in staffs at Queen's University, Kingston, and Pine Hill College, Athens, Sept. 30 (AP) — The continued and the buried corpses count of victims of the week's of earthquakes at Chalcidice, set yesterday at 2,000, was greatly outlined to rise today as many dead and wounded were found under debris ner crumbled ruins in the city.

Meanwhile, the shocks continued at Salonika and those in the neighbored people spent the night in the open air. Geologists said the earthquakes at Chalcidice and Salonika had the same origin.

Survivors of the Chalcidice shock were the lighthouse keeper with his staying off Dr. Clemente Vasquez family, who escaped in a rowboat Bermudez, Cuban Liberal leader, early this week. R. Octavio Zubizarreta, Cuban Secret Service chief, who announced last night the arrests had been made said the men would be charged of having assassinated the prominent Liberal leader, who was shot down by a spray of bullets from an automobile which entered and left the Vasquez home.

Information that led to the arrests, it was understood, would have been given police by Luis Arteaga, Cuban Foreign Belt, Havana Register of Deeds.

Snake Solves Robbery Mystery

Florence, Ala., Sept. 30—Police credit a rattlesnake with having solved a mysterious robbery. A safe was looted in a store of the two cities. Work in Progress For Past Two Weeks is Halted

Lewes, Del., Sept. 29—Efforts to salvage an estimated $10,000,000 worth of doubloons and stones of eight and gems that went down with the British sloop De Braak, 139 years ago were suspended today because of a storm. One of the salvaging ships, the Katie Dunn, burned to the water line last night.

IL DUCE WILL BE WAR CHIEF

Will Assume Ministry of Defence Himself

Rome, Sept. 30—(AP)—Unconfirmed reports today said Premier Mussolini had decided to take over the Ministry of Defense himself, including under it control of the air, war and navy departments, all of which posts he has previously held.

He has often been reported considering such a move, but always has postponed it. Last spring when the possibility was rumored, Il Duce was understood to have presented the post to King Victor Emmanuel. The King was reported to have approved it, but he also advocated that a military man hold the portfolio, while Mussolini preferred a civilian.

At that time Il Duce did not consider taking the portfolio himself. However today's reports said he had decided to assume the task personally and that, therefore, the King would not object.

Brothers, Charged with Murder, Near Blows in Joliette Courthouse

JOLIETTE, Que., Sept. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—Two brothers charged with the murder of their sister-in-law and a woman who had been friendly to both, Mrs. Joseph Mondor, nearly came to blows in the little court house at St. Damien today.

The crowded court room was tense as Alphonse Preville, himself to be tried for the woman's murder next week, took the stand to testify against his brother Albert whose trial is in its third day.

Alphonse swore that on January 14 the day the murder occurred he cut from car to car and her body lay in his sleigh. Then Albert struck him across the face with a shovel and threatened to bury Alphonse in the snow with the woman when she met her death. Alphonse claimed they were afraid from the prisoners box, only to be restrained by court officials and constables.

As his brother told of hearing two shots in the Mondor home after he had gone outside and of Albert having been come out of the house 10 minutes later wielding a long blood-covered knife, Albert muttered to himself and glared at his brother. Alphonse testified that Albert entered the house previously. Albert had a revolver and knife hanging in the thigh. At the time he jumped from the sleigh wounded. Alphonse testified, the woman was unharmed.

HURLS MACE CALLS IT SIGN OF HYPOCRISY

Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 30— Members of the Parliament of Northern Ireland were surprised today when John Beattie, only Socialist in the House, picked up the mace, emblem of authority, and threw it across the room, declaring it was "only an emblem of hypocrisy".

Beattie was angered at a ruling of the Speaker, one of the salvaging ships, the Katie Dunn, burned to the water line last night.

"Out of the road with this!" he shouted as he grasped the mace and threw it across the floor. "It is only an emblem of hypocrisy. I will not stand here and allow this sort of thing to continue."

Beattie was ordered off the floor. The sergeant-at-arms restored order and the mace was replaced in its original position.

Cars Brought to Hamilton to be Remodelled, Sold Elsewhere

TRIO REMANDED

One of Cars Had Been Sold For 75 Dollars

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 30—Months of work on the part of the Hamilton police department was crowned with success in police court this morning when three Hamilton men, Edward Freeman, Edward Blasdell and Howard Patterson pleaded guilty to seven charges of stealing automobiles.

With the conviction of the three men, police declare that they have broken up a car stealing business which had reached unprecedented proportions during the past summer. For months automobiles have been vanishing from Hamilton, not to be recovered a few days later, but to disappear apparently forever. With today's convictions, the mystery has been solved.

Among the thefts traced to the three men were the theft of a car owned by E. F. Day, Hamilton on August 17 and the theft of a car owned by the Packard Motor Sales on September 3. This automobile was recovered in Dunnville.

A third theft was that of Abraham Poulter's car, which was later found in Mount Pleasant where it had been sold to Albert Barton for $75. A car owned by Robert Shupson was recovered in a local garage. One stolen from Frank Radigan, Hamilton, was recovered in Dunnville.

Police declare that cars were brought to this city to be re-registered and sold from Toronto, Galt and London. They intimate that the men will be wanted in Toronto.

Magistrate Burbidge remanded the trio for further investigation.

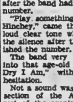
SEEMED TO KNOW THAT ANCIENT AIR

Following several selections which were rendered by the Belleville Municipal Band at the Arena Thursday evening previous to the wrestling bouts which were about to take place, a gentleman sitting in one of the back tiers who had distinguished himself by his vocal efforts long before the bouts took place, stood up in his seat just after the band had finished a march number.



"Play something we all know, Hinchey," came the request in a loud clear tone which will through the silence after the band had finished the number.

The band very obligingly broke into that age-old refrain: "How Dry I Am," without a moment's hesitation.

Not a sound was heard from that section of the Arena during the rest of the evening.

FROST HEAVY FOR SEASON

Gardeners Tell of Damage As Very Great Last Night

In one of the heaviest frosts to have visited this district of years, hundreds of dollars damage is believed to have been done by the early visitation Friday morning, which has been totally unlooked for by commercial gardeners of this district who were today talking about all the damage done growing things they were powerless to protect. Although the frost was severe in this immediate section alone, reports from other centres throughout the county, particularly in the western sections, show that the visitation was general, and that damage was also incurred in those districts, too.

On the farm of Mr. Fred Mossman, market gardener, Thurlow, damage was particularly heavy among cucumbers, tomatoes and other vegetables whose vines had been nipped, that section reports indicate that the full severity of the wintry touch had been felt. Mr. W. H. Bacon, market gardener, also of Thurlow, escaped comparatively light. Most of his vines had been picked, root vegetables which remained in the ground were touched, but it is believed that they will escape the more severe effects. Probably the heaviest frost of all was felt further back in the county where the protective influence of the waters of the Bay of Quinte had not been able to temper its severity. From many points reaching near the tip of the county, heavy damage was not done is accounted for by the fact that according to those districts it is relatively light. Hail and a few sprinkles of snow which fell in this section did little harm, according to farmers.

Although snow and hail in this section fell during the afternoon with sufficient strength to be noticeable, the greatest fall was in the district of Marmora and throughout that section of the country. So heavy and thick was the fall that in many instances motorists using the roads found their windshield wipers unable to cope with the heavy flakes as of snow which gathered on the glass. Many cars had to stop by the road and wait until the down fall was over. Snow which followed the hail was said to have covered the ground in some spots to a depth of three inches.

Although considerable damage was done by early nipping of the county by the heavy frost which descended without warning over the district early Thursday evening, and several gardens were ruined by the fringe of the city, house plants which had been left standing all by corners on various streets beside the limits were not materially harmed. Even the late bushes which have been in heavy bloom during the past week emerged as fresh as ever.

ACCIDENT BARELY AVOIDED AS WHEEL SINKS IN EARTH

Tweed.—On Tuesday evening while driving along Victoria Street in the village, Mrs. Clancy Carleton narrowly escaped serious injury. A day or two previously the Dominion Store had been connected up with the town water system and the excavation had been filled in. The heavy rain during the evening had softened the earth to such an extent in the middle of the street with the result that as Mr. Carleton drove over it one front wheel dropped in. The motion of the car carried the front wheel out of the hole but the rear wheel dropped into the opening. Fortunately Mr. Carleton was driving slowly at the time or the car would probably have overturned. It is understood that the village council is assuming financial responsibility for the damage to the car.

FREIGHTER ON ROCK IN PAC.

Is Being Pounded to Pieces by Heavy Gale

CREW OF 35

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 30.—The fate of the freighter Nevada's crew of 35 was unknown Thursday as a westerly gale pounded their ship to pieces on the rocks of a nearly North Pacific island and kept another vessel from lending aid.

Its small ship driven back by heavy swells, the Japanese freighter Oregon Maru stood helplessly by and watched the seas smash the 415- foot craft. The Oregon Maru located the Nevada late Wednesday after a 18-hour search.

Meanwhile the mail liner President Madison raced to the scene of Amatignak Island in the middle Aleutian group—expecting to arrive at daylight (about 10 a.m., Pacific Standard Time).

The four men were seen on the rocks of the island by the small boat from the Oregon Maru while it was trying to reach shore. The messages gave no indication as to whether anyone was seen on the pinioned ship, or whether others of the crew later reached shore.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 30.—Provincial police are investigating the story of Verna Vincent, 13, that a man she did not know forced her at the point of a pistol; to shoot herself with a gun belonging to her father.

As the man fled from the house, she said, she fired at him. She is in a hospital here, said by physicians to have an even chance to recover from a wound in her side.

The girl told police the stranger said: "Deserve" sent him to kill her but that she could "do the job yourself."

Neighbor in suburban Remington Park said they heard no shots but that a man and a woman had driven to the house about an hour before the girl was found wounded.

Voters Digest Action to Save Wheat Farmers

New York, Sept. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—United States voters digested Thursday a relief grant by President Herbert Hoover to wheat farmers facing mortgage foreclosures, and a tactful, simultaneous attack by the Republican high command on the Democratic agricultural policy.

The President directed only 25 per cent. was to be accepted of the loans due from farmers who borrowed millions of Finance Corporation funds made available for crop production. He said Congress would be asked to enact a definite extension of the temporary moratorium he felt compelled to declare on the balance of the borrowings because of present low wheat prices.

COMPLETE SKELETON OF HORLITOSAURUS

Billings, Mont., Sept. 30.—Barnum Brown, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, has announced the discovery of the most complete skeleton of a hadrosaur, or a branch of the Dinosaur family, so rare its existence was established only through a few bone fragments and plates unearthed a few years ago.

Brown said the skeleton was recovered from the lower cretaceous formation of the Crow Indian reservation 50 miles southeast of here. The curator said he regards the discovery as the "most important made by any expedition from the museum by recent years and probably the outstanding one of the year by any expedition in this country."

SUSPECT HELD IN LINDBERGH CASE

Police Not Interested

Harrisburg, Ill., Sept. 30.—On the strength of an anonymous letter received by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Illinois police last night were holding Dennis Spencer, 30-year-old photographer, in jail here as a suspect in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

New Jersey authorities said they had no interest in Lawrence, however, and Col. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of New Jersey police, police refused to send an investigator to Harrisburg to question Lawrence.

WINTRY BLAST AND PEACHES

Only Rugged Winter is Not Ideal For Life of Tree

Peach jam, golden peach preserves, or even raw peaches sliced for dessert, and served with cream, would not be an imaginative dream or a mere idle fancy in this district but an actual reality—if some way could be devised to temper the wintry blasts that shovel and whistle over this territory in February.

That, according to Mr. A. Johnson, Dominion seed inspector for this district, is the only reason why there are not more peach trees grown in this district, such as the one owned by Mr. Arthur Gael, West Bridge Street, who garnered enough from one tree in his back yard peach orchard to last the family all winter.

"Peach trees can't stand the gaff," remarked Johnson. "They can't stand a Hastings County winter. Everything else is ideal for their propagation and growth. Summer climate is perfect, soil is good and other conditions are very favorable, but when that below zero frost nips them, then the axe is the only thing seems to try right up. Until a hardier tree is produced, Hastings County will have to do without peach pie unless paying a scar prohibitive enough to warrant it."

A fig for those who already own one or two in the back yard: Wrap some heavy sacks around the tree trunk before the severe winter commences they may be easily ruined once they commence to bear fruit.

Reports received here said the engineer, fireman and two mail clerks were killed and three other trainmen were injured.

Reports included no casualities among passengers on the train.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED IN DEATH OF WAITRESS

Found on Roadway

Halifax, Sept. 30.—Apparently the victim of foul play, Mary Thibeault, 21, waitress in a local cafe died in hospital Thursday after she was found unconscious on the street.

Death resulted from a fractured skull and hemorrhage of the brain. She never regained consciousness. Blood was flowing from the ears and nostrils when the unconscious form was found on the sidewalk, after she left the cafe. Her hat and purse were found in a car nearby. The unruffled condition of her clothing tended to dispel a theory she had been struck by a hit-and-run motorist.

BANDIT MASQUERADES AS THEATRE PATRON

HAMILTON, Sept. 30—With six armed policeman standing on guard at the entrance of the Tivoli Theatre at closing time last night an unknown bandit, also armed, entered the lobby as an innocent patron, made his way to the manager's office in the foyer, scooped up $125 from a table, and then proceeded to flee.

He was stopped by the officer as he approached the exit to the street. They grappled, but the gunman floughted his revolver and broke away. The constable fired two shots at the man, but the latter escaped and was last seen climbing into an automobile at Park and Market Streets.

Fingerlings of Kamloops trout, a species of fish which is not indigenous to the Maritime Provinces, were planted in the streams of these provinces for the first this year.

100 IN POSSE MISS ROBBERS

Seven Men Make Getaway With Ten Thousand Dollars

Holland, Mich., Sept. 30.—Seven bank robbers armed with submachine guns twice eluded a posse of 100 men near here Wednesday morning and were reported in full flight through Western Michigan after looting the First State Bank here of between $10,000 and $12,000 and wounding two men.

Surrounded by a posse near Denise as they sped from the scene of the holdup in a commandeered automobile, the bandits held up a truck driven by George Boerman, a farmer, turned the truck crosswise in the highway and opened fire on the posse with sub-machine guns. Members of the posse took refuge behind a farm house and kept up a running fire as the bandits dashed to their automobile and, sped away.

They were pursued by nearly 100 men.

Boerman, who was uninjured when the bandits halted his truck, said one of the men had been wounded and was bleeding freely.

CANCER STUDY BIG PROBLEM

Elaborate System of Record to be Kept in Centres

London, Ont., Sept. 30.—"Cancer research is bigger than the medical profession and bigger than the Government," said Hon. J. M. Robb, Minister of Health for Ontario, in addressing the Ontario Neuro-Psychiatric Association here yesterday night. "If we can bring help to suffering humanity, that is the important thing."

Outlining the conditions under which the Provincial Government will establish cancer clinics in this province, Mr. Robb said the establishment of the clinics or radium institutes would depend on the municipalities entering into agreement with the Government.

"We will demand of each centre that it keep an elaborate system of records that shall be at the command of the Department of Health and also carry out a follow-up system to keep track of the patients that have been treated," the Minister said. He declared his conviction that the medical profession will eventually conquer the dread disease.

NO INCREASE CANCER AMONG YOUNG PEOPLE

New York, Sept. 30.—Cancer is not increasing among young persons in Canada—nor probably elsewhere in the world—according to new statistics issued today by the American Journal of Cancer.

There is a real increase, a big one this report finds, but it is all due to the larger number of persons living beyond 60, whose lives have been saved from other diseases that used to kill them younger. The report is by Dr. Major Greenwood Macklin, M.D., of the Medical School, University of Western Ontario.

Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises,

If you have catarrhal deafness, or head noises, caused by catarrh, or catarrhal colds, you can relieve and cure proper treatment at once. Sprays, douches and inhalers may bring you a temporary relief, but permanent results only come from a constitutional treatment that will expel the catarrhal poison from your system.

Get from your druggist 1 oz. of Parmint, Double Strength. Take this home and add 1-4 pint hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day; clogged nostrils should open, breathing becomes easy, mucous stop dropping. All sufferers from catarrhal deafness or head noises need the simple, pleasant, inexpensive Parmint treatment.

APPLES POUR INTO STORAGE

Twenty Seven Hands Employed at Trenton

TRENTON, Sept. 30.—(Special)—The Trenton Cold Storage Plant under the personal management of Mr. Eben James is one of the finest equipped up-to-the-minute cold storage in the Eastern Apple Area. It is situated on a site convenient to travellers and with a line from both railroads and has a weekly service to Montreal by steamer owning its own dock.

This plant is chiefly devoted to the storage of apples and at the present time apples are pouring in fast and plenty, taking day and night shift, for grading, packing and storing, employing about 27 hands. When the apples are brought in by the farmers, mostly in crates, they are immediately graded by a mechanical grading machine, which, grades, sorts and polishes them in so many manner. They are then packed and guaranteed by expert packers into hampers and barrels to be stored into large rooms with a regular temperature of around 32 degrees, ready for shipping. Two large duplicate engines supply the power for freezing.

This plant is considered a great asset to the fruit growers, of this district.

The Associated Canners Ltd., are operating to full capacity canning almost 100 women and 50 men. Tomatoes chiefly are canned for juice.

Apples will soon be canned here also.

During the small hours this morning a large moving van passed through here came in contact with the Trent Theatre canopy ripping off some 10 or 12 lights. Electricians were busily repairing them today.

WORTHY OF NEW FREEDOM

The United Church report on social conditions notes that there had been little sign of new immoralities which had been so much spoken of as a likely result of the new freedom which has been won by the young people as as a result of the economic conditions which has delayed marriage for many beyond the usual age. The report praises the young for their self-control when so much is left to their trust.

Many a person has affirmed faith in the young people who were not going to the bow-wows, just because some new freedom had been won for them. This meeting of the largest Protestant denomination in Canada has been told that laxity of living has not been increasing, though prophets of dire evils to come have been harping on this one string for several years.

Probably the young may even be able to teach their elders what the new freedom means—an opportunity for greater development of self and of greater co-operation with others. Indeed there are people who see hopeful signs in this period for life that fear freedom of all things for its effect upon their own lives. But that is not what freedom is — freedom is that which will develop, though the dwarfed development of some makes the open highway of life seem freighted down with evil and menaces to morality. Life and freedom really make man freer in the best sense.

It is a good thing to see a church of this prominence come out boldly and make its comment upon things of this present age; if the church does not deal with present day problems among the multitudinous duties, it might as well quit. The church has at heart next to the parents the preservation and development of the best things in life, in the social and moral outlook and the personal devotion and purity as chief interest and this latest finding accordingly ought to ease the troubled minds of many who have been magnifying the evil results without helping to prepare the youth against the dangers which undoubtedly do exist and call for the self-imposed duty of control. This the church says is being exercised by the young men and women, boys and girls of the age.

Reports of criminal courts show also that juvenile delinquency is on the wane due, in part, to the difficult times which makes family life more co-operative and perhaps to the fact that their older brothers and sisters have greater freedom and even the youngsters learn to walk straight in the midst of new opportunity. This is additional proof that what the United Church special committee says is true — that the people know how to ack under the new conditions.

Life is made up of many strands of prosperity and depression, of light and shade, of good and evil but through it all runs a continuity or an evident guidance or control which keeps mankind from extremes. Indeed, there is a greater possibility of the extreme of goodness than the extreme of evil being realized in life. The good cannot be quite extinguished and in the most evil and none claim to have eliminated all the evil in their lives. When the danger or menace appears to be great as humanity takes its own measure and begins to meet these dangers as only humanity can and conquers them. Just as man lives within a narrow limit of heat and cold, and moves on the level but a few feet above the earth so there are bounds to the social life which protect and guide it. The United Church thinks it proves how these laws are working in this age.

COMMENT

Those who have been in cities where there are large municipal flower beds envy these places the security such beds enjoy. In many smaller cities growers of flowers have not only these protections from natural conditions but also the discouragement which comes from the theft, damage and destruction of plants.

Banks seem to be unanimous that there is a better feeling at work, that construction and building are increasing at more than seasonal rate. The words of the men who have their hands upon the pulses of finance may reassure others that the corner has been turned or is being turned.

The old world series is around again, gluing the ears of fans to radio sets and their eyes to the newspapers. An inevitable sign of autumn.

Still the predictions go forward that the winter of 1932-33 is to be warm. Such unanimity probably proves more that people like the thought of warm winters than giving assurance of evidence of mild winter season. People will crave warm weather in the winter so long as they do not get it. Then they would probably turn against it and want snow and cold.

THE SECRET ROOM

By Aline Michaelis

There is in every human heart
A sacred, secret room;
A place safe-hidden, set apart,
Where glowing memories bloom.

And there, when wearied or oppressed
By strife of worldly ways,
We turn to find a sense of rest
In thoughts of other days.

Perhaps we prize them overmuch,
Those hours that ran in rhyme,
Those bye-gone days beyond the touch
Of circumstance or time!

For in this secret, sacred place
We love to muse a while
On those glad hours that held no trace
Of worldliness or guile.

And of its peace some vestige clings
When we return again
To earthly tasks; its echo brings
New faith to life's refrain.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND WOMEN were turned away from a cooking school held in the Royal Alexandria theatre at Toronto one day this week because the theatre was filled to the doors. Can it be that Toronto women have suddenly become kitchen conscious and realize that a good cook is greater than a good golfer, and a champion pastry maker will go further and faster than a champion marathon swimmer? They should open many cooking schools in Toronto now that the desire to achieve fame in the culinary art is so evident among the fair sex of that city—and perhaps, in the not too distant future Toronto may be known, not as "Hogtown" but as "The City of Contented Husbands."

MONDAY WAS HYDRO DAY in Belleville, celebrating the opening of the new quarters of the light and power branch of the city's public utilities. Belleville has owned its own light and power business but a short time, but in that short time has demonstrated that public ownership of public utilities can be made to pay substantial dividends — shown in the fine building acquired by the local Hydro Board of Commissioners, one of the finest fronts on Front St. Back of all the advantages and praise bestowed upon Hydro, present and past, by the big men present, including Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, ex-Premier of Canada, was the memory of Sir Adam Beck who fought for Hydro when it had few supporters, fought for it even against enemies in his own party in the Legislature, fought long years for public ownership of public utilities in Ontario, trying to convince a rejuctant public that the vast power resources of the province belong to the people and should be developed for public profit instead of private profit. Others are now ably carrying the torch that Sir Adam Beck relinquished when called to another world, but every succeeding triumph of public ownership as exemplified in this great public utility has added fresh lustre to the name of the crown of achievement for humanity, of Sir Adam Beck, who placed the province of Ontario in the seat of honor for all the world to admire and imitate, and that a government could enter the realm of public ownership of public utilities without permitting it to be dominated by partisan politics. So, the Hydro building in Belleville is just another monument to the vision and courage of one of Canada's greatest men, Sir Adam Beck.

ONE MILLION BUSHELS OF WHEAT at Churchill on Hudson Bay is now on the high seas bound for England, and wheat trains are arriving at Canada's far northern port at the rate of one a day, unloading into the great elevators there to await shipment overseas. Churchill, a busy port, on the edge of the Arctic region, is now a thriving and growing community. Moosonee, on James Bay, lately occupied by Hudson Bay Company employees, a few Indians and half breeds, now has a fine hotel, and entertained the members of the Ontario Legislature a few days ago. Thus is Canada thrusting back its boundaries, giving the lie to the "land of the stunted pine" farmers, and making "The Barren Lands" blossom like a rose, while the waste places burst forth with the song of happy homes and responsive soil — showing that the land of ice and snow and great glacier barriers can be tamed and made habitable — even to the creation of summer resorts on the shores of Hudson Bay, where the popular fancy peopled the native wearing fur garments all year round and using ice blocks for canoes in August. Canada's northland has long been defamed, mainly by interested parties more interested in profits from pelts than in the fulfilment of Canada's destiny.

INTELLIGENCE QUOTIENT IS UNDER VIEW

Results of Tests Valuable But Nothing is Quite Final

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

The phrase "intelligence quotient" came about with the advent of mental tests, which of course are given in order to test the mentality of an individual.

Now, then, a child of twelve may measure on mental tests only up to the age of six. This would mean that the child is only fifty per cent average or normal. Its intelligence quotient, therefore, would be its mental age and any test divide by its chronological or actual age. In the case cited this would be six over twelve, so the intelligence quotient would equal one-half, or 50 per cent, or 0.5.

If a child of twelve should pass the tests for the years up to its age and then go ahead for a year or two, such a child's intelligence quotient would accordingly be above normal, because the numerator of the fraction would then be greater than the denominator. Such a child would be very precocious.

Although the intelligence quotient—and measuring tests—is usually called the I.Q.—is a valuable indication of the way an immature mind is developing, the patients must bear in mind that such results are not absolutely final. It often happens that a child tested in the course of the years is found to fall below normal, and the parent jumps to the conclusion that the child must be feebleminded. This, however, might not necessarily be true, for every psychologist knows that interpretation of the results is just as important as the actual performing of the tests. Only a person trained in such matters is capable of passing judgment upon the mentality of an individual, no matter what the I.Q. may be.

Sometimes amusing incidents occur when adults are subjected to mental tests actually intended for children. I have known of many instances where the late famous Simon-Simon test, brought into being to test children up to twelve, was put upon school principals and teachers. Very often these adults have fallen down on the tests, so to speak, and for a very good reason. For an adult's mind is not that of a child, nor does it think in similar terms, and it is easy for a child may be very difficult for an adult, and vice versa. For instance, should you try one of your child's tests and find that you fail, you would caution the child to worry about it.

But it is of great advantage in test children frequently, in order to see how they are getting on. Not only is it important to know when a child is falling behind, but it is also essential that we should know when a child is superior to others of its own age.

We must also bear in mind that there are many factors that may influence a child's performance on mental tests. One of the most common is the fact that the child is suffering from some physical disability or from some defective attention. If a child hasn't slept well or is not feeling well we cannot expect it to do well on a test. If a child is suffering from eye strain, adenoids and tonsils, or has some other beast to deal with, we cannot expect it to do its best.

Therefore welcome tests, and any information that will lead you to know what the child's I.Q. is; perhaps even your own. But don't let it alarm you unnecessarily if it should be less than one. There may be a reason for this, and probably is. The thing to do is to find the handicapping cause and to remove it.

Mexico City, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Reports of the most serious floods in 20 years, in which at least seven lives have been lost, came from northern Mexican points today.

Heavy rains have been falling all week, paralyzing railroad traffic. Serious further danger to life was reported from three widely separated points, Durango, Monterrey and the City of Chihuahua.

But one person was known to be dead at Neuljula, State of Hidalgo, and one death was reported from Monterrey. Thousands of cattle and other livestock perished, but no complete estimate of property damage could be made.

Car with Victim Suffers Crash

Toronto, Sept. 30—Four people were injured last night in two auto mobile accidents, the second occurring while the victim of the first was being rushed to hospital.

Mrs. Reynolds and Mrs. Everett were struck by a car near his residence and had his leg fractured and was unconscious from head injuries. The driver of the car that struck Mrs. Reynolds was driving to hospital with the boy's father, James Norris, and the running board of Everett struck Bride and police constable Robert Bentley.

At an intersection they crossed Bloomfield and the signal was rammed by another car, which sent Norris, McBride and Rattersby hurtling to the pavement.

James Norris suffered head injuries, McBride had his ankle fractured and Rattersby a minor knee injury. The boy and the driver of the car escaped injury.

Ontario's Prosperity Depends on YOU

BELIEVING that Prosperity, like Charity, should begin at home, the Department of Agriculture of Ontario has marshalled all the organized forces of this great province in an earnest, practical endeavour to make Prosperity a real actual fact.

Ontario has an agricultural wealth of 2,227,684,000 dollars—a stupendous sum, far exceeding that of any other province in Canada. This colossal investment represents the keystone of Ontario's arch of Prosperity.

You can help to put it back in place by purchasing more of Ontario's Farm Produce.

During the week of October 11th to 22nd, the Stores, Hotels, Restaurants, Churches, Schools, and every other organized body in the province, will cooperate with the Ontario Department of Agriculture in one grand effort to stimulate the purchase and consumption of Ontario's fine farm products.

No campaign of this nature can be a success without the hearty, sincere support of each individual. No matter how small your purchase of Ontario Farm Products may be, it really is valuable . . . an extra apple . . . another vegetable . . . a little more cheese . . . each small additional purchase of Ontario's Farm Produce means something truly gigantic when it is duplicated by Ontario's 754,733 families.

A prosperous Ontario means more buildings, more freight, more travel, more clothing . . . more and better paid employment for all.

Ontario's prosperity is your prosperity and you are the only one who can definitely assure it.

Gomez Holds Cubs in Check with Southpaw Cubs Too Tense to Win

Gomez as Loose, Pliable And Cutting as Black-snake Whip

A COMEBACK!

Root and Gingras Will Work Upon Batters on Saturday

By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Ex Route to Chicago with Other Scribes, Sept. 30—The World Series of 1932 rolled westward today, bound for Chicago and the third game between the Yankees and the Cubs there Saturday, and the sudden end of baseball's classic engagement as well, unless the Bruins do something drastic immediately about a serious situation indeed.

As the battle scene shifted from the Yankee Stadium to Wrigley Field, from the American League hunting ground to the stronghold of the National League, the Yankees had showed away their 10th World Series victory, a record no other club in the history of baseball can challenge.

Today as the two teams steamed westward on separate trains, the Yankees had captured the first two games of the current warfare to the eight straight victories they have won over the Pirates of 1927 and the Cardinals of 1928.

Pitching Made Game Easy.

They belted Guy Bush, Burleigh Grimes and Bob Smith when his opponent rynx to win a dreary opener, 12 to 6 and yesterday, still making a minimum of effort do a maximum of work, they clubbed away at young Lon Warneke, the tall, spare Arkansas farmer boy, and took a brilliant, exciting duel, 8 to 2.

Desperate for a victory that could have created a new issue before the struggle moved on to the home grounds where an exhilarated fans tion and the natural inspiration of familiar surroundings might give the Nide, Charley Grimm and his warriors threw every resource back of the lanky youngster who was ranked the best pitcher in the National League this season.

The Bruin manager lifted Mark Koenig, veteran of past World Series' triumphs with the Yankees from his newly won post at shortstop because the former infield mate of Tony Lazzeri had obtained his leverwrist. He dropped Bill Jurges into to Koenig's place, and supplanted Johnny Moore in center field with Frank Demaree, a right-handed hitter, on the laws of baseball say, should have better luck than a southpaw swinger and most left-handed pitching.

Pitcher Used.

He did all these things. He started the best pitcher he has, as far as records go, and his strategy worked: Young Demaree knocked in one of the two Bruin runs. A brilliant afield though he failed to his assist, figured in three double plays. Warneke pitched a courageous, studious, sometimes spectacular ball game.

And still Manager Grimm and his Cubs rolled through the outlands today, two games down in the easiest for the world championship, facing the task of winning four of the next five games, considered one of baseball's absolute impossibilities. Never in the history of seven game series has a team come back to win the title after losing the first two engagements.

Only once, in fact back in the days of nine-game series, did a team turn that trick. The Giants in 1921 walloped the Yanks in eight games after suffering abutout defeats in the first two.

Always the Same Story.

Facing the task of winning four of the next five games, considered one of baseball's absolute impossibilities. Never in the history of seven game series has a team come back to win the title after losing the first two engagements.

Only once, in fact back in the days of nine-game series, did a team turn that trick. The Giants in 1921 walloped the Yanks in eight games after suffering abutout defeats in the first two.

Always the same story. Sterling laying in wait for every Sterling weakness of Warneke, was that figure of the all-powerful Yankee golfer, the greatest hitting club in baseball, the menace of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Earle Combs, and the rest.

Trying Too Hard.

"Bases on balls," said Grimm today, as he summed up the situation. "That's the thing that has licked us so far. We're trying too hard. We're too tense in the pinches."

Against the Cub background of regret there showed today even more brilliantly the consummate, the masterly pitching of another young-ster, 21-year-old Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, left-handed Spaniard from California.

He was as loose in yesterday's pinches, as pliable and cutting as a black snake whip.

Carrying on the effectiveness of Charley Ruffing, who fanned ten with his fireball in the murk of the dull first game, the slender Gomez, lillian, who chews on $1,200 worth of bridge work, bought by the Yankee bunigans offlce, set eight of the Bruins down on strikes. He allowed but eight hits, two of them doubles by Bill Herman and Riggs Stephenson, and one a triple by Kiki Cuyler, that amounted to boiling with two on in the fifth.

The two doubles led to the only Cub runs.

The battle resumes in Chicago Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Grimm today named Charles (Root Root) Bachelor pitcher Saturday. Pigeras will probably work for the Yankees.

YANKEES IN MERRY MOOD

Series Not So One Sided as Many Think Says McCarthy

(By ALAN GOULD)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Enroute to Chicago with Yankees Special, Sept. 30—Rolling along the shores of Lake Erie today, manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees said though it was an early season swing into the west, the Yankees spun a string of victories in their ability to make it four straight over the Cubs and a world championship.

Yankees Have Edge.

"We're two up and two to go," remarked the eminent golfer. Babe Ruth's absence has had a shaker off most be the effects of his recent illness and a bout due to increase his world series output of home runs.

"Unless the Cubs are tougher on their home grounds than they have been so far, we ought to clean this series quick," added the Yankee slugger.

The big Yankee party, accompanied by baseball commissioner Landis, numbered only one outstanding fellow who did not seem so confident the American League champions would continue to have things their own way, through their own efforts or the generosity of the Cubs. He was Lefty Gomez, who thy,the manager, who admits he takes the left handed writers and both Kegu'n's shoulders to the mat. likes it that way.

"Title don't seem so one-sided as a lot of you fellows think," demurred McCarthy. "One long hit for the Cubs and the early stages of a game might have changed the whole complexion of things. They are a good ball club.

Tough Combination.

"We've looked good because Ruffing and Gomez gave us the pitching and we hit in the pinches. That's a tough combination to beat.

"Just take Ben Chapman for an example for the way our team has been doing the right thing in the right spot. With the bases full in the first game, Chapman raced

Last night the members of the Victoria met at the Y.M.C.A. dietary and derive ways and means wherein they could make the trip to Barrie. (The Vics are broke.) According to their management all they need is some $60.00 to see them through.

With a team advanced thus far in the play-downs it would be a shame to see them have to drop out now. After considerable thought in this line the boys managed to get the promise of three cars to help them along. Cecil "Cec" Rewsome, Jack Allin and Leo Baker are the names of the three car owners who have promised to help the Vics on the trip. The other car will leave early in the morning with the rest of the club. We are of the opinion that the Vics will be able to finance the trip O.K. and by this time tomorrow we will know the silting result of the third and final game of the intermediate semi-final, the winner to meet Southampton in the provincial finals.

If Archie Campbell is at all right the Vics should score some "with the bacon". Yesterday the Pirate management wired Manager Fabian Campbell to get a pitch into the scene of battle to Orillia. The Pirate management sent a telegram and wired back "nothing doing". Considering that the Pirates were here they took exception to any suggestion that they be loaded up to where they would play the third game. They wanted Barrie and so Barrie it is. Maybe the Pirates are not any too well liked in Barrie. At any rate—there's a nigger in the wood pile some place."

Coach Les Shiels takes his junior and senior football squads to Whitby tomorrow where they meet the Napanee gridders. Shiels has selected a couple of new faces to last Saturday's senior team and expects to add a few more. The players are not over their injuries of last Saturday as yet. They will trot out on the same pace but the same, we understand.

Again the "big guns" of the Yankees have been doing a "rest" and the cry heard in the Yankee dressing room is "more concern than." Lefty Gomez came in for a bit of applause from the Cub dressing room following the game. Manager Charley Grimm asserted that Gomez was far superior to Mesea "Lefty" Grove, even in his palmy days. The teams are idle today, but resume baseball-ties tomorrow at the Windy City.

Twelve hundred people can't be wrong.

The Belleville Arena saw its largest wrestling crowd on Thursday night. The patronage saw the best card of the year, to say the least. We advocated the appearance of Dr. Ralph Wilson in a Belleville ring once again. After last night's card we are of the unbiased opinion, that Wilson is the most colorful "grappler" ever to appear at the Arena. Ira Hicock "carried" Jack Kogut for their 30 minute bout. The "Doc" has forgotten more about the business than Jack Kogut will ever know. Time and time again Jack Kogut's pet holds and then he'd wriggle out. Ira Hicock had all the Wilson and both Kegu'n's shoulders to the mat. Wilson would take the count easy-ing, afar off, into space. A match with Wilson and a good opponent would draw the box.

In the second bout Nazarino Pegi was far too rough, dirty and experienced for Frankie Hart. After about thirty minutes of punishment Hart called to referee Jack Kogut to stop the bout. Previous to this Pegi must have advised Hart as Referee Kogut stopped Pegi on the back, indicating that he had won. The boys kept right on battling though. We'd like to see Pegi in the first game. Chapman raced

There are many fans who are quite dubious as to whether the Masked Marvel is the same man who wrestled Earl Leavey—and at the Fair or not? Arguments both pro and con relating to the identity of the be-masked 'grappler' were heard continuously about the arena during his match. About the most comical incident of the night came in the final bout when Dr. Ralph MacDougall beat the Masked Marvel. MacDougall, after about two minutes of wrestling, managed to pull the marvel's Mask around on the side of his head so that he was partially blinded. Then Scotty gave him the "works." The Marvel made quick work of Scotty for the second fall with MacDougall surprised his most ardent admirers when he won the third and decisive fall with a body slam. Evidently he had been studying "peanut". The Marvel did a little too much clowning at times, but another bout has been promised the fans in the near future.

We understand that Bobby Samson has returned to Toledo, O. If so, we hope that Rod Larocque steps into the shoes left vacant by Samson. Rod has made many friends locally and would do well as Jack Corcoran's representative in this section. While building up the game locally Rod worked out daily in front of hundreds of local citizens who have accepted him today as an adepted son of the city. The wrestling game has advanced by leaps and bounds, in Belleville this season and Larocque was responsible for most of the work done in this district. We know of no better successor to Samson, who was Jack Corcoran's right hand man and promoter here, than the amicable Frenchman.

GOLF

Falmouth, Mass., Sept. 30 (CP) — The gallant lad Ada MacKenzie is making to take the United States Golf Championship to Canada as a companion piece to the title she recently won by the silent Sandy Somerville, faced a formidable test today.

But Miss MacKenzie was able to smooth the sort of golf that won her many Canadian championships when she played Maureen Orcutt, the New Jersey star, Thursday when she put Maureen out by a 2 and 1 margin. The same sort of par-clouting display she showed then in tight corners would make Glenna stretch her seasoned opponent to the utmost to stay even.

In the other semi-final young Charlotte, Claudius of Short Hills, N.J., who trimmed Enid Wilson, British champion, yesterday matching strokes and strategy with Virginia Van Wie, long hitting Chicagoan.

Best Card Presented at Arena Thursday Night

One week ago, when arrangements were being made to stage a wrestling match in Belleville, Promoter Jack Corcoran, of the Queensbury Athletic Club, Toronto, promised fans of this district the best card yet put on. Last night that show was staged at the Belleville Arena before an estimated crowd of between twelve and fifteen hundred people. Over one-quarter of that number were ladies.

That crowd of yelling, rabid fans, whose desire for blood and victory could have been heard half way across the town, witnessed two separate battles last night. They saw Scotty MacDougall win handily over that silver chap, the large dark gentleman who goes under the alliterative appellation of the Masked Marvel, and hides his identity behind a silk mask. They saw him take two falls from the Marvel in 31 minutes for the first one, and later when they had rested the ring for the third bout, after the marvel had gone out in ten minutes before, they saw Scotty take another fall from him in just 30 seconds. Previously the Marvel had been likewise. Both were popular endings for the Scotsman who made the Marvel and his manager very indeed over the ring.

Of slight concern to the slender maid is the location of the belt. She may wear her earrings under her arms, at the smallest line of her torso where it is supposed to be or halfway between hips and chest, it's all the same to her since beneath the gown is the perfect shape of slim dimensions. An advertising method in the Salutary Way, poor plump dears, are made or unmade saturarily by the fashion judges. When the waist line is sub-normal, dieting can go hang itself with a rope. Fat gals can take their chocolate creams to bed with them, sleep the sleep of contentment.

That narrow belt, pulled in snugly around the natural waistline, has survived now for three years and it is time somebody handed it its hat and asked it please not to come again. Judging by the new gowns Paris, a few of its sponsors have been fighting to retain it. In the skinny slimp wants it she can have it. Style dictators for some years are by-words throughout the fashionable world have fallen into a state of argument and dissension, with the result that some of them are offering models with the lifted line, while others have given the belt a downward shove. And that last whimsy is going to be a lucky break for the fat duckies.

The fly in the ointment is the sleeve puffed from shoulder to elbow, which is figure wrecker. There'll be no arm balloons worn by heavyweights. They learned long ago that there are dress dangers.

garments too snugly fitted, garments that are bonfiuent. What they want are long, slinky flowing dress models, a waistline not too definite.

Stout-hearted store girls will take the problem by the horns, throw it for a ball. Dress worries melt away along with fat. Those lovely frocks, the very ones that make the tender maid look like a willowy reed for the normal figure. In the long run, it's worth the effort to reduce measurements that necessarily force the buyer to direct her footsteps toward extra large sizes. Even though ample garments may carry fetching qualities, nearly always they must be altered, since fat does not spread itself evenly upon the fehinine anatomy but, with mean persistence, settles in spots.

Exercises that make abdominal muscles work are the ones that draw in the waistline, whittle down the hips, dislodge adipose tissues from their lodging. Here's a simple form of reducing, not the kind that will cause one to weep or groan from excessive muscle strain: sit on the floor with legs extended, feet four inches apart. Place your face on your knees, touch toes with finger tips. And while doing it give a hard yank on the muscles of the abdomen. Five times, rest, repeat.

In the matter of diet there is no need of falling into a state of semi-starvation, feeling low, losing pep. Merely cut down on those foods that contact fat cells; eat freely of all others.

Pats, starches and sweets are enemies of the svelte figure. It isn't

Perfume Ethics Are Not Complicated

Chemists who specialize in fior-ested odors, which are now offered at less fabulous prices than good-ness, have worked out any number of systems of perfume philosophy. Credit them with a right mind. Putting their ideas into practice is something else again. For instance the decision of the bright mind that says a woman should have one perfume for morning, another for after-noon, a third one for evening. That's making life a bit intricate. Busy girls would make the morning allotment work all day.

There's no need of putting up alias es talks to women about perfumes. Women love 'em. They'll buy them if their have an extra penny from their own grocery budgets; Perfumes are the last, most exquisite luxuries. There are, perhaps, a million dollars even if the teller at the bank has just told you that you've overdrawn your account. They're exhilarating and you can pour little pink toes!

Suppliants for charm and beauty have been told that there are certain scents for blondes, others for brunettes, others for redheads. It is suggested that perfumes should have a feeling of friendship for colors and clothes. You must carry a woody aroma on the golf links and veil, a sweet, mysterymous aura at the festive evening party. Sort of hair-splitting, isn't it?

Sounds fastidious and elegant. But the average woman of sound judgment will throw all this lovely beauty fiction into the discard. Her nose will dictate. What it likes, she'll use. At all times, with all frocks.

Finding a congenial perfumer one that is brushed in joyously by the wise to discontinue them entirely, but take them sparingly. Live mainly on lean meats, fish, fowl, vegetables that grow above ground, green salad. Substitute toasted rye bread for white bread. Use no tea and coffee clear.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

From twenty to thirty isn't a long step. At thirty the radiance of youth clings, leans on light shadows. The modelling of the skin isn't quite so firm, so resilient. If the girl of twenty would be kind to the woman of thirty that she's going to be, she will pay strict regard to the laws of health. She will eat wisely, get exercise out of doors every day, have ten hours of restful sleep. Unfortunately she will coddle her glorious complexion unnecessarily, indulge in soothing creams, lotion her hands, imagine the pink skin quality of her finger nails.

It's not only the tissue cream that battles facial lines, but the manner in which the emollient is applied. The round-and-round motion of finger tips, easy and natural, folds up the flesh, won't do at all. Safer, more refreshing is the quick hammering or slapping that makes the glow, starts circulation, the galloping, tones inner fibres. After a massage, it is advisable to rub the complexion with an ice cube.

As lan of summer fades and the winter works back to normal coloring, lighten the dark powder by adding a small quantity of white. It is as classtrom to look to use a powder that is too dark as it is pin faith to wear a hat that is light. This business of matching the tones of natural flesh is a delicate business, requiring the artist eye and the discrimination of an artist.

Ankles thick? Place hands on hips and run standing still, bringing knees high. Do this briskly, with the energy that can be commanded. Run slowly, it's a waste of time, there is a hard muscle pull. Jumping a rope is an ankle slimmer, so is running upstairs on the toes. These calisthenic rites are equally famous for reducing calves that have fattened.

"Discard the long fluffy bob, no matter how much it becomes you," I refer to it as the youthful note. It doesn't quite suit the new dress idea, nor does it lend itself in a kindly manner to automatic chaperon. Everything continues, long locks have no meaning.

Quite a lot is going to be seen of black velvet this season. Autumn is the Autumn. A typical costume is of black velvet, the embroidered velvet for both skirt and jacket, the short sleeved bodice using white satin. Cuffs, collar and vest and a section in the front of the skirt are softly shirred.

Check up and you'll find that ever so many women are planning to buy brown velvet, especially for trimming. A typical model is fashioned of brown wool and has a very surface weave, with a capeshawl collar and puffed elbow cuffs of tortoise shell velvet.

Why not make a set for a wedding gown? A particularly beautiful one is made of dull white velvet with leg o'mutton sleeves, tight bodice with shirring and a deep cuff-ing trim. White velvet flowers are used instead of orange blossoms and the long veil is edged all around with tiny white velvet roses.

Take a note, if you are a business girl, of a grand new bag that helps you to take notes. Closed it is a smart handbag in soleil felt with a distinctive monogram, and it is fitted with pencil and mirror. When the flap is flipped open there is a cleverly concealed memorandum pad and pencil, all ready for notes.

smart afternoon wear is a slip-on of back kid with very fine lattice work in black and white kid marking the fabric in broken green, black and orange check. There is a sweater and muffler of pale green lace stitch woolen.

Build up the neckline and sohave smartness even with a frock that is no more new. With your black crepe frocks you can wear a tucked capelet of white plaze in wide tiered tucks and it is fastened by a button at the high collar.

Different methods of achieving the wide shoulder are being shown just now. Thus a dinner frock of royal blue transparent velvet has a built-up shoulder and short sleeves made of silver sequins mounted on a stiffened foundation.

The game of follow-my-leader is being played this season, following the acceptance of the higher neckline. An engaging cape of black marlain for has a twisted round collar of the same fabric to the throat. Its fastening is in back and it has a three-tiered effect.

Beauty at home means a lovely hostess gown or negligee. A new and lovely model is done in pale pink heavy sheer crepe with insets of lace. A pale grey lace which would the figure and outline a pantie train. The draped sleeves have fullness.

It doesn't matter what the season, there is always a market for knitted suits. An attractive new Autumn model is done in a heavy knitted fabric in broken green, black and orange check. There is a sweater and muffler of pale green lace stitch woolen.

CRACKELS are entirely different from anything you have ever seen or tasted. NEW in LOOKS: : : little golden brown pillows so light they float on top of milk or cream: NEW in TASTE: : : a delicious "oven-blended" flavour no other cereal has ever had. NEW in CRISPNESS: : : the last tiny Crackel in the dish as crisp as the first.
And what nourishment! The choicest parts of different grains, blended in one supremely nutritious cereal:
Children just love Crackels. Fathers say they never tasted anything so crunchy. And mothers welcome Crackels as an efficient ally to tempt children to take more milk and cream.
Serve Crackels at breakfast, or any other meal. It's great, too, for the evening snack. Between meals, give Crackels in handfuls right from the box. Children like them better than popcorn or nuts, and they're so wholesome and good for them.
Order a few packages of this different cereal today. It's economical—twelve big helpings in every package.

POPE PIUS XI ISSUES ENCYCLICAL ON MEXICO

'Formal Cooperation' by Rome with Mexico but Principles Not Renounced

Catholics Submit to Unjust Law Against Their Will

POPE'S DECREE

Catholics Must do All They Can to Diminish Unhappy Effects

Rome, Sept. 30 (AP)—Pope Pius XI, next what he called the new and "legal persecution" of the church and Catholics in Mexico today with an encyclical announcing a policy of "formal co-operation" with the renouncing principles of the slightest degree or withdrawing past decisions.

Instead, he renewed his protest directed particularly at the newly limiting application of the laws limiting the number of priests in each state to from one for each 23,000 people to one for each 100,000.

"To approve an iniquitous law, or to give it spontaneously a certain kind of approval, is to act "is undoubtedly forbidden and sacrilegious; but absolutely different is the case of him who submits himself to such an unjust law and scripture only against his will and protest and who does all he can to diminish the unhappy effects of the unhappy law."

Will Ask Permission

Under this plan of formal co-operation, the Pontiff counsels the priests to ask the Mexican government for permission to exercise their ministry.

This course, he said "is therefore not much different from that of the man who having been robbed of his possessions, sees himself forced to ask the unjust despoiler to grant him the use of some of his possessions".

The Pontiff charged the Mexican government with "acting against the spirit in which Christ Vicendi was conducted" in 1929.

Likened to Russia

He likened the Mexican situation to that of Russia. After summing up a long series of alleged persecutions in Mexico, he said:

"We wanted to sum up briefly the principal points on the grave situation of the church in Mexico so all those who love order and the peace of people, seeing that such unheard of persecution, especially in some states, is not much different from that which burst upon the unhappy regions of Russia, may draw from this evil the coincidence of the intentions of the new inspiration to dam up the flood, overthrowing every social order."

Urging the priests to swallow their pride and continue requesting the privilege of performing their duties, the Pontiff reminded them of the example of the early Christians. Scripture relates, he said, that the priests of that day requested permission to visit the early martyrs in the prisons, even offering money for the privilege in order to administer the sacraments.

SHORT CIRCUIT IN CAR CAUSES FIRE

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 30— Fire breaking out from a short circuit in an automobile stored on the second floor of the building today gutted the quarters of the Ford Motor Sales and Service and damaged an adjoining structure which housed the Murray Tire Service. Damage was estimated at $70,000.

Ten old and two new cars were destroyed besides a large quantity of tires and accessories.

The automobile sales building is owned by Noble Duff and the tire shop by Frank Murray.

WOULD HAVE PROVINCE SET TRUCK RATES

President Says Other Methods Lead to Confusion

Toronto, Sept. 29—W. H. Male, president of the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario addressed the opinion that the basic rates for highway transport motor vehicles should be established by provincial authority rather than by filing of schedules by individual companies which schedules would be allowed or disallowed by the board.

"As a result of the various conferences between the Department of Highways, the truck operators, and interests, representing shippers and others, we have urged the minister to follow the same procedure in the case of buses, that is, allow the operators to file schedules of rates," reported Mr. Male.

"This is practicable with buses," he continued, "because, almost without exception, there is only one bus line operating on each route. But between Toronto and Hamilton, for instance, there are from fifteen to twenty public commercial vehicle operators. If each files a schedule, there will be fifteen or twenty different rates with which the department will have to deal.

"We might in our association come to some sort of an agreement on the rates for non-competitive routes, but I see no chance of the association being able to speak for all of its members on this matter, much less for the operators who are not members."

The truck association already has filed with the department a classification of goods subject to the various rates. Along with this has gone a suggested schedule of rates which, roughly are the rail rates with a surcharge for goods carried by trucks distances over 125 miles.

"We do not suggest that any rate schedules filed by the department shall be as changeless as the laws of the Medes and Persians," added Mr. Male. "There should be a procedure which will permit a truck operator to reduce his rate on short notice to meet a competitive situation where transportation method and method it should be possible to revise rates on short after due notice. Competing truck owners, competing railways has been the rule. Both sides should have the privilege of modification of their classifications. the department should be able to investigate any change proposed to determine the justice of new rates after a public hearing and other investigation.

Mr. Male admitted that the present classification proved very complicated but argued that the trucking industry has been shown that it is not feasible to delete the present variety of classifications.

PRIZES WON BY BOWLERS HELD UP AT BORDER

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Sept 30 —Webster was wrong in his definition of the word "Trophy" according to Canadian Customs Officers at Niagara Falls, and last night two rinks of Port Colborne Lawn Bowlers failed to obtain the prizes they went to Buffalo to win.

The rinks skipped by Dr. H. B. Rickard and Harold O. Peck, drew windbreakers and electric toasters as the prizes for their efforts in turn, they declared them as trophies. Customs Officials "Trophy" in a dictionary where they found it meant "the symbol or memorial of victory" customs officials were obdurate. Rather than pay the heavy duty, the victorious bowlers left their "trophies" with the Customs as a "memorial" that the officials had won the debate.

60 Million Years Pass And Hawk is Unchanged Like Prehistoric Grandpa

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The skull of a bird whose family might well have invented the slogan "what was good enough for Grandpa is good enough for me" was added today to the story of evolution by the Smithsonian Institution.

The skull, which belongs to the hawk family, reveals that these birds were real conservatives in the process of evolution. The skull is 60,000,000 years old, but shows that in all that time hawks have changed very little.

A skull and a lower jaw of the same type of bird were brought to their final roosting place at the Smithsonian by Charles W. Gilmore after a summer of fossil-hunting in Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming.

No Sign of New Immoralities Among Youth in Economic Stress

Young Canadians Bear Selves Well Says United Church

MARRIAGE DELAYED

Hamilton, Sept. 30—Young Canadians received a tribute and a warning in the report of the "Marriage and Responsibilities of Christian Marriage" submitted to the General Council of the United Church yesterday by the Board of Evangelism and Social Service.

"There is no economic conditions have led to the postponement of marriage for most people far beyond the age at which it was common a century ago. This means that at a time when some fundamental impulses and desires are most urgent, the Christian life calls for a reinforced discipline. The church is thankful for the steadiness of the great body of her young people in this new situation and finds small indication of new immoralities or such as are sometimes lightly inferred from a new freedom of conversation."

The warning: "Love and comradeship between young people of different sexes are sanctioned today under circumstances which allow greater freedom and call for more self-direction than in other days. Physical intimacy is of many degrees and should correspond to varying degrees of spiritual intimacy and emotional intensity. To cheapen gestures and acts which express the most sacred personal unity by adopting them in cases of casual acquaintanceship is to impoverish the language of the spirit and to vulgarize the higher experiences of human life."

MEN BLOWN TO PIECES WHEN CAR BLOWS UP

Believed to Have Been on Death Dealing Mission

POLICE VIEW

Four Persons Injured as Blast Rocks Neighborhood

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 29 — Two men, who police said they believed were on a death-dealing mission, were killed early today in the result of an explosion in their parked automobile in West Scranton.

Detectives tentatively identified them as Alfred Balint, 30 and Rinaldo Augustinelli, about the same age, both of Jessup, Pa., near here.

The explosion caused considerable damage in the neighborhood and injured four persons.

Parts of the bodies of the two men were found half a block from where the car had been parked.

The force of the blast tore the small coupe apart, broke windows in nearby houses, cutting three sleeping persons slightly. A fourth man who was passing by was thrown bodily in its garage at the time also was cut by flying glass from his windshield.

DEMOLITION OF OLD ANGLO

Work to Begin in Earnest on Monday Morning

Demolition of the new vacant buildings in the block on Front street, being taken over by the S. R. Kresge Company, who will rebuild into a modern five and ten store, will commence Monday morning. Already one or two men are stripping some of the interior parts of the building in the upper flats.

Preliminary steps being taken by Mr. J. Jacobs engineer in charge of construction, will be the erection of boarding along the block on Front street as a protection for pedestrians and adjoining property.

Though it would have facilitated matters to have erected the barricades today, as a gesture toward the "depression", the contractors' men's placement has been deferred until Monday.

Out of the dozens of men they employed a week ago, there remains only a few for start will be taken on, these being the ones whose name is list on which they had previously registered.

CALL OF NEEDY FOR CLOTHING

Cooler Weather Already is Bringing Seasonal Duties

Already the coming of colder weather brings with it the need for additional clothing for the needy of the city. The shelves of the relief office at the city hall are bare after a busy summer in which officers of the relief department and citizens in general, have done their best to respond to the demand. Now they need replenishing, for as steady line of mothers seeking clothing for their children, and the wedding clothing so that they may at least be able to be ready for it should a job materialize, still have to be turned away empty-handed unless more clothing is forthcoming from those who are more fortunately able to do so than the relief department is.

Anything is suitable.

Clothing for little children so that they may be able to attend school is needed urgently, "Anything that is cast off by a truck at once, or parcels may be left at the city hall.

HUGE BOMB FOUND

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 30—Carlos Miguel de Cespedes, leader of the Opposition to President Machado in the Cuban House of Representatives, asked for passports yesterday following the outburst of political violence on Tuesday, which resulted in the assassination of one Government man and the wounding of another.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou Brookman

CHAPTER 1

The green roadster coming its way, and ribbons like, down the boulevard came to an abrupt, jolting stop in front of Trefling's Twenty-fourth street.

Cherry Dixon's chin rose to meet the sweep of the cold wind. Plutenty-ninth of a coral scarf escaped from her throat to do a mad dance over one shoulder. It was one of those days in early April when brilliant sunshine showered down on the world without warning it. The pale gold radiance seemed almost to make the air more biting. But it was spring sunshine, spring air and the combination was irresistible.

Cherry crooked her wrist for a quick glance at a watch dial. One-fifty-five. She was to meet Ben for 30 minutes. There was plenty of time—for a coral scarf secured

FIFTEEN PER CENT GROWS ... Monke...

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1932

JUNGLE CODE"

By Charles B. Feldman

Two men strode along a jungle path, a path that made the only break in an unbroken wall of subterranean growth, together by jungle creepers. Creepers that had perfectly matched the color of the broad trunks of the jungle giants, to conform the latticework above as equally impenetrable mass.

Two men of entirely different character. It would have been hard to find, neither, in different circumstances, would have sought the other for a companion, but this had decreed it. The fiery chief of Scott's safari that had been attacked by the fuzzy, little, native black warriors, should be thrown together in flight. Without guides they knew not which direction to take. Long weary hours they stumbled along the old elephant path, pausing only occasionally to eat of the fruits that came across, and which did little to assuage the pangs of hunger. Then, at last, they found it and tackled and that bodes even ill, located from pushing their way through the dense growth and coming upon the trail.

Of his two, John Scott was visibly the better man. The contrast between the big, powerful frame and rare sullen face of Jeff Lorens was indeed marked. Where one bore the indications of a strength evidently and uncomplaining the other, or standing alone, would in no way made matters more unbearable.

As the sun reached the zenith both, both stopped short. One of the giant trees, long dead, had finally rotted at the base and a sudden gust of wind struck its top, had crashed to the earth. As it fallen, tree was not what had stopped them. Entwined everywhere by the falling tree, a large ape was planted to the ground in such a manner that, despite its great strength, equal to that of several men, it was unable to turn and bite the dead weight.

When the ape sighted the men, it gave voice to several pitious cries that very plainly called for help. Scott turned to his companion.

"Help me free this poor beast, will you?"

Lorens gave a sneering laugh. "Help free a ape that'll turn right around and croak us? Not me, brother!

He started forward but Scott in a restraining hand on his shoulder.

"Have a heart, Lorens," he pleaded. "we can't leave him like this."

With a muttered oath Lorens shook off his hand, picked up a fallen branch and hurled it at the helpless ape. The animal gave a scream of rage and pain as the branch struck a hairy shoulder. Then, with a defiant sneer, the man clambered over the tree and walked on down the trail, leaving Scott standing there with eyes compressed anger.

When Lorens had disappeared around a bend of the trail, Scott walked over to the ape who now eyed him suspiciously, but not unfriendly. Scott planted his feet firmly and grasped the tree by the two stout branches, then exerting all his strength he succeeded in lifting it a fraction of an inch. The ape feeling the lessened weight, squirmed to his back and seized the tree in his powerful hands. Scott gave another tug, and their combined efforts lifted the tree. The ape was not slow to take advantage of his freedom, and scrambled unhurt from under what had nearly become his funeral.

Scott picked up his hand on gave a sigh of relief as the ape ran to his former position at his rescuer. Then with a grunt, the ape turned and leaped to a large tree, leaped to a low hanging branch and with a wild, weird glance swung into the leafy depths of the jungle.

Scott turned and saw to his surprise that Lorens had returned to within fifty yards of the fallen tree, and was watching him with a dark scowl on his face. He had not suspected to see the ill natured fellow again, but would be have. Instead, any fears if he had not returned, but a coward at heart, Lorens had little stomach to brave thru danger infested jungled alone.

After a few taunting remarks about the gratitude of a "d—ape," and some muttered oaths which waited line, to which Scott made no reply, they walked on in silence.

After several hours of steady walking, they struggled in a narrower path, which cut directly across the elephant trail they had been following. It was necessary to walk single file here, Lorens leading their pace so as to reach the next water before dark, as the shadows were already long. Suddenly Lorens, who was the foremost, stopped short with a startled oath. Scott saw that characteristic swinging walk of the monkeys, immediately in front of an ape, and both men recognized it as the one Scott had freed. It seemed to be in a terrible rage, jabbering to grasp Scott around the waist with a long arm. Scott pulled the trigger. A metallic click was the only result. The ape, throwing Scott over a broad shoulder as easily as Scott would have thrown a child, leaped into the low hanging branches of a nearby tree. Lorens started to move to go to his aid, laughed as Scott cried out for help, and then as the ape and his burden disappeared in the dense foliage, Lorens shouted cruelly after them, taunting and jeering Scott with incoherent nonsense punctuated with curses. Then chuckling and mumbling to himself he turned and continued on down the path.

The ape carried Scott about forty feet up the tree, and then set him carefully down on a crotch formed by several boughs. The man closed his eyes and waited for the fatal blow as the grotesque beast lifted a hairy arm. Instead of the expected blow he felt a gentle pat on his shoulder. He opened his eyes and to his amazement beheld the ape, with an assimilation of a look of anxiety on his countenance, patting him gently. Scott was puzzled. If the creature meant him no harm, why—

His thoughts were abruptly interrupted by the sharp crack of a pistol in the direction he had been taken by Lorens. Then the ferocious roar of an ape. Shot thundered out, and the piercing shriek of terror, that followed, a shriek from a human throat, was choked off abruptly.

The man in the tree shuddered and the cold perspiration stood out in beads on his forehead. He understood now. The lion waiting in ambush, the shot, the cut, and stroked the shaggy coat of the beast beside him.

Curiosity Overcomes Fright

When curiosity has use
There is for it's real excuse.

—Old Mother Nature

Peter Rabbit has been badly scared many, many times but never has he had a worse fright than when what he supposed was a small log just in front of him in a thicket in the Green Forest without warning sprang up on four long legs. Then Peter had been sitting there a long time without the slightest idea that there was any one else here. There hadn't been the least movement to attract his attention. So far as he knew he was absolutely alone. Then Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer had entered that thicket and the little log that came to life right under Peter's nose. He had turned a backsomersault in his fright and started to get away and had taken to his long heels and darted out of that thicket and into another.

He didn't run far. Discovered that no one was chasing him he stopped. He sat up to look and listen. He could see just the head of Mrs. Lightfoot above the bushes of the other thicket. Now and then it disappeared as if she was interested in something below hidden by the bushes. It was quite clear to Peter that she was not. The least disturbed. Whatever had given her such frightened him had failed to frighten her. Then Mrs. Lightfoot, Mrs. Lightfoot is a timid person, easily startled.

Peter began to feel a wee bit foolish. Had he run without cause? Why, what had he to be afraid of, anyway?

"It was that little log I was sitting back of," muttered Peter. "Whoever heard of a log jumping up on four legs? No one ever did. Yet that one did it. If that isn't enough to give any one a fright, I don't know what is. But it didn't scare Mrs. Lightfoot and she must have seen it, too. Why didn't it scare her? I wonder. If she knows this way I'll ask her."

But Mrs. Lightfoot seemed quite those babies of yours," confessed satisfied to remain right where she was and as Mrs. Peter's curiosity became too great for him to sit still any longer, Peter, stopping every two steps or so to look and listen, he heard certain soft sounds that made him more curious than ever. At last he reached an old stump. Cautiously he peered around it. And then his eyes stretched open as wide as they could and his mouth gaped open also. A more silly-looking Peter you never have seen. There stood Mrs. Lightfoot nursing two of the prettiest babies in all the Green Forest.

"Oh!" exclaimed Peter.

Mrs. Lightfoot looked over at him. "Was that you who ran away a little while ago?" she asked.

"Yes," admitted Peter reluctantly. "Did I frighten you?" asked Mrs. Lightfoot.

"No-o," replied Peter slowly. "It was—" He stopped.

"What was it? I didn't see anything to be afraid of," said Mrs. Lightfoot.

Peter looked quite as foolish as he felt. "I guess it was one of

FIFTEEN PER CENT GROWTH CHEESE TRADE

J. Irwin, Cheese Grader, Gives Reasons For Development

EAT MORE CHEESE

Cheese Has Meant Cash And Farmers Welcome it

Hastings County cheese, the delight of the epicure, and the despondent starchy of the laboring man who has been taught to include that necessary food as a staple portion of his daily diet, has staged a comeback this season, which is gratifying to residents and those connected with the dairying business throughout the whole district.

Unofficial figures which have been given by Mr. James Irwin, Belleville cheese grader for this district placed the increase of this season's shipments of cheese at about 15 per cent. over that of last year.

A steady upbrend of the whole dairying business has been noticed throughout, with expectations that the season will see an even greater advance in the near future, and of much by-products. Stimulated by the fact that dairying is once again becoming recognized as one of the major industries of this section, many farmers are taking a greater interest than ever in the making of cheese and butter and the sale of their cream and milk to the factories.

"What makes this increase during the present season?" Mr. Irwin was asked. "Is it because of better prices for cheese, or have new export markets been opened up?"

Cheese Meets Cash

"The year many farmers of the district found themselves handicapped in their efforts to dispose of surplus field and vegetable crops, many of them needed the cash. It was natural, therefore, as nearly all of these had dairy cattle to dispose of their milk and cream to the factories. In turn they received cash. The factories made more cheese, quantity reduced the price a little, and more cheese was shipped. Even though the farmer got less for his milk and cream, he got the cash which was badly needed," explained Mr. Irwin.

Do you expect next year's production to surpass that of this year?

That would be a hard question to answer, even with increased export shipments more interest will be shown especially in the British markets, and a greater demand will ensue. In a few years, Canada may again take her place in this important export business."

MARKET BOARD TO HELP FARM

Hon. Robert Weir Sees U. S. Immigrants in Canadian West

CLINTON, Ont., Sept. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—Beginning a series of four meetings in South Huron in the interests of this year's Rader, Conservative Standard Bearer, Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, spoke to a large audience here last night, reviewed the efforts of his department to aid the farmers, expressed a hope that the marketing board would become an actuality next year, and that the next century would see a migration from the United Kingdom peopling the vacant lands of Canada.

He would be greatly surprised, the minister said, if the Imperial Economic Conference did not result in bringing immense benefits to Canadian farmers. He defended the Conservative party's whole Conference agreements to the forefront in the election campaign on the ground that the people of South Huron should be interested in farming, and all the clauses relating to agriculture had been made public.

BISHOP NUMBERED AMONG CREDITORS

Winnipeg, Sept. 30.—Liabilities of the defunct Scottish firm of McMurchy & Sharpe to all creditors are placed at $1,646,000 by the Royal Trust Company, official custodian. The company made public a list of creditors in the case, dated Friday, October 6. All creditors must file proof of claim before that date.

The largest liability is to the University of Manitoba, whose claim is $601,178. John A. MacKay, K.C., head of the firm, now serving a seven-year term for theft, was Honorary Bursar and Chairman of the Board of Governors of the university.

Total claims of the Church of England aggregate $619,976, but these do not include sundry funds held by the firm for St. John's College.

The list is a lengthy one, and includes several creditors in Toronto and in Scotland. England. Among those are Right Rev. Bishop J. R. Cross of Toronto, $3,552, and Miss Lucas, $2,000. Most Rev. S. P. Matheson of Winnipeg, former Archbishop of Rupert's Land and Primate of All Canada, has claims totalling $99,421.

Monkey Business Makes Pier Unsafe Place for U. S. Sailors

New York, Sept. 30.—At first it was a game and remained a fine time, but the situation on Pier 90, North River, has reached a point where longshoremen go about their work mumbling and muttering. Hurrying officials pass suddenly to gaze dreamily into the dark heights of the pier.

Last week the captain of an American vessel came ashore after his vessel had tied up. As he walked down the gangway he saw a group of sailors talk and peer down the dock into the night. A few longshoremen joined them and suddenly the group dashed off excitedly, disappearing behind a pile of cases.

In a few seconds they came back, racing down the pier, occasionally pausing to look up into the rafters and then rush away sixty again, crying "Daily Ho" and such things.

The captain, a veteran of many years, rubbing his chin thoughtfully, and soon the sailors and longshoremen walked along calmly again, sheepishly going about their tasks. Presently a monkey hurried from the pier and sought a psychoanalyst.

The monkey was from the steamship City of Delhi came into New York from Far East, she brought a cargo of Indian monkeys and one

It Isn't a Kangaroo Court, Lad Who Had Said So Tells P. M.

London, Sept. 30—Gordon Bloomfield, Parkhill youth, hastily repented after telling High Constable Wharton that his county court was a "blankety, blank, blank, kangaroo court." Brought back before Magistrate F. T. Eagle, Bloomfield admitted that it was not a kangaroo court and said he was sorry.

Together with Albert Masters of Parkhill, the youth was charged with being drunk, and was fined $10 and costs, with the option of spending 30 days in jail. When the court,

"Aren't you going to give me any chance to say something for myself?" This is my first offence, and I don't see why I should get 30 days."

"You pleaded guilty to the charge and besides, don't get so excited," replied Mr. Eagle, Magistrate Eagle rebuked Bloomfield.

High Constable Wharton led the pair from the court room and downstairs. A moment later was heard Wharton appeared leading Bloomfield back.

"Now, tell the magistrate what you said about the court," the officer ordered.

Bloomfield hung his head, so did Wharton. They informed the court what last the youth had attached to it. "I'm sorry," he said, "I mean the court."

Young Bloomfield said, Judge he had said was a kangaroo court. The magistrate smiled again and he was sorry, but reduced the fine which amounted to nearly $17, rather than take the youth home, his companion, Masters, went to jail.

GALAXY OF STARS IN "GRAND" HOTEL AT BELLE THEATRE

Following sensational runs in New York City and other principal cities, "Grand Hotel" will open tomorrow at the long-awaited and much discussed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stage production. "Grand Hotel" will open for days' engagement at the Belle commencing Saturday, as the most important film talky event in years.

The world premiere of "Grand Hotel" at the Empire Theatre in New York was marked by the largest public advance sale of tickets in the history of the theatre and its subsequent run has established new hundreds of cities throughout the country. Here it is to be a tremendous box office sensation wherever screened, breaking theatre records and establishing new advance sale records. It is the most outstanding achievement of the motion picture industry outdoing even such great successes of the silent era, as "Ben Hur" and "The Big Parade."

Five Principal Roles

Based on the Vicki Baum play, which ran for more than a year at the National Theatre in New York, "Grand Hotel" brings to the screen the most astounding galaxy of stars ever assembled in one picture. Each of the five principal roles is filled by outstanding screen star. The exotic Greta Garbo plays the unforgettable Grusinskaya, who lives on the reputation of her audiences and is ready to die when they no longer applaud. John Barrymore plays the dashing Russian nobleman, those love for the dancer prevents him from handling their.

Joan Crawford is cast as the seductive stenographer who will go to any length to get whatever she is worth to the industrial magnate, portrayed by Wallace Beery. And Lionel Barrymore plays the terminally ill bookkeeper, Kringelein, who, broken in health, spends his last few dollars to have his last days in the splendor of the Grand Hotel. Lewis Stone and Jean Hersholt head the supporting cast which also includes Robert Montgomery, Purnell Pratt, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Rafaela Ottiano, Tully Marshall, Frank Conroy, Murray Kinnell and Rafaela Maxwell.

Drawn Into Yarter

The lives of these seven different characters are drawn together in the vortex of the fashionable Berlin hotel and the result is a fascinating dramatic panorama in which love, hate, greed, murder, lust, comedy and tragedy all play a part. What happens to one on an exciting night in this hotel has its effect on each of the others, although some of them never meet, their lives are fantastically intertwined. It is probably the most unique plot ever used for a screen production.

Cheraller Leaves Tonight

Maurice Chevalier's latest starring picture, "Love Me Tonight," closes its run at the Belle tonight. The film has Jeanette MacDonald, Chevalier's favourite lead of previous productions, with a supporting cast headed by Charles Ruggles, Myrna Loy, Robert Cochran and Myrna Loy.

A gorgeous Fashion Revue will be presented on the Belle stage tonight at 8.30. The Revue will be under the direction of Mme. Hale Miller, noted stylist.

OPPORTUNITY WIDER IN DEACONESS ORDER

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 30.—Opportunity for service in the United Church has a greater opportunity than ever before for ladies to be elected to the Deaconess order, Winnifred Thomas, secretary of the Deaconess Board Committee on women workers of the General Council of the United Church here yesterday.

The Board was raising standards and instituted a one year training school at Toronto and the Women's Missionary Society of the United Colleges, in Winnipeg, said Miss Thomas. In addition to the demand for highly qualified workers, university graduates, nurses and teachers were enrolled at the Toronto School.

TON ROCK SHIFTED AS AUTOMOBILE BUMPS

Cannington, Sept. 30—While he was driving to Montreal to visit relatives, a car owned by Jack Reynolds, 21, of Toronto, skidded on the slippery highway about 5 miles east of this town Thursday afternoon. The car struck a rock weighing about one ton and moved it ten inches. It then skidded another twenty-two feet and the car was wrecked, and a brother of the driver, William Reynolds, of Toronto, suffered injuries. Dr. Lochead of Sandowne was called to the scene, but the pupils of the Public School removed to the Kingston Hospital, Sandowne. The latter suffered from cuts on the head and an injured hip.

WORKERS WILL DEMAND RIDES

Western Harvest Help is Ready If Ejected From Freights

Calgary, Sept. 30—Police officers in Western Canada are faced with a hectic time this fall if the declarations from harvest hands in Alberta mean anything.

Hundreds of transients last week deserted wheat fields in an effort to obtain rides on freight trains to their homes before the ban on this mode of travel goes into effect today.

Others, however, declare they will remain in the harvest fields until the work is ended, then flood the highways, demanding free passage from any motorist if they are ejected from the freight trains.

The men claim they have too little money, due to low wages, to buy transportation, and are determined to get free transportation homeward in some manner. A large number of them arrived in Calgary yesterday, dependent on the work field before completion of their jobs prepared to take possession of the train, highways and any motorists to carry them as passengers to their destinations.

"HELL'S ANGELS" IS GREAT AIR EPIC—FULL OF THRILLS

Today marks the return of "Hell's Angels" at the Capitol for two days.

Those who saw the first presentation of the air will remember the countless thrills this picture gives the witness the marvelous flying spectacle with the great struggle for mastery in many places.

Ben Lyon and James Hall do some remarkable work in "Hell's Angels" and Jean Harlow adds the touch interest.

"Hell's Angels" will be shown daily at 2.45, 7.00 and 9.15.

Double Bill

On the same programme Jack Mulhall appears in "Passport to Paradise."

Jack imbues his characters, whether they be the hardest boiled, or sappy in the extreme, with a delightful nonchalant mannerism that offsets a too gruesome scene, lightens a heavy dramatic moment, or balances what might verge on slapstick comedy.

In "Passport to Paradise," Mulhall plays the spendthrift son of an irascible millionaire father. Papa throws him out, telling him to make his own way in life before his return.

In making his way, Mulhall runs into plenty of trouble, but finally emerges with a bankroll and a royal wife.

"Passport to Paradise" will be shown twice daily, 11.30 and 7.30. Special Gift

Each lady attending the evening performances today and Saturday at the Capitol will receive a beautiful Wedgewood Richelieu bon bon. This article of dinnerware is extra to the six special engagements on Mondays and cannot be obtained after Saturday. - Advice! BE EARLY.

PIKE STOLEN BY BEAR NEW FISH VERSION

Elk Lake, Sept. 30—A new alibi for the big fish that got away has been produced by C. Dr. Hamish Hailsybury angler, who reported on his return from a trip to Hen-Gelandia Lake that a ten-pound pike he had hooked had been stolen by a bear. The fish, after being taken from the water, had been put under a tree temporarily, and in the turning it was gone. A commotion had been heard by members of the party, who included James Tacy and Colin Commerville but no attention was paid at the time, and after daylight bear tracks were in the vicinity of the camp told the story.

TWO THEFTS BY SAME MAN AT SAME TIME

He called a taxi, told the driver to go out on unfrequented road. There he produced a sawed-off shotgun, forced the driver to hand over money and ordered him out of the car.

Using the stolen vehicle he then went to a Yonge street restaurant and asked for cigarettes. While the clerk was turned to the cash register he revolver was again produced. The clerk ordered to step back while the bandit rifled the till of $30.

The robber then backed out the door and sped away in the stolen car.

Non-Going Church Members Gigantic Problem of Church

Tribulations as of This Age to be Expected Says Dr. Oliver

ERRORS IN WEST

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 30 —Evangelization of non-church going members of the United Church of Canada was the task facing the General Council of the church, the Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, Toronto, chosen sixth Moderator of the Church at Wednesday night's session, met the announcements of the election with a challenge to the commissioners "to bring into active fellowship the half million Canadians who gave their denomination as the last census as United Church but who are not enrolled in congregations. Prayer that the church might be guided in its campaign was voiced by the Rev. Dr. Moore as he began yesterday's meeting with his invocation on behalf of church and council.

With the vigorous assertion that "tribulations and trouble would dissolve before Christian faith and fellowship, Rev. H. Lloyd Moore, Saskatoon, brought to an end his term of office as Moderator of the General Council, United Church of Canada, here.

Ultimate Victory

Both in his sermon before the opening session of the Fifth General Council in the Central United Church and in his address at the evening meeting, the retiring Moderator declared that the tribulation of the past two years was but a prelude to the ultimate victory.

"After all, their sufferings have had their day, after this and that sovereignty has endured for a season; after empire and commonwealths have declined and fallen, the Church of Christ still remains," he said the Moderator, "the ultimate victory is that of the crucified."

Thanking his hearers for the "magnificent courtesy" which they had made to his call for courage during difficult times, Dr. Oliver exhorted them to remember his text, "in the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world."

Poor Planning

Before conducting the election of his successor, Rev. Dr. Oliver, reviewed briefly his career in office. He declared that "little planning and little seamanship" had persisted in the church's work in the Canadian frontier at far too fast a rate. The frontier had advanced, not in a scientific manner, but at the dictation of "unourbed children."

Settlers had been allowed to go into districts where no provision of any kind had been extended "to pile up an unpaying debt," he declared.

As a result there was more money on the western frontier than ever before. He was not blaming governments for present difficulties, said Dr. Oliver, "they have done as much as they could." He appealed for a voluntary effort to "prevent demoralization and to keep Christian manhood from bleeding to death."

Ultimate Victory

Peace is the dream of the wise—war is the history of man.

SEES SIGN OF BETTERMENT

Manufacturers Find Evidence of Early Results

Toronto, Sept. 30.—A detailed report on the Imperial Economic Conference submitted to the executive council of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was approved yesterday by the council meeting here.

"Members of the association may," says a statement issued after the meeting, "are awaiting with interest the publication of rates of duty and other specific items of the agreements reached at the conference in order that they may ascertain their trade with the countries concerned.

"Already some encouraging results have been obtained and it is expected that this additional business will be continued and increased," the statement adds.

The report of the Industrial Relations committee notes a slight improvement in some branches of industry for the month of September, but cautions, however, has issued an appeal to its members to distribute available work among as many employees as possible to alleviate unemployment conditions.

The association also favors raised land settlement as a means of combatting unemployment and for those unable to get work it advocates a carefully controlled and administered direct relief programme.

The Republican "Elephant" made its first appearance in Harper's Weekly (1856) in a cartoon drawn by Thomas Nast.
